

INTRODUCTION

TO

THE PROPHET

ZECHARIAH.

ZECHARIAH entered on his prophetic office, two months after Haggai's first prophecy. He was still a youth, when God called him^a, and so, since in the second year of Darius Hystaspis 18 years had elapsed from the first of Cyrus, he must have been brought in infancy from Babylon. His father Berechiah probably died young, since, in Ezra, the prophet is called after his grandfather, Zechariah the son of Iddo^b. He succeeded his grandfather in the office of the priests, the chief of the fathers, (of which there were twelve) in the days of Joiakim the son of Joshua, the High priest^c. Since then, while he prophesied together with Haggai, Joshua was still high-priest, and it is Joshua whom he sees in his vision in that same year^d, he must have entered on his prophetic office before he succeeded to that other dignity. Yet neither is there any reason to think that he ever laid it aside, since we hear not of any prophet, called by God, who did abandon it. Rather, like Jeremiah, he exercised both; called to the priesthood by the birth given to him by God, called to the prophetic office by Divine inspiration.

Like Jeremiah, Zechariah was called in early youth to the prophetic office. The same designation, by which Jeremiah at first excused himself as unfit for the office, is given to Zechariah, youth^e. The term does not indeed mark any definite age; for Joseph, when he was so designated ' by the chief butler, was 28^f; Benjamin and Absalom had sons of their own^g. They were probably so called as terms of affection, the one by his brother Judah^h, the other by David his fatherⁱ. But his grandfather Iddo was still in the discharge of his office. The length of his ministry is equally unknown. Two years after his first entrance upon it^j, when Haggai's office was closed, he was bidden to answer from God those who enquired whether, now that they were freed from the captivity, they should keep the national fasts which they had instituted on occasion of some of the mournful events which had ushered it in. His remaining prophecies bear no date. The belief, that he lived and prophesied to old age, may have a true foundation, though to us unknown. We only know that he survived the high priest, Joshua, since his own accession to his office of head of the priests, in his division, was in the days of Joiakim, the son of Joshua.

His book opens with a very simple touching call to those returned from the captivity, linking himself on to the former prophets, but contrasting the transitoriness of all human things, those who prophesied and those to whom they prophesied, with the abidingness of the word of God. It consists of four parts, differing in outward character, yet with a remarkable unity of purpose and end. All begin with a foreground subsequent to the captivity; all reach on to a further end;

Pharaoh's servants was given two years before. (Ib. 1.)

^a Benjamin had 10 sons when Jacob went down into Egypt (Gen. xlv. 21); Absalom's 3 sons (2 Sam. xiv. 27.) were dead (Ib. xviii. 18). Absalom was David's third son. (2 Sam. iii. 3.) ^b Gen. xliii. 8. xlv. 22, 30, 33. ^c 2 Sam. xviii. 6, 12, 29, 32. ^d vii. 1.

the two first to the coming of our Lord; the third from the deliverance of the house then built, during the invasion of Alexander, and from the victories of the Maccabees, to the rejection of the true Shepherd and the curse upon the false; the last, which is connected with the third by its title, reaches from a future repentance for the death of Christ to the final conversion of the Jews and Gentiles.

The outward difference, that the first prophecy is in visions; the second, a response to an enquiry made of him; the two last in free delivery, obviously did not depend upon the prophet. The occasion also of the two first bodies of prophecy involved that they were written in prose. For the imagery was borne on the prophet's mind in visions. The office of the prophet was only to record them and the explanations given to him of parts of them, which could only be done in prose. He was so far like the Apostles, who enquired of our Lord, when in the flesh, the meaning of His parables. There is, as in the later chapters, abundance of imagery; and it may have pleased God to adapt the form of His revelation to the imaginative mind of the young prophet who was to receive it. But the visions are, as the name implies, pictures which the prophet sees, and which he describes. Even a rationalist writer saw this. "Every vision must form a picture, and the description of a vision must have the appearance of being read from a picture. It follows from the nature of the description of a vision, that for the most part it cannot be composed in any elevated language. The simplest prose is the best vehicle for a relation (and such is the description of a vision), and elaborate ornament of language were foreign to it. The beauty, greatness, elevation of a vision, as described, must lie in the conception, or in the symmetry, or wondrous boldness in the grouping of the images. Is the whole group, piece by piece, in all its parts, to the most minute shading, faithful and described with the character of truth, the exhibition of the vision in words is perfect."

The four portions were probably of different dates, as they stand in order in the prophet's book, as indeed the second is dated two years later than the first^a. For in the first part God's people are exhorted to come from

Babylon^c, which command, many in the time of Ezra, obeyed, and doubtless individuals subsequently, when a prosperous polity was restored; in the latter part, Babylon is mentioned no more; only in one place, in the imagery of earlier prophets, the future gathering of God's people is symbolized under the previous deliverance from West and East, Egypt and Assyria^d.

But they agree in this, that the foreground is no longer, as in the former prophets, deliverance from Babylon. In the first part, the reference to the vision of the four empires in Daniel removes the promise of the Deliverer to the fourth Empire. For the series of visions having closed with the vision of the four chariots, there follows at once the symbolic act of placing the crown or crowns on the head of the high priest and the promise of the Messiah, Who should be king and priest^e. In the later part the enemies spoken of are in one place the Greeks^f, subsequent to the protection of the temple under Alexander^g; in another the final gathering of all nations against Jerusalem^h, which Joel also places at the end of all thingsⁱ, after the outpouring of the Spirit, as it was outpoured on the day of Pentecost.

In both parts alike, there is no mention of any king or of any earthly ruler; in both, the ruler to come is the Messiah. In both, the division of the two kingdoms is gone. The house of Israel and house of Judah are united, not divided^j; they had been distinct wholes, now they are in interests as one. Zechariah promises a future to both collectively, as did Jeremiah^k long after the captivity of Israel, and Ezekiel promised that they should both again be one in the hand of God^l. The brotherhood between Judah and Israel still existed, after they had weighed the thirty pieces of silver for the Good Shepherd. The captivity, in God's Providence, ended at once the kingdom of Israel and the religious schism, the object of which was to maintain the kingdom. Even before the captivity, ^{divers of Asher and Manasseh and Zebulun humbled themselves; and came to Jerusalem, to the passover of Hezekiah; nay, a great multitude of the people from Ephraim and Manasseh, Issachar and Zebulun, who had neglected or despised the first invitation^m, came subsequently. In the great passover of Josiah, we hearⁿ of all Judah and Israel that were} present. The edict of Cyrus related to the people of the Lord God of heaven, and was published throughout all his kingdom, which included the cities of the Medes, whither Israel had been removed. The sacred history is confined to Jerusalem, whence the Gospel was to go forth; yet even the sons of Belhel, the centre of the rival, idolatrous worship, which was among the mountains of Ephraim, were among those of the people of Israel who returned with Zerubbabel. It is inconceivable that, as the material prosperity of Palestine returned, even many of the ten tribes should not have returned to their country. But place was no condition of the unity of the Church. Those who returned recognized the religious oneness of all the twelve tribes, wherever dispersed. At the dedication of the house of God, they offered a sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. At that passover were present, not only the children of Israel which had come again out of the captivity, but, all such as had separated themselves unto them from the defilements of the people of the land, to seek the Lord God of Israel, i. e., Israelites, who had been defiled by the heathen idolatries. The house of David^a is mentioned; for of his seed according to the flesh Messiah was to be born, but it is his house, not any earthly ruler in it.

In both parts alike, Zechariah connects his prophecies with the former prophets, the fulfillment of whose warnings he impressed upon his people in his opening exhortation to them¹, and in his answer to the question about keeping the fasts² which related to the destruction of the city and temple. In the first part, the title "the Branch" is used as a proper name, recalling the title of the Messiah in Isaiah and Jeremiah, the Branch of the Lord³, a righteous Branch⁴, a Branch of righteousness⁵, whom God would raise up to David. The prophecy of the mutual exhortation of peoples and cities to worship at Jerusalem⁶ is an echo of those of Isaiah and Micah, prolonging them. The prophecy of the four chariots⁷, the symbol of those world-empires, would be unintelligible without the visions in Daniel which it presupposes. The union of the offices of priest and king in the Messiah is a renewal of the promise through David⁸. In the last chapters, the continuousness of the prophet's diction admits still more of this interweaving of the former prophecies, and these alike from the earlier and later prophets. The censure of Tyre for its boast of its wisdom is a renewal of that of Ezekiel⁹; the prophecy against the Philistine cities, of that of Zephaniah¹⁰; the remarkable prediction that, when the king should come to Zion, chariots and horses, not of the enemy but of Judah should be cut off, is renewed from Micah¹¹; the extent of his peaceful kingdom is from a psalm of Solomon¹²; the loosing of the exile from the pit, and God's rendering double unto them, are in Isaiah¹³. The description of the sifting, in which, two parts having been cut off, even the remaining third should be anew tried and cleansed, is condensed from Ezekiel, so that, shall be cut off, shall expire, correspond to the natural and violent deaths, by famine and by the sword, spoken of in Ezekiel. The words, I have said, it is My people, and it will say, the Lord my God, are almost verbally from Hosea, I say to not-my-people, thou art My people, and it will say, my God; only omitting the allusion to the significant name of the prophet's son. "The first part of xiv. 10, the whole land shall be turned as a plain from Gebah to Rimmon, and Jerusalem shall be exalted, reminds of Isaiah and Ezekiel; the latter part, it shall be inhabited in her place from the tower of Hananeel to the king's vine-presses, and men shall dwell in it and there shall be no more utter desolation, but Jerusalem shall dwell securely, reminds of Jeremiah, The city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner; it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more. The words, and every one that is left of all the nations shall go up to worship the king, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles, reminds of Isaiah, From new-moon to his new-moon, and from sabbath to his sabbath shall all flesh come to worship before Me, saith the Lord. v. 17-19 are an expansion of Isaiah lx. 12; v. 20 expresses the thought of Ez. xliii. 13: the prophecy, there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord for ever, refers back to Ezekiel¹⁴. The symbolizing of the Gospel by the life-giving waters which should flow forth from Jerusalem, originally in Joel iii. 18, is a miniature of the full picture in Ezekiel¹⁵. The promise, and I will cut off the names of the idols from the land and they shall be no more remembered, in part verbally agrees with that of Hosea, "And I will remove the names of the Baalim from her mouth, and they shall be no more remembered by their names;" only, since the Baal-worship was destroyed by the captivity, the more general name of idols is substituted.

Equally, in descriptions not prophetic, the symbolizing of the wicked by the title of the goats, *I punished the goats*¹, is renewed from Ezekiel; I judge between flock and flock, between the rams and the he-goats. The description of the shepherds who destroyed their flocks retains from Jeremiah the characteristic expression, and hold themselves not guilty. The minuteness of the enumeration of their neglects and cruelties is the same (amid differences of the words whereby it is expressed): "²the perishing shall he not visit, those astray shall he not seek, and the broken shall he not heal; the sound shall he not nurture, and the flesh of the fat shall he eat and their claws he shall split. In Ezekiel, "³Ye eat the fat and clothe you with the wool; the fat ye slay; the flock ye feed not; the diseased have ye not healed; and the broken have ye not bound, and the wandering have ye not sought." The imagery of Obadiah, that Israel should be a flame amidst corn to consume it, is retained; the name of Edom is dropped, for the prophecy relates to a larger gathering of enemies. Zechariah has, "⁴In that day I will make the governors of Judah like a hearth of fire among wood and like a lamp of fire in a sheaf of corn, and they shall eat on the right hand and on the left all nations round about." Obadiah; "The house of Jacob shall be fire and the house of Jacob a flame, and the house of Esau stubble, and it shall kindle on them and shall eat them." Even so slight an expression as *the pride of Jordan*⁵, as designating the cane-brake around it, is peculiar to Jeremiah⁶.

Zechariah is eminently an Evangelic prophet, as much as Isaiah, and equally in both portions.

"But what is much more remarkable, is the fact that there are only about 125 words common to L'Allegro and Il Penseroso; only about 140 common to Lycidas and Il Penseroso; only about 61 common to all three. That is; Milton must have used for Il Penseroso 450 words not in L'Allegro, and for Lycidas 590 not in L'Allegro. He must have used for

The use of different words in unlike subjects is a necessary consequence of that unlikeness. In contrast with that pseudo-criticism, which counts up the unlike words in different chapters of a prophet, the different words used by the same modern poet have been counted¹. A finer perception will see the correspondence of a style, when the rhythm, subject, words, are different. No one familiar with English poetry could doubt that "the Bard," and "the Elegy in a country Churchyard," however different in subject and style and words, were by the same hand, judging alone from the labored selection of the epithets, however different. Yet there is not one characteristic word or idiom which occurs in both. But the recurrence of the same or like words or idioms, if unusual elsewhere, is a subordinate indication of sameness of authorship.

They are thus enumerated by the writers who have answered the attacks on the authorship of Zechariah.

"Common to both parts are the idioms, from him who goeth and from him who returneth, which do not occur elsewhere²; the whole Jewish people are throughout designated as "the house of Israel and the house of Judah," or "the house of Judah and the house of Joseph," or "Judah Israel and Jerusalem" or "Ephraim and Jerusalem," or "Judah and Ephraim," or "Judah and Israel." There is in both parts the appeal to future knowledge of God's doings to be obtained by experience³; in both, internal discord is directly attributed to God, Whose Providence permits it⁴; in both the prophet promises God's gifts of the produce of the earth⁵; in both he bids Jerusalem burst out for joy; in the first, "⁶for lo, God says, I come and will dwell in the midst of thee; in the second, ⁷behold thy King cometh unto thee.

The purity of language is alike in both parts of the book. No one Syriasm occurs in Lycidas some 585 words not in Il Penseroso, and more than 600 not occurring in both together. Also, there must be in L'Allegro some 325 words not in Il Penseroso, and 315 not in Lycidas; and there must be in Il Penseroso nearly 440 words not in Lycidas.

Again, Tennyson's Lotos-Eaters contains about 590 words; Enone has about 720. Thus the latter must contain 130 words not in the former; but a comparison shows that there are only about 230 words common to the two poems. That is, there must be 490 words in Enone which are not in the Lotos-Eaters, and there must be in the Lotos-Eaters about 360 words not occurring in Enone; that is,—the shorter poem has 360 words which the longer one does not contain."

the earlier chapters^c. The prophet, who returned as a child to Judaea, formed his language upon that of the older prophets.

In both there is a certain fullness of language, produced by dwelling on the same thought or word^d: in both, the whole and its parts are, for emphasis, mentioned together^e. In both parts, as a consequence of this fullness, there occurs the division of the verse into five sections, contrary to the usual rule of Hebrew parallelism.

This rhythm will appear more vividly in instances^f:

"^a And he shall build the temple of the Lord;
And he shall bear majesty;
And he shall sit and rule on his throne;
And he shall be a priest on his throne;
And a counsel of peace shall be between them both.

^b Ashkelon shall see, and shall fear; (Gaza, and shall tremble exceedingly;
And Ekron, and ashamed is her expectation;
And perished hath a king from Gaza,
And Ashkelon shall not be inhabited.

^c And I will take away his blood from his mouth,
And his abominations from between his teeth:
And he too shall be left to our God,
And he shall be as a governor in Judah,
And Ekron as a Jebusite.

"^d In that day, saith the Lord,
I will smite every horse with astonishment,
And his rider with madness;
And upon the house of Judah I will open my eyes,
And every horse of the nations I will smite with blindness."

With one considerable exception¹, those who would sever the six last chapters from Zechariah, are now at one in placing them before the captivity. Yet Zechariah here too speaks of the captivity as past. Adopting the imagery of Isaiah, who foretells the delivery from the captivity as an opening of a prison, he says, in the name of God, "^a By the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water." Again, "^a The Lord of hosts hath visited His flock, the house of Judah. I will have mercy upon them [Judah and Joseph] and they shall be as though I had not cast them off." The mention of the mourning of all the families that remain^a implies a previous carrying away. Yet more; Zechariah took his imagery of the future restoration of Jerusalem, from its condition in his own time. "^p It shall be lifted up and inhabited in its place from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner-gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's winepresses." "The gate of Benjamin" is doubtless "the gate of Ephraim," since the road to Ephraim lay through Benjamin; but the gate of Ephraim existed in Nehemiah's time⁴, yet was not then repaired, as neither was the tower of Hananeel⁵, having been left, doubtless, at the destruction of Jerusalem, being useless for defence, when the wall was broken down. So "^a at the second invasion the Romans left the three impregnable towers, of Hippicus, Phasaelus, and Mariamme, as monuments of the greatness of the city which they had destroyed. Benjamin's gate, the corner gate, the tower of Hananeel, were still standing; "the king's winepresses" were naturally uninjured, since there was no use in injuring them; but the first gate was destroyed, since not itself, but the place of it is mentioned.

The prophecy of the victory over the Greeks fits in with times when Assyria or Chaldaea were no longer the instruments of God in the chastisement of His people. The notion that the prophet incited the few Hebrew slaves, sold into Greece, to rebel against Botcher (Lehrbuch n. 437. g. 498. 3. p. 304.) regards the as emphatic. 2) "That מְהִלִּים (iii. 7.) comes from a קִהְלָה is self-evident." their masters, is so absurd, that one wonders that any one could have ventured to forge it and put it upon a Hebrew prophet¹.

Since, moreover, all now, who sever the six last chapters from the preceding, also divide these six into two halves, the evidence that the six chapters are from one author is a separate ground against their theory. Yet not only are they connected by the imagery of the people as the flock of God², whom God committed to the hand of the Good Shepherd³, and on their rejecting Him, gave them over to an evil shepherd⁴; but the Good Shepherd is One with God⁵. The poor of the flock, who would hold to the Shepherd, are designated by a corresponding word⁶.

A writer has been at pains to shew that two different conditions of things are foretold in the two prophecies. Granted. The first, we believe, has its foreground in the deliverance during the conquests of Alexander, and under the Maccabees, and leads on to the rejection of the true Shepherd and God's visitation on the false. The later relates to a later repentance and later visitation of God, in part yet future. By what law is a prophet bound down to speak of one future only?

For those who criticize the prophets, resolve all prophecy into mere "anticipation" of what might, or might not be, denying to them all certain knowledge of any future, it is but speaking plainly, when they imagine the author of the three last chapters to have "anticipated" that God would interpose miraculously to deliver Jerusalem, then, when it was destroyed. It would have been in direct contradiction to Jeremiah, who for 39 years in one unbroken dirge predicted the evil which should come upon Jerusalem. The prophecy, had it preceded the destruction of Jerusalem, could not have been earlier than the reign of the wretched Jehoiakim, since the mourning for the death of Josiah is spoken of as a proverbial sorrow of the past. This invented prophet then would have been one of the false prophets, who contradicted Jeremiah, prophesying good, while Jeremiah prophesied evil; who encouraged Zedekiah in his perjury, the punishment whereof Ezekiel solemnly denounced⁷, prophesying his captivity in Babylon as its penalty; he would have been one of those, of whom Jeremiah said, that they spake lies⁸ in the name of the Lord. It was not "anticipation" on either side. It was the statement of those who spoke more certainly than we could say, "the sun will rise to-morrow." They were the direct contradictories of one another. The false prophets said, "the Lord hath said, Ye shall have peace;" the true, "ye have said, Peace, peace, when there is no peace:" the false said, "a sword and famine shall not be in the land;" the true, "a sword and famine shall their prophets be consumed;" the false said, "ye shall not serve the king of Babylon;" thus saith the Lord, even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years;" the true, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, My servant, and all nations shall serve him, and his son and his son's son." The false said, "I will bring again to this place Jeconiah, with all the captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon;" the true, "I will cast thee out and the mother that bare thee, into another country, where ye were not born, and there ye shall die. But to the land, wherunto they desire to return, thither they shall not return." The false said; "The vessels of the Lord's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon;" the true, "the residue of the vessels that remain in this city,—they shall be carried to Babylon."

If the writer of the three last chapters had lived just before the destruction of Jerusalem in those last reigns, he would have been a political fanatic, one of those who, by encouraging rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, brought on the destruction of the city, and, in the name of God, told lies against God. "That which is most peculiar in this prophet," says one⁹, "is the uncommon high and pious hope of the deliverance of Jerusalem and Judah, notwithstanding all visible greatest dangers and threatenings. At a time when Jeremiah, in the walls of the capital, already despairs of any possibility of a successful resistance to the Chaldees and exhorts to tranquillity, this prophet still looks all these dangers straight in the face with swelling spirit and divine confidence, holds, with unbowed spirit, firm to the like promises of older prophets, as Is. c. 29, and anticipates that, from that very moment when the blind fury of the destroyers would discharge itself on the sanctuary, a wondrous might would crush them in pieces, and that this must be the beginning of the Messianic weal within and without."

Chapter 14 is to this writer a modification of those anticipations. In other words there was a greater human probability, that Jeremiah's prophecies, not his, would be fulfilled: yet he cannot give up his sanguineness, though his hopes had now become fanatic. This writer says on chap. 14, "This piece cannot have been written till somewhat later, when facts made it more and more improbable, that Jerusalem would not any how be conquered, and treated as a conquered city by coarse foes. Yet then too this prophet could not yet part with the anticipations of older prophets and those which he had himself at an earlier time expressed: so boldly, amid the most visible danger, he holds firm to the old anticipation, after that the great deliverance of Jerusalem in Sennacherib's time (Is. c. 37.) appeared to justify the most fanatic hopes for the future. (comp. Ps. 59). And so now the prospect moulds itself to him thus, as if Jerusalem must indeed actually endure the horrors of the conquest, but that then, when the work of the conquerors was half-completed, the great deliverance, already suggested in that former piece, would come, and so the Sanctuary would, notwithstanding, be wonderfully preserved, the better Messianic time would notwithstanding still so come."

It must be a marvelous fascination, which the old prophets exercise over the human mind, that one who can so write should trouble himself about them. It is such an intense paradox, that the writing of one convicted by the event of uttering falsehood in the name of God, incorrigible even by the thickening tokens of God's displeasure, should have been inserted among the Hebrew prophets, in times not far removed from those whose events convicted him, that one wonders that any one should have invented it, still more that any should have believed in it. Great indeed is "the credulity of the incredulous."

And yet this paradox is essential to the theories of the modern school which would place these chapters before the captivity. English writers, who thought themselves compelled to ascribe these chapters to Jeremiah, had an escape, because they did not bind down prophecy to immediate events. Newcome's criticism was the conjectural criticism of his day; i. e. bad, cutting knots instead of loosing them. But his faith, that God's word is true, was entire. Since the prophecy, placed at the time where he placed it, had no immediate fulfillment, he supposed it, in common with those who believe it to have been written by Zechariah, to relate to a later period. That German school, with whom it is an axiom, "that all definite prophecy relates to an immediate future," had no choice but to place it just before the destruction of the temple by the Chaldees, or its profanation by Antiochus Epiphanes; and those who placed it before the Captivity, had no choice, except to believe, that it related to events, by which it was falsified.

Nearly half a century has passed, since a leading writer of this school said, "One must own, that the division of opinions as to the real author of this section and his time, as also the attempts to appropriate single oracles of this portion to different periods, leave the result of criticism simply negative; whereas on the other hand, the view itself, since it is not yet carried through exegetically, lacks the completion of its proof. It is not till criticism becomes positive, and evidences its truth in the explanation of details, that it attains its completion; which is not, in truth, always possible." Hitzig did what he could, "to help to promote the attainment of this end according to his ability." But although the more popular theory has of late been that these chapters are to be placed before the captivity, the one portion somewhere in the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, or Hezekiah; the other, as marked in the chapters themselves, after the death of Josiah, there have not been wanting critics of equal repute, who place them in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. Yet criticism which reels to and fro in a period of near 500 years, from the earliest of the prophets to a period, a century after Malachi, and this on historical and philological grounds, certainly has come to no definite basis, either as to history or philology. Rather, it has enslaved both to preconceived opinions; and at last, as late a result as any has been, after this weary round, to go back to where it started from, and to suppose these chapters to have been written by the prophet whose name they bear.

It is obvious that there must be some mistake either in the tests applied, or in their application, which admits of a variation of at least 450 years from somewhere in the reign of Uzziah (say B. C. 770) to "later than B. C. 330."

Philological and historical criticism, bearing on events (as it is assumed) of the day,

Wette, Stähelin, Köster, Bürger, were of a different school from Hengstenberg, Havernick, Keil, or again from Jahn and Herist. Stähelin says, "in the investigation I kept myself free from any influence from without, and first found the facts, which attest the post-exile origin of this section, given by Hengstenberg and de Wette, when I subsequently compared the labors of others, especially those two scholars." *Messias. which should, in its variations, oscillate between the reign of John or of Charles I, or (to bring it nearer to ourselves) the first half of the xivth century or the latter part of the xviiith, would not gain much attention. Indeed, it is instructive, that after the philological argument has figured so much in all questions about the date of books of Holy Scripture, it is virtually admitted to be absolutely worthless, except negatively. For, in regard to Zechariah, the argument is not used, except in proof that the same writer cannot have written prose and poetry, which would establish that Hosea did not write either his three first chapters or his nine last; or Ezekiel his inaugural vision, the visions of the ninth and tenth chapters, and the simple exhortations to repentance in his eighteenth and thirty-third. Only I know not on the same evidence, how, of modern writers, Scott and Southey could be supposed to have written their prose and their poetry. How easy it would be to prove that the author of Thalaba did not write the life of Wesley or the history of the peninsular war, nor Shakespeare Macbeth and any comedy which criticism may yet leave to him; still more that he cannot have written the deep tragic scenes of Hamlet and that of the grave-diggers.

Yet such negations have been practically considered as the domain of the philological neo-criticism. Style is to be evidence that the same prophet did not write certain prophecies; but, this being demonstrated, it is to yield no evidence, whether he wrote, when Hebrew was a dead language or in the time of its richest beauty. Individuals indeed have their opinions; but philological criticism, as a whole, or as relates to any acknowledged result, is altogether at fault. Having done its office of establishing, that, in the mind of the critic and his disciples, certain chapters are not Zechariah's, the witness is forthwith dismissed, as incompetent even to assist in proving anything beside. The rest is to be established by historical allusions, which are by some adapted to events in the reign of Uzziah, by others to those of the Maccabees: or rather, it being assumed that there is no prophecy, this latter class assumes that the book is to belong to the times of the Maccabees, because one part of it predicts their victories. Those who tell us of the unity of the results of this modern criticism, must have been thinking of the agreement of its negations. As to the positive results, a table will best shew their harmony. Yet the fault is not in the want of an ill-exercised acumen of the critics; their principle, that nothing in the prophets can relate to any distant future, even though that future exactly realized the words, is the mainspring of their confusions. Since the words of Zechariah do relate to, and find their fulfilment in, events widely separated from each other, and the theory of the critics requires that they should belong to some proximate event, either in the present or some near future, they have to wrest those words from the events to which they relate, some in this way, some in that; and the most natural interpretations are those which are least admitted. Certainly since the descriptions in c. ix. suit with the wars of Alexander and the Maccabees, no one, but for some strong antecedent exigency, would assume that they related to some expected expedition of an Assyrian monarch, "which may be conjectured as very probable, but which, for want of historical data, cannot be indicated more circumstantially," or to "a plan of the Assyrians which was not then carried out," or "Uzziah's war with the Philistines," and some imagined "attitude of Jeroboam II against Damascus and Hamath," or "a concealed denunciation against Persia," against which Zechariah did not wish to prophesy openly, or to have had no special meaning at all.

It is marvelous, on what slight data this modern school has satisfied itself that these chapters were written before the captivity. To take the statement of an epitomator* of German pseudo-criticism: "Damascus, Tyre, and Sidon, Philistia, Javan (ix. 1, 6-12) Assyria and Egypt (x. 10.) are the enemies of Judah." "The historical stand-point is different from that of Zech. i-viii." Of all these, Javan, the Greeks, alone are spoken of as enemies of Judah, who before the captivity were known only as purchasers of Hebrew captives; the only known wars are those of the Maccabees.

"The two kingdoms of Judah and Israel still exist. Surely the language, 'that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel,' implies that both kingdoms existed as part of the covenant nation."

Zechariah speaks of Judah and Israel, but not as kingdoms. Before the captivity, except during the effects of the inter-marriage with Athaliah, there was not brotherhood but enmity. In the reigns of Amaziah and Ahaz there was war.

The house, not the kingdom. The house existed after the captivity. Zerubbabel, whom the Persians made governor, was its representative.

"Idols and false prophets (z. 2. xiii. 2 &c.) harmonize only with a time prior to the exile."

Idolatry certainly was not the prevailing national sin, after God had taught the people through the captivity. It is commonly taken for granted, that there was none. But where is the proof? Malachi would hardly have laid the stress on "marrying the daughters of a strange god", had there been no danger that the marriage would lead to idolatry. Nehemiah speaks of the sin, into which Solomon was seduced by "outlandish women," as likely to recur through the heathen marriages; but idolatry was that sin. Half of the children could only speak the language of their mothers^a. It were strange, if they had not imbibed their mothers' idolatry too. In a battle in the Maccabee war, it is related "under the coats of every one that was slain they found things consecrated to the idols of the Jamnites, which is forbidden the Jews by their law."

The Teraphim were, moreover, an unlawful and forbidden means of attempting to know the future, not any coarse form of idolatry^b; much as people now, who more or less earnestly have their fortunes told, would be surprised at being called idolaters. But Zechariah was probably speaking of sins which had brought on the captivity, not of his own day. The prediction repeated from an older prophet, that in the true Judah, the Church, God would cut off even the names and the memory of idols, does not imply that they existed^c.

False prophets continued after the captivity. Shemaiah, who uttered a prophecy against Nehemiah, the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, are known to us from Nehemiah's relation^d. Such there were before our Lord came, of whom He said, that they "were thieves and robbers: He warned against them, 'as coming in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves; He foretold that 'many false prophets shall arise and deceive many; the Acts tell us of the false prophet^e, a Jew, Bar-jesus; and Theudas, and Judas of Galilee^f. S. John says, 'many false prophets have gone out into the world. False prophets aggravated the resistance to the Romans and the final destruction of Jerusalem¹.

"The mention of a king or kingdom, in xi. 6, xiii. 7, does not suit the age of Zechariah."

Zechariah had already implied that they had no king then, for he had bidden Zion to rejoice that her king would come to her; accordingly she had none. In xi. 6, God says, "I will no more pity the land; I will deliver man, every one into the hand of his king." It is an event, not of the prophet's time, but of the future; in xiii. 7, there is no mention of any king at all.

Such being the entire absence of proof that these chapters were written before the captivity², the proof that c. xi. relates to the time of Menahem is even absurd. The process with those who maintained this, has been, assuming as proved, that it was written before the captivity, and that it contained no prophecy of the future, to ask, to what period before the captivity does it relate? One verse³ relates to civil confusion, such as is foretold also, with the same metaphor, by Isaiah and Jeremiah. The choice was large, since the kingdom of Israel had the curse of discord and irreligion entailed upon it, and no king ventured to cut off the entail by cutting off the central sin, the worship of the calves, which were to consolidate it by a worship, the rival of that at Jerusalem. Of the 18 kings between Jeroboam and Hosea, 9, including Tibni, died violent deaths. The choice was directed to Menahem, because of the words in Zechariah, three shepherds also I cut off in one month, and Shallum murdered Zachariah the son of Jeroboam; and he himself, after he had reigned a full month in Samaria, was murdered by Menahem. Here then were two kings cut off. But the third? Imagination is to supply it. One⁴ conjectures Menahem; but he reigned 10 years, and so, he invents a meaning for the word, that the prophet does not mean cut off, but denied them, leaving it open whether he meant "removed" or merely "did not acknowledge" them, as Menahem at first certainly found no recognition with the prophetic order (2 Kgs xv. 16, 19); another⁵ imagined "some third rival of Zachariah and Shallum, of whom there is no mention in the historical books;" but there is no room for a third king, since Shallum murdered Zachariah;

suborned by the tyrants to the people, bidding them wait the help from God, that they might not desert, and that hope might master to their ill, those who were beyond fear or watching.—The deceivers, telling lies against God, then misadvised the wretched people." Jos. B. J. vi. 5. 2 and 3.

and Menahem, Shallum; another⁹ found in Hebrew words⁷ which had crept into the LXX, an usurper Kobal-am, of whom he says truly, "we hear nothing;" another⁸ conceived of some usurper after the murder of Zachariah or of Shallum (this is left free), who about this time may have set himself at the head of the kingdom, but scarcely maintained himself some weeks; another¹ says, "This refers probably to the Interregnum 784-773, in which many may have set themselves as kings, but none have maintained themselves." Another² "An anti-king may at this time have set himself up in other parts of the kingdom, whom Menahem overthrew as he did that murderer." Others³ say of the whole, "The symbolical representation, vers. 3-4, admits of no detailed explanation, but can be understood only as a whole. It describes the evil condition of Judah under Ahaz." Another⁴, equally certain that it relates to Ahaz, says, "the three shepherds, who perished in one and the same month, were probably men who, in the long anarchy before Hoshea ascended the throne, contended for the sceptre."

Yet another is so confident in this interpretation as to the three kings, Shallum, Zachariah and Menahem, that, whereas the book of Kings says expressly that Shallum reigned "a full month" lit. "a month of days," the commentator says, "The month cannot have been full"; Zachariah xi. 8 evidently refers to the three Kings, Sachariah, Sallum and Menahem," while others⁵ will have it that Zachariah by one month means some indefinite space more than a month. This is indeed required (although not stated) by all these theories, since Shallum alone reigned "a full month," and, consequently, the other two kings (if intended at all by the term "shepherds") must have been cut off at some period, outside of that "one month."

Truly, theory is a very exacting taskmaster,

⁹ Ewald (Gesch. d. V. Israel iii. 644.), followed as elsewhere by Dr. Stanley, Jewish Church ii. 364.

⁷ The original text of the LXX seems to have corresponded with the Hebrew. The meaning of the two Hebrew words קבל, קבל, is very simple, "before people" i. e. publicly; קבל קבל would (as Böttcher observed, Jen. Lit. Zeit. 1817. p. 1144) have signified "before the people publicly assembled together." The Syro-Hexapla version by Paul of Tella translates the words, and introduces "Kebdam" with Origen's asterisk, and so, as not belonging to the LXX. The Alexandrian and two other MSS. (one of Constantinople cent. x.) also retain the rendering. The singular "conspired," which excludes "Kebdam" from the place which it commonly occupies, occurs in 3 MSS., the Syro-Hex. Georg. Slav. Octog. Vers. and the Complut.; "and smote him" is also seen in 3 MSS. and Compl. The word "Kebdam" was doubtless only the Hebrew words, written by one, who did not know how to translate them, and is variously written and placed as if the scribes did not know what to do with it. Four MSS. make it the name of a place, "in Iebdam." They are retained in the place of

though strangely fascinating. It is to be one of the triumphs of the neo-criticism to distinguish between the authorship of Zech. ix-xi and xii-xiv. The point alleged to prove that c. xi. belongs to the time of Menahem is one at variance with history. It is not that the whole is like, while in one point the likeness is imperfect. It is the point, alleged as the keystone of the whole, which fails. The words of God by the prophet are, "Three shepherds have I cut off in one month." It lies on the surface of the history, that Zachariah, son of Jeroboam, was murdered by Shallum, after reigning 6 months; and that Shallum, after reigning one full month, was himself murdered by Menahem^a. The succession of murders was not so rapid as when Zimri had murdered Elah, Baasha's son, and after reigning 7 days, committed suicide, lest he should fall into the hands of Omri^b. Elah and Zimri were cut off in one month; Zachariah and Shallum, in two. But in neither case was there any visible result, except a partial retribution of God's justice. The last executioner of God's justice slept with his fathers; his retribution was after death. He was not cut off. And this is the proof, which is to supplant the testimony to Jesus. The Apostle's words come true, as so often beside: c They shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables.

^d Thou art wearied in the greatness of thy way, yet saidst thou not, there is no hope. One should have thought that some must have, at times, thought of the old days, when the prophecy was interpreted of the Good Shepherd and of the 30 pieces of silver which were the price of His Blood, and which were cast into the house of the Lord^e. But this would have been fatal to "historical criticism," whose province was to find out events of the prophet's own day to fill up the words of prophecy.

Holy Scripture, and so of these chapters of Zechariah is, in itself, a matter which does not concern the soul. It is an untrue imputation, that the date of books of the Bible is converted into matter of faith. In this case Jesus has not set His seal upon it; God the Holy Ghost has not declared it. But, as in other cases, what lay as the foundation of the theory was the unbelief that God, in a way above nature, when it seemed good to Him, revealed a certain future to His creature man. It is the postulate, (or axiom, as appears to these critics), that there is no superhuman prophecy, which gives rise to their eagerness, to place these and other prophetic books or portions of books where they can say to themselves that they do not involve such prophecy. To believers it has obviously no religious interest, at what time it pleased Almighty God to send any of His servants the prophets. Not the dates assigned by any of these self-devouring theories, but the grounds alleged in support of those dates, as implying unbelief in God's revelation of Himself, make the question one of religious interest, viz. to shew that these theories are as unsubstantial, as their assumed base is baseless.

It is an infelicity of the modern German mind, that it is acute in observing detailed differences, rather than comprehensive in grasping deeper resemblances. It has been more busied in discovering what is new, than in observing the grounds of what is true. It does not, somehow, acquire the power of balancing evidence, which is habitual to the practical minds of our own countrymen. To take an instance of criticism, apart from Theology, the genuineness of a work of Plato.

"The genuineness of the Laws," says their recent translator^f, "is sufficiently proved by more than 20 citations of them in the writings of Aristotle [whom Plato designated "the intellect of the school," and who must have been intimate with him for some 17 years^g] who was residing at Athens during the last years of the life of Plato, and who returned to Athens at the time when he was himself writing his Politics and Constitutions; 2) by the allusion of Isocrates, writing B. C. 346, a year after the death of Plato, and not more than 2 or 3 years after the composition of the Laws—3) by the reference of the comic poet Alexis, a younger contemporary of Plato (B. C. 356.); 4) by the unanimous voice of later antiquity, and the absence of any suspicion among ancient writers worth noticing."

Yet German acuteness has found out reasons, why the treatise should not be Plato's. Those reasons are plausible, as most untrue things are. As put together carefully by one who yet attaches no weight to them, they look like a parody of the arguments, produced by Germans to take to pieces books of Holy Scripture. Mutatis mutandis, they have such an absurdly ludicrous resemblance, that it provokes a smile. Some 50 years ago, there was a tradition at Göttingen, where Heyne had lived, that he attributed the non-reception of the theories as to Homer in England to the English Bishops, who "apprehended that the same principle would be applied to Holy Scripture." Now, for half a century more, both sets of critics have had full scope. The classical sceptics seem to me to have the advantage. Any one, who knew but a little of the uncritical criticism, applied to the sacred books, could imagine, what a jubilee of triumph it would have occasioned, could such differences as those pointed out between "the Laws" and other treatises of Plato, have been pointed out to detach any book of Holy Scripture from its traditional writer. Yet it is held inadequate by one, of whom an admirer said, that "his peculiar mode of criticism cut the very sinews of belief." I insert the criticisms^h, (omitting the details of ^k"The style of the Laws differs in several important respects from the other dialogues of Plato: 1) in the want of character, power and lively illustration; 2) in the frequency of mannerisms; 3) in the form and rhythm of the sentences; 4) in the use of words. On the other hand, there are many passages 6) which are characterized by a sort of ethical grandeur; and 6) in which perhaps, a greater insight into human nature, and a greater reach of practical wisdom is shewn than in any other of Plato's writings.

The Laws fall very short of the other Platonic dialogues in the refinements of courtesy. Partly the subject did not properly take the form of dialogue and partly the dramatic vigor of Plato had passed away.—Plato has given the Laws that form which was most suited to his own powers of writing in the decline of life.

"The fictions of the Laws have no longer that verisimilitude, which we find in the Phædrus, and the Timæus or even in the Politicus.—Nor is there any where in the Laws that lively ἐνάργεια, that vivid mise en scène, which is as characteristic of Plato, as of some modern novelists.

"We no longer breathe the atmosphere of humor which pervades the earlier writings of Plato, and which makes the broadest Aristophanic joke as well as the subtlest refinement of wit possible; and hence the impression made upon us is bald and feeble.—The irony of the earlier dialogues, of which some traces occur in the 10th book, is replaced by a sort of severity which hardly condescends to regard human things.

The figures of speech and illustrations are poor in themselves and are not assisted by the surrounding phraseology. In the Republic and in the earlier dialogues—notes are struck which are repeated from time to time, as in a strain of music. There is none of this subtle art in the Laws.—The citations from the poets have lost that fanciful character, which gave them their charm in the earlier dialogues.

2. "The clumsiness of the dialogue leads to frequent mannerisms—This finish of style [in the illustration) because their failure may open the eyes of some to the utter valuelessness of this sort of criticism. The accuracy of the criticisms is not questioned; the statements are not said to be exaggerated; yet they are held invalid. The question then comes with great force to the conscience; "Why, rejecting arguments so forcible as to a treatise of Plato, do I accept arguments very inferior, dialogue] is no longer discernible in the Laws. Again and again the speaker is charged or charges himself with obscurity; he repeats again and again that he will explain his views more clearly.—A tendency to a paradoxical form of statement is also observable.—More than in other writings of Plato the tone is hortatory; the Laws are sermons as well as laws; they are supposed to have a religious sanction, and to rest upon a religious sentiment in the mind of the citizens.—Resumptions of subjects which have been half disposed of in a previous passage, constantly occur: the arrangement has neither the clearness of art, nor the freedom of nature. Irrelevant remarks are made here and there, or illustrations used which are not properly filled in. The dialogue is generally weak and labored; and is in the later books fairly given up; apparently, because unsuited to the subject of the work.

3. "From this [perfection of style in the Symposium and Phædrus] there are many fallings off in the Laws, first, in the structure of the sentences, which are rhythmical and monotonous;—second, they are often of enormous length, and the latter end frequently appears to forget the beginning of them; they seem never to have received the second thoughts of the author: either the emphasis is wrongly placed, or there is a want of point in the clause, or an absolute case occurs, which is not properly separated from the rest of the sentence; or words are aggregated in a manner, which fails to shew their relation to one another; or the connecting particles are omitted at the beginning of sentences; the use of the relative and the antecedent is more indistinct, the changes of number and person more frequent; examples of pleonasm, tautology and periphrasis, unmeaning antitheses of positive and negative, and other affectations, are more numerous than in the other writings of Plato; there is also a more common and sometimes unmeaning use of qualifying formula—and of double expressions;—again there is an over-curious adjustment of verb and participle, noun and epithet: many forms of affected variety: thirdly, the absence of metaphorical language is remarkable; the style is not devoid of ornament but the ornament is of a debased rhetorical kind, patched on it instead of growing out of the subject; there as to such or such a book of the Old or New Testament,—certain chapters of Isaiah, or Ecclesiastes, or these chapters of Zechariah, or the Epistle to the Hebrews, or the Revelation of S. John the Divine,—except on grounds of theology, not of criticism, and how am I true to myself in rejecting such arguments as to human books, and accepting them as to Divine books?"

is a great command of words, and a labored use of them; forced attempts at metaphor occur in several passages—(compare also the unmeaning extravagance of language in other passages); poor and insipid illustrations are also common; fourthly, we may observe an unmeaning use of climax and hyperbole—

4. "The peculiarities in the use of words, which occur in the Laws, have been collected by Zeller and Stallbaum; first, in the use of nouns, such as" [8 are given]; "secondly, in the use of adjectives, such as" [5 instances]; "and of adverbs, such as" [3 instances]; "thirdly in the use of verbs such as" [5 instances]—

"Zeller and Stallbaum have also collected forms of words in the Laws differing from the forms of the same words, which occur in other places [7 instances, "and the Ionic word—"]. Zeller has noticed a fondness for substantives ending in $\mu\alpha$ and $\sigma\kappa$, such as [9 instances "and others"]; also a use of substantives in the plural, which are commonly found only in the singular [five instances.] Also a peculiar use of prepositions in composition as in [five instances "and others"] also a frequent use of the Ionic datives plural in $\alpha\alpha\iota$ and $\sigma\sigma\iota$.

"To these peculiarities he has added a list of peculiar expressions and constructions [9 are given]. He remarks also on the frequent use of the abstract for the concrete [11 instances]. He further notes some curious instances of the genitive case—and of the dative—and also some rather uncommon periphrases; also the pleonastic use of the enclitics $\gamma\epsilon$ and of $\gamma\epsilon$, of $\tau\alpha\upsilon\upsilon\tau$, of $\acute{\omega}\rho$, and the periphrastic use of the preposition $\tau\epsilon\pi\iota$. Lastly he observes the tendency to hyperbata or transposition of words; and to rhythmical uniformity as well as grammatical irregularity in the structure of the sentences.

"For nearly all the expressions, which are adduced by Zeller against the genuineness of the Laws, Stallbaum finds some sort of authority. There is no reason for suspecting their genuineness, because several words occur in them, which are not found in the other writings of Plato. An imitator will often preserve the usual phraseology of a writer, better than he would himself." From Prof. Jowett's Introduction to the Laws of Plato, T. iv. pp. 11-16.

* J. D. Michaelis, 1786, was uncertain. The opinions or doubts in the last century were altogether vague. "I have as yet no certainty, but am seeking: am also not opposed, if any deny these chapters to be Zechariah's." Neue Orient. u. Exeg. Biblioth. i. 128.

Augusti stated attack and defence, but gave no opinion. Eini. 1806. G. L. Bauer (1793) said generally, "c. ix.-xiv. seem not to be Zechariah's," but professed himself in utter uncertainty as to the dates. Scholia T. viii. On ix.-xiv. he says, "which seems not to be Zechariah's," but whether Flügel was right who thought c. ix. belonged to the time of Jeroboam II., or Eichhorn, who doubted whether it was not later than Zechariah, he says, "I decide nothing, leaving the whole question uncertain." p. 74. On xi. he says, "we find no indication when the desolation was inflicted," though he would rather understand the Assyrians, than Ant. Epiph. or the Romans. pp. 86, 87. Of xii.-xiv. he leaves subject and time uncertain. pp. 108, 110, 121. Döderlein also seems uncertain. Anserl. theol. Biblioth. iv. 2. p. 61. (1787.)

¹ Biblische Theologie wissenschaftlich dargestellt. i. 553. "It seems to have been occasioned by the Persian-Egyptian wars, and by the Jews with the neighboring people. Nehemiah found Jerusalem half destroyed [rather not rebuilt]. The want of historical accounts makes it impossible to explain to what details refer."

³ "When the fame of the Greeks, even in Palestine, must have been great enough to suggest to the poet the thought, that so mighty and warlike a people could only be conquered by Jehovah and his Israelites; then would mere peace and prosperity prevail."

⁴ Religions-Ideen d. A. T. (with preface by Gesenius) ii. 520.

habitants, can any require more to justify this explanation?" "The portions xi. xii.-xiii. 6. have no matter, from which their age could be determined; yet neither do they contain any thing to remove them to an early time; rather has the language much which is late; if then the contents of xiii. 7.-end, set it late, they too may be accounted late. This last must either have been to comfort the people on the first tidings of the death of Judas Maccabi in the battle with Bacchides, or have no definite subject.—In that case it would belong to B. C. 161, yet one must own that there is not the same evidence for this, as that ix. 1.-x. 17, belongs to the time of Alexander.—These must be the proofs, that the 2d half of Zechariah cannot have the same author as the first, or one must allow what tradition gives out, and since there are great doubts against it, one must regret that one can come to no clear result as to Zechariah. For the other proofs which could be brought are not decisive." pp. 456, 457.

Corrodi had on the same grounds assigned c. ix. to the time of Alexander; c. xiv. to that of Antiochus Epiphanes. Versuch e. Beleuchtung d. Gesch. d. Jud. u. Christl. Bibel-Canons i. 107.

⁶ Aust. Lehrbuch d. Hebr. Sprache. n. 45. p. 23. 1868. "The way in which Greece is named as a chief enemy of Zion (quite different from that of Joel iv. 6. ix. lxxvi. 10.), chiefly shows that the sections Zeck. ix. xq. which resist every assured collation in the pre-exile or ante-Macedonian period, could only have been written after Alexander's march through Palestine. With this agree the later coloring, the Levitical spirit, the style full of compilation and of imitation, as also the phantastic messianic hopes. These last must have been revived among the Jews after the overthrow through Alexander. In comparison with the lifeless language of these chapters, as to which we cannot at all understand how any can have removed them into so early pre-exile times, the Psalms attributed to the times of the Maccabees are amazingly fresh. On this, as well as other grounds, we can admit of no Psalms of the Maccabee times." Neue Aehrenlese ii. 215-127. One ground, which has by others of this school been alleged for not ascribing them to Zechariah, had been that they were so much more poetic &c. "In regard to language also, the style in the second Part is wholly different. c. 9. and 10. are energetic, vivid, &c." Hitzig, Vorbemerkk. z. d. II. u. III. Zeck. n. 2. "Rosenmüller says truly:—How much the poetic, weighty, concise, fervid style of the six last chapters differs from the prosaic, languid, humble style of the eight first." Maurer on Zeck. ix.-xiv. p. 607. "These prophecies [Zeck. ix.-xiv.] cannot be from Zechariah, not on account of the unsymbolic style (comp. xi. 4-17.) but on account of the more forceful style" &c. De Wette Eini § 250 ed. 2.

CHAP. I. 1. *In the eighth month*¹. The date joins on Zechariah's prophecy to those of Haggai. Two months before, *in the sixth month*², had Haggai, conjointly with Zechariah³, exhorted Zerubbabel and the people to resume the intermitted building of the temple. These had used such diligence, notwithstanding the partial discouragement of the Persian Government⁴, that God gave them in the seventh month, the magnificent promise of the later glory of the temple through the Coming of Christ⁵. Still as Haggai too warned them, the conversion was not complete. So Zechariah in the eighth, as Haggai in the ninth⁶ month, urges upon them the necessity of thorough and inward repentance, as the condition of partaking of those promises.

"Thrice in the course of one saying, he mentions the most holy name of God; partly to instruct in the knowledge of Three Persons in one Nature, partly to confirm their minds more strongly in the hope of the salvation to come."

2. *lit. Wrath was the Lord against your fathers with wrath*⁷, i. e., a wrath which was indeed such, whose greatness he does not further express, but leaves to their memories to supply. "Seest thou how he scares them, and, setting before the young what befell those before them, drives them to amend, threatening them with the like or more grievous ills, unless they would wisely reject their fathers' ways, esteeming the pleasing of God worthy of all thought and care. He speaks of great wrath. For it indicates no slight displeasure that He allowed the Babylonians to waste all Judah and Samaria, burn the holy places and destroy Jerusalem, remove the elect Israel to a piteous slavery in a foreign land, severed from sacrifices, entering no more the holy court nor offering the thank-offering, or tithes, or first-fruits of the law, but precluded by necessity and fear even from the duty of celebrating his prescribed and dearest festivals. The like we might address to the Jewish people, if we would apply it to the mystery of Christ. For after they had killed the prophets and had crucified the Lord of glory Himself, they were captured and destroyed; their famed temple was levelled, and Hosea's words were fulfilled in them; ¹⁰ The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, without a sacrifice and without an image, without an ephod and without teraphim."

3. Therefore say thou. lit. And thou sayest, i. e., this having been so, it follows that thou sayest or must say¹¹, Turn ye unto Me. In some degree they had turned to God, for Whose sake they had returned to their land; and again when, after some negligence¹², they renewed the building of the temple, and God had said, ¹³ I am with you. But there needed yet a more inward completer turning, whereon God promises a yet nearer presence, as Malachi repeats the words¹⁴, and S. James exhorts¹⁵, Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you. Those who have turned to God need ever to turn more into the centre of the narrow way. door of our hearts against Him, enters more into it. ¹If a man love Me, he will keep My words, and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him.

²Men are said to be converted, when leaving behind them deceitful goods, they give their whole mind to God, bestowing no less pains and zeal on Divine things than before on the nothings of life."

³When it is said in Holy Scripture, Turn unto Me and I will turn unto you, we are admonished as to our own freedom; when we answer, Turn us, Lord, unto Thee, and we shall be turned, we confess that we are forecome by the grace of God."

4. Be ye not like your fathers. Strangely infectious is the precedent of ill. Tradition of good, of truth, of faith, is decreed; only tradition of ill and error are adhered to. The sin of Jeroboam was held sacred by every king of Israel: ⁴The statutes of Omri were diligently kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab. They turned back and were treacherous like their forefathers; they turned themselves like a deceitful bow⁵, is God's summary of the history of Israel. ⁶Absurd are they who follow the ignorances of their fathers, and ever plead inherited custom as an irrefragable defence, though blamed for extremest ills. So idolaters especially, being called to the knowledge of the truth, ever bear in mind the error of their fathers and, embracing their ignorance as an hereditary lot, remain blind."

The former prophets. The prophets spake God's words, as well in their pastoral office as in predicting things to come, in enforcing God's law and in exhorting to repentance, as in announcing the judgments on disobedience. The predictive as well as the pastoral office were united in Nathan⁷, Gad⁸, Shemaiah⁹, Azariah¹⁰, Hanani¹¹, Elijah¹², Elisha¹³, Micaiah the son of Imla, whose habitual predictions against Ahab induced Ahab to say¹⁴, I hate him, for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. The specific calls to conversion here named and their fruitlessness, are summed up by Jeremiah as words of all the prophets. For ten years he says, ¹⁵The word of the Lord hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking, and ye have not hearkened. And the Lord hath sent unto you all His servants the prophets, rising early and sending; but ye have not hearkened nor inclined your ear to hear. They said, Turn ye again now every one from his evil ways and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the Lord hath given unto you and to your fathers for ever and ever; and go not after other gods to serve and worship them, and provoke Me not to anger with the works of your hands, and I will do you no hurt. But ye have not hearkened unto Me, saith the Lord; that ye might provoke Me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt. Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts, Because ye have not heard My words &c. The prophetic author of the book of Kings sums up in like way, of all the prophets and all the seers. ¹⁶The Lord testified against Israel and against Judah by the hand of all the prophets and all the seers, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways and keep My commandments, My statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by My servants the prophets, and they did not hear, and hardened their neck, like the neck of their fathers.

The characteristic word¹⁷, turn from your evil ways and the evil of your doings occurring in Jeremiah, it is probable, that this summary was chiefly in the mind of Zechariah, and that he refers not to Isaiah, Joel, Amos &c., (as all the prophets were preachers of repentance), but to the whole body of teachers, whom God raised up, analogous to the Christian ministry, to recall men to Himself.

The title, the former prophets, contrasts the office of Haggai and Zechariah, not with definite prophets before the captivity, but with the whole company of those, whom God sent as He says, so unremittently.

And they hearkened not unto Me. ¹⁸They heard not the Lord warning through the pro-

7 ¶ Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying, phets, attended not—not to the Prophets who spake to them but—not to Me, saith the Lord. For I was in them who spake and was despised. Whence also the Lord in the Gospel saith, ¹*He that receiveth you, receiveth Me.*"

5. Your fathers, where are they? The abrupt solemnity of the question seems to imply an unexpected close of life which cut short their hopes, plans, promises to self. ²*When they said, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them.* Yet not they only but the prophets too, who ministered God's word to them, these also being men, passed away, some of them before their time as men, by the martyr's death. Many of them saw not their own words fulfilled. But God's word which they spake, being from God, passed not away.

6. *Only My words and My decrees*⁴, which God spake by them, did not they overtake them? Heathen reminiscence of God's justice acknowledged, "⁵Rarely hath punishment with limping tread parted with the forerunning miscreant." *All these curses, Moses foretells*⁶, *shall come upon thee and overtake thee*¹, until thou art destroyed.

And they returned to God and said. The history of the Jews in Babylon is omitted in Holy Scripture, except as to His special dealings with Daniel and his three companions. Yet Jeremiah confesses in words, what Zechariah had apparently in his mind; ²*The Lord hath done that which He purposed; He hath fulfilled His word, which He commanded in the days of old.* The Lamentations are one long confession of deserved punishment, such as Daniel too made in the name of his people with himself³.

It was one long waiting for God and for the restoration of His visible worship. Yet repentance was a condition of their restoration.

7. On the twenty-fourth day, exactly five months after the building of the temple was resumed¹⁰, and two months after Haggai's last prophecy¹¹. The series of visions, leading onward, from the first deliverance from the enemies who oppressed them, to the Coming of Christ, is given as a reward to their first whole-hearted endeavor to restore their worship of Him. The visions are called the word of the Lord, because they were prophecy, made visible to the eye, conveying the revelation to the soul, and in part explained by Him.

8. I saw in the night, i. e. that following on the twenty-fourth day. The darkness of the night perhaps was chosen, as agreeing with the dimness of the restored condition. Night too is, "¹²through the silence of the senses and of the fancy, more suited for receiving Divine revelations."

A man riding upon a red horse. The man is an angel of God, appearing in form of man, as Daniel says, "¹³The man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, touched me." He is doubtless the same who appeared to Joshua in form of man, preparing thereby for the revelation of God manifest in the flesh—He, before whom Joshua fell on his face and in him worshipped God, through whom also

10 And the man that

Heb. 1. 14.

God required the same tokens of reverence as He had from Moses¹. Joshua lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold there stood a man over against him with a sword drawn in his hand, who said, as Captain of the Lord's host am I come. He rides here, as Leader of the host who follow Him; to Him the others report, and He instructs the Angel who instructs the prophet. Red, being the color of blood, symbolizes doubtless "the vengeance of God to be inflicted on the enemies of the Jews," exceeding the measure of chastise-ment allowed by God. It probably was S.
Michael², who is entitled in Daniel, *your prince³, the great prince which standeth up for

And he was standing, almost as we say, stationary, abiding in that one place. The description is repeated⁵, apparently as identifying this angel, and so he and the angel of the⁷ LORD are probably one.

The myrtle trees⁸, from their fragrance and lowness, probably symbolize the Church, as at once yielding a sweet odor, and in a low estate, or lowly. The natural habits of the myrtle make it the fitter symbol⁹.

And behind him. The relation of the Angel as their chief is represented by their following him. This is consistent with their appearing subsequently as giving report to him. The red and white horses are well-known symbols of war and glory, whence He Who sits on the white horse¹⁰ in the Revelations, went forth conquering and to conquer.

The remaining color is somewhat uncertain.
If it be ashen gray, it would correspond to the pale horse¹¹ of the Revelations, and the union of the two colors, black and white, is calculated to be a symbol of a chequered state of things, whereas a mingled color like "chestnut" is not suggestive of any symbol.

9. What are these? He asks, not who, but *what*¹² they import.

The angel that talked with me. lit. "spake in me." The very rare expression¹³ seems meant to convey the thought of an inward speaking, whereby the words should be borne directly into the soul, without the intervention of the ordinary outward organs. God says to Moses, *"If there is a prophet among you, I, the Lord, will make Myself known unto him in a vision, I will speak [lit.] in him in a dream.
My servant Moses is not so—In him will I speak mouth to mouth; and Habakkuk says of the like inward teaching, I will watch to see,* what He will speak in me. It is the characteristic title of one attendant-angel, who was God's expositor of the visions to Zechariah.¹

"By his ministry God shewed me things to come, in that that angel formed in the spirit and imaginative power of Zechariah phantasms or images of things which were foreshewn him, and gave him to understand what those images signified."

11. And the man answered to the question addressed to the attendant-angel. He himself took the word.

These are they whom the Lord sent to walk up and down. Satan says of himself that he came "from going to and fro in the earth and from walking up and down in it." As he for evil, so these for good. Their office was not a specific or passing duty, as when God sent His angels with some special commission, such as those recorded in Holy Scripture. It was a continuous conversation with the affairs of men, a minute course of visiting, inspecting our human deeds and ways, a part of the "wonderful order," in which God has "ordained and constituted the services of Angels and men." Nor is it said that the Angels were limited, each to his own peculiar province, as we learn through Daniel, that certain great Angels, Princes among them, had the charge of empires or nations, even of the heathen.² These Angels had apparently only the office of inspecting and reporting to Angels of a higher order, themselves a subordinate order in the heavenly Hierarchy.
Nor are they spoken of, as executing any judgments of God, or as pacifying the earth;
they may have been so employed; but they are only said to have reported the state in which they found it.

These answered the unexpressed inquiry of the angel of the Lord, as he had answered the unuttered question of the angel, attendant on Zechariah.

seems to express⁶, from its wonted state of tumult and war. Wars, although soon to break out again, were in the second year of Darius for the time suspended. The rest, in which the world was, suggests the contrast of the yet continuing unrest allotted to the people of God. Such rest had been promised to Israel, on its return from the captivity⁷, but had not yet been fulfilled.
Through the hostility of the Samaritans the building of the temple had been hindered and was just recommenced; the wall of Jerusalem was yet broken down⁸; its fire-burned gates not restored; itself was a waste⁹; its houses unbuilt¹⁰. This gives occasion to the intercession of the Angel of the Lord.

12. And the Angel of the Lord answered the implied longing, by intercession with God.
As the angel-interpreter in Job had "the office of no mere created angel, but one, an-ticipative of His, Who came at once to redeem and justify," so the Angel of the Lord, in whom God was, exercised at once a mediatorial office with God, typical of our Lord's High Priest's prayer¹¹, and acted as God.

These seventy years. The seventy years of the captivity, prophesied by Jeremiah¹², were on the eve of their conclusion at the time of Daniel's great prayer of intercession¹³; they ended with the capture of Babylon, and the edict of Cyrus, permitting the Jews to return¹⁴. Yet there seems to have been a secondary fulfilment, from the destruction of the temple and city, in Zedekiah's eleventh year¹⁵, 588 B. C. to the second year of Darius, 519 B. C. Such double fulfilments of prophecy are not like alternative fulfilments.
They are a more intricate and fuller, not an easier fulfilment of it. Yet these 70 years do not necessitate such a double fulfilment. It might express only a reverent wonder, that the 70 years being accomplished, the complete restoration was not yet brought to pass.

tivity to the 70th year, it was necessary to be silent, so long as the time was not yet come to an end, that he might not seem to oppose the Lord's will. But, when the time was now come to a close and the fear of offending was removed, he, knowing that the Lord cannot lie, entreats and ventures to enquire whether His anger has come to an end, as had those who sinned; or whether, fresh sins having accrued, there shall be a further delay, and their forlorn estate shall be yet further extended. They then who worship God have a good and not uncertain hope, that, if they should offend from infirmity, yet have they those who should entreat for them, not men only, but the holy angels themselves, who render God gracious and propitious, soothing His anger by their purity, and in a manner winning the grieved judge. Then the Angel entreated for the synagogue to the Jews; but we, who believe and have been sanctified in the Spirit, ¹ have an Advocate with the Father Jesus Christ the righteous, and He is the propitiation for our sins, and as the Divine Paul writes, ² God hath set Him forth as a propitiation through faith, freeing from sin those who come to Him."

14. Cry thou. The vision was not for the prophet alone. What he saw and heard, that he was to proclaim to others. The vision, which he now saw alone, was to be the basis and substance of his subsequent preaching¹, whereby he was to encourage his people to persevere.

I am jealous for Jerusalem, lit. I have been, not now only but in time past even when I did not shew it, and am jealous², with the tender love which allows not what it loves to be injured³. The love of God, until finally shut out, is unchangeable, He pursues the sinner with chastisements and scourges in His love, that he may yet be converted and live⁴. But for God's love to him and the solicitations of His grace, while yet impenitent and displeasing Him, he could not turn and please Him.

And for Zion, which especially He had chosen to put His Name there, and there to receive the worship of His people; ⁵ the hill which God desired to dwell in, ⁶ which He loved. ⁷ With great and special love have I loved the people of the Jews and what pertained to them, and out of that love have I so diligently and severely corrected her excesses, that she may be more careful for the time to come, as a husband corrects most sharply a wife most dear to him, if she be unfaithful. Whence in the book of Maccabees it is written, ⁸ It is a token of His great goodness, when wicked doers are not suffered any long time, but are forthwith punished. For not as with other nations, whom the Lord patiently forbeareth to punish, till they become to the fullness of their sins, so dealeth He with us; lest, being come to the height of sin, afterward He should take vengeance of us. 15. I am sore displeased, lit. with great anger am I angered against the nations which are at ease. The form of the words¹ shews that the greatness of the displeasure of God against those who oppress His people, is proportionate to the great and tender love toward themselves. God had been angered indeed² with His people; with their enemies He was angered with a great anger; and that the more, because they were at ease³, in unfeeling self-enjoyment amid the miseries of others.

*I was a little displeased*⁴; little, in comparison with our deserts; little in comparison with the anger of the human instruments of His displeasure; little in comparison with their's who, in their anger, sought their own ends.

*They helped forward the affliction*⁵. "6 He is wroth with the nations at ease, because He delivered His people to be corrected, but they used cruelty toward those delivered; He wills them to be amended as a son by a schoolmaster; they set themselves to slay and punish them, as an enemy. Like that in Isaiah, 'I gave them into thy hands; thou didst shew them no mercy; upon the ancients hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.'

Or it may be, helped for evil, in order to bring about evil, as in Jeremiah⁷, *Behold I set My face against you for evil*⁸, and to destroy all Judah i.e., as we should say, they were the instruments of God,⁹ "coöperated in the execution of My justice toward you, but cruelly and with perverse intention. wasted the Jewish people, God so ordaining in as far as He willed through them to punish in the present the sins of His people, yet they did it, not in view of God and out of zeal for righteousness, but out of pride covetousness and with the worst ends. Hence God says by Isaiah¹¹, Wo to Asshur, the rod of Mine anger, and the staff in his hand is Mine indignation. Howbeit he thinketh not so, but his heart is to destroy and cut off nations not a few.

16. Therefore. This being so, since God was so jealous for His people, so displeased with their persecutors, thus saith the Lord, "10 I Who¹² in wrath remember mercy, am returned¹³, not by change of place, Who am uncircumscribed, not existing in place, to the people of Judah and Jerusalem in mercies, manifoldly benefiting them by various effects of My love." The single benefits, the rebuilding of His House, and so the restoration of His public worship, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem, are but instances of that all-containing mercy, His restored presence in tender mercies¹⁴. I am returned, God says, although the effects of His return were yet to come.

A line shall be stretched forth over Jerusalem, before, when it stood, this had been done to destroy¹⁵; now, when destroyed, to rebuild¹⁶.

17. Cry yet, a further promise; not only should Jerusalem be rebuilt, but should as we say, *overflow with good*¹; and God, Who had seemed to cast off His people, should yet comfort her, and should shew in act that He had chosen her². Zechariah thrice³ repeats the promise, given through Isaiah⁴ to Jerusalem, before her wasting by the Chaldeans, reminding the people thereby, that the restoration, in the dawn whereof they lived, had been promised two centuries before. Yet, against all appearances. My cities shall overflow with good, as being God's; yet would the Lord comfort Zion; yet would He choose Jerusalem.

"What is the highest of all goods? what the sweetest solace in life? what the subject of joys? what the oblivion of past sorrow? That which the Son of God brought upon earth, when He illumined Jerusalem with the brightness of His light and heavenly discipline. For to that end was the city restored, that in it, by the ordinance of Christ, for calamity should abound bliss; for desolation, fullness; for sorrow, joy; for want, affluence of heavenly goods."

This first vision having predicted the entire restoration, the details of that restoration are given in subsequent visions.

18. And I lifted up mine eyes. "Not those of the body (for such visions are invisible to the eyes of the flesh), but rather the inner eyes of the heart and mind." It seems as though, at the close of each vision, Zechariah sank in meditation on what had been shewn him; from which he was again roused by the exhibition of another vision.

² בָּחַר is always "choose," not (as Ges. and others) "love." In all the cases, which Ges. cites as meaning "love," (Gen. vi. 2. 1 Sam. xx. 30, 2 Sam. xv. 15, Pr. i. 29, iii. 31, Is. i. 29) the sense would be injured by rendering, "loved."

the horns which have scat- & 5. 3.

I saw four horns. The mention of the horns naturally suggests the thought of the creatures which wielded them; as in the first vision that of the horses following the chiefs, implies the presence of the riders upon them. And this the more, since the word "fray them away" implies living creatures, liable to fear. "The horn, in inspired Scripture, is always taken as an image of strength, and mostly of pride also, as David said to some, I said unto the fools, Deal not so foolishly, and to the ungodly, Lift not up the horns. Lift not up your horns on high and speak not with a stiff neck. The prophet then sees four horns, i. e. four hard and warlike nations, who could easily uproot cities and countries."

These are the horns which have scattered. "The four horns which scattered Judah, Israel and Jerusalem, are four nations, Babylonians, Medes and Persians, Macedonians and Romans; as the Lord, on the prophet's enquiry, explains here, and Daniel unfolds most fully¹; who in the vision of the image with golden head, silver breast, belly and thighs of brass, feet of iron and clay, explained it of these four nations, and again in another vision of four beasts², lion, bear, leopard and another unnamed dreadful beast, he pointed out the same nations under another figure. But that the Medes and Persians, after the victory of Cyrus, were one kingdom, no one will doubt, who reads secular and sacred literature.—When this vision was beheld, the kingdom of the Babylonians had now passed away, that of the Medes and Persians was instant; that of Greeks and Macedonians and of the Romans was yet to come. What the Babylonians, what the Medes and Persians, what the Greeks i. e. the Macedonians, did to Judah, Israel and Jerusalem, a learned man acknowledgeth, especially under Antiochus, surnamed Epiphanes, to which the history of the Maccabees belongs. After the Coming of our Lord and Saviour, when Jerusalem was encompassed, Josephus, a native writer, tells most fully, what the Israelites endured, and the Gospel fore-announced. These horns dispersed Judah almost individually, so that, bowed down by the heavy weight of evils, no one of them raised his head." Though these were successive in time, they are exhibited to Zechariah as one. One whole are the efforts against God's Church; one whole are the instruments of God, whether angelic or human, in doing or suffering, to repel them. Zechariah then exhibits these hostile powers as past and gone¹, as each would be at the end, having put forth his passing might, and perishing. They scattered, each in its day, and disappeared; for the next displaced it.

The long schism being ended, Judah and Israel are again one; and Jerusalem, the place of God's worship, belongs to Israel as well as to Judah².

The explanation of the number four, as symbolizing contemporaneous attacks from the four quarters of the heavens, fails in matter of fact, that, in these later times, the Jews suffered always from one power at a time. There was no such fourfold attack. In Zechariah's time all around was Persian.

"³ Those horns, broken by the angels' ministry, portended that no guilt against the Church of Christ should be unpunished. Never will there be wanting fierce enemies from E. W. N. or S., whom God will strengthen, in order by them to teach His own. But when He shall see His work finished, i.e. when He shall have cleansed the stains of His own and brought back His Church to her former purity, He will punish those who so fiercely afflicted her."

Spiritually, "those who destroy vices, build up virtues, and all the saints who, possessing these remedies, ever build up the Church, may be called 'builders.' Whence the Apostle says, "I, as a wise builder, laid the foundation; and the Lord, when wroth, said that He would "take away from Jerusalem artificer and wise man. And the Lord Himself, Son of the Almighty God and of the Creator of all, is called "the son of the carpenter."

II. 1. A man with a measuring line in his hand. Probably the Angel of the Lord, of whom Ezekiel has a like vision. "He who before, when he lift up his eyes, had seen in the four horns things mournful, now again lifts up his eyes to see a man, of whom it is written, "Behold a man whose name is the Branch; of whom we read above, "Behold a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle trees, which were in the bottom. Of whom too the Father saith; He builded My city,¹⁰ whose builder and maker is God. He too is seen by Ezekiel in a description like this, "a man whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, i.e. burnished¹² and shining as fire, with a line of flax in his hand and a measuring reed." The office also seems to be one of authority, not to measure the actual length and breadth of Jerusalem, but to lay down what it should be, "to mark it out broad and very long."

3. The angel that talked with me went forth, probably to receive the explanation which was given him for Zechariah; and another angel, a higher angel, since he gives him a commission, went forth to meet him, being (it seems probable) instructed by the Angel of the Lord, who laid down the future dimensions of the city. The indefiniteness of the description, another angel, implies that he was neither the Angel of the Lord, nor (were they different) Michael, or the man with the measuring line, but an angel of intermediate rank, instructed by one higher, instructing the lower, who immediately instructed Zechariah.

And said unto him, Run, speak unto this young man, the prophet himself, who was to report to his people what he heard. Jeremiah says, I am a youth; and the young man, the young prophet, carried the prophetic message from Elisha to Jehu. "Youth," common as our English term in regard to man, is inapplicable and unapplied to angels, who have not our human variations of age, but exist, as they were created.

Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls, or as villages¹, viz. an unconfined, uncramped population, spreading itself freely, without restraint of walls, and (it follows) without need of them. Clearly then it is no earthly city. To be inhabited as villages would be weakness, not strength; a peril, not a blessing. The earthly Jerusalem, so long as she remained unwall'd, was in continual fear and weakness. God put it into the heart of His servant to desire to restore her; her wall was built, and then she prospered. He Himself had promised to Daniel, that Her street shall be rebuilt, and her wall, even in strait of times. Nehemiah mourned 73 years after this, B. C. 443, when it was told him, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire. He said to Artaxerxes, Why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire? When permitted by Artaxerxes to return, he addressed the rulers of the Jews, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire; come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach; and they said, let us rise and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. When the wall was finished and our enemies heard, and the heathen about us saw it, they were much cast down in their own eyes; for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

This prophecy then looks on directly to the time of Christ. Wonderfully does it picture the gradual expansion of the kingdom of Christ, without bound or limit, whose protection and glory God is, and the character of its defences. It should dwell as villages, peacefully and gently expanding itself to the right and the left, through its own inherent power of multiplying itself, as a city, to which no bounds were assigned, but which was to fill the earth. "For us God hath raised a Church, that truly holy and far-famed city, which Christ fortifieth, consuming opponents by invisible powers, and filling it with His own glory, and as it were, standing in the midst of those who dwell in it. For He promised; Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world. This holy city Isaiah mentioned: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem, a quiet habitation; a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken; and to her he saith, enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitation; spare not; lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes. For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left. For the Church of Christ is widened and extended boundlessly, ever receiving countless souls who worship Him." "What king or emperor could make walls so ample as to include the whole world? Yet, without this, it could not encircle that Jerusalem, the Church which is diffused through the whole world. This Jerusalem, the pilgrim part of the heavenly Jerusalem, is, in this present world, inhabited without walls, not being contained in one place or one nation. But in that world, whither it is daily being removed hence, much more can there not, nor ought to be,

says, shall be immaterial. ³ We have a strong city; salvation shall God appoint for walls and bulwarks; ⁴ thou shalt call thy walls salvation and thy gates praise. By a different figure it is said, ⁵ I will encamp about mine house because of the army.

And glory will I be in the midst of her, as Isaiah says, ⁶ The Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory; and of Christ, ⁷ In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be Beauty and Glory—to the escaped of Israel.

6. Ho! ho! and flee. Such being the safety and glory in store for God's people in Jerusalem, He Who had so provided it, the Angel of the Lord, bids His people everywhere to come to it, saving themselves also from the peril which was to come on Babylon. So Isaiah bade them, ⁸ *Go ye forth of Babylon; flee ye from the Chaldeans with a voice of singing; declare ye, tell this, utter it to the end of the earth; say ye, The Lord hath redeemed His servant Jacob. ⁹ Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence; touch no unclean thing: go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord; and Jeremiah, ¹⁰ Flee ye out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity, for this is the time of the Lord's vengeance; He will render unto her a recompense.
¹¹ *My people, go ye out of the midst of her, and deliver ye, every man his soul from the fierce anger of the Lord.

The words, flee, deliver thyself, imply an imminent peril on Babylon, such as came upon her, two years after this prophecy, in the fourth year of Darius. But the earnestness of the command, its repetition by three prophets, the context in Isaiah and Jeremiah, imply something more than temporal peril,
the peril of the infection of the manners of Babylon, which may have detained there many who did not return. Whence in the New Testament, the words are cited, as to the great evil city of the world; ¹² Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you; and under the name of Babylon;
¹³ *I heard another voice from heaven, saying,
Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.*

For I have spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven. The north country, although its capital and centre was Babylon, was the whole Babylonian empire, called "the North,"¹⁴ because its invasions always came upon Israel from the North. But the book of Esther shews that, sixty years after this,
the Jews were dispersed over the 127 provinces of the Persian empire, from India (the Punjab) to Ethiopia¹⁵, whether they were purposely placed by the policy of the conquerors in detached groups, as the ten tribes were in the cities of the Medes¹⁶, or whether, when more trusted, they migrated of their own accord. God, in calling them to return, reminds them of the greatness of their dispersion. He had dispersed them abroad as the four winds of heaven¹⁷: He,
the same, recalled them.

7. Dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.
The unusual idiom¹⁸ is perhaps chosen as expressive of God's tenderness, even to the people who were to be destroyed, from which Israel was to escape.

the future being spoken of, as if past. But although פָּרָץ is used of dispersion, beside, in Ps. lxxviii. 16, Nif. Ez. xvii. 21, it is no where used of diffusion, only of the spreading out of what remained coherent, as hands, wings, a garment, tent, veil, cloud, letter, light. See instances Ges. Thes. p. 1132.

8. *After the glory*¹, "which it is promised to bring upon you." This being the usual construction, the words involve a great course of God's dealing, of first shewing favor to those who will receive favor, then abandoning or punishing the rest; as, when the eight souls had been received into the ark, the flood came; when Lot and his had escaped out of Sodom, the fire came down from heaven; when Israel had passed the Red Sea, Pharaoh's hosts were drowned; the election obtained what Israel sought for, the rest were blinded². The glory then would be the glory, of which God says, I will be the glory in the midst of you.

But further He Who speaketh is Almighty God, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, He hath sent³ me; For lo I wave My hand against them—and ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me; Lo I come and dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord, and many nations shall cleave unto the Lord in that day, and they shall be to Me a people and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know, that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you. In all which series of promises, the I, of whom Israel were to know that the Lord of hosts had sent Him, is the I, Who affirms of Himself what belongs to Almighty God only, inflicting punishment on the enemies of Judah, indwelling the Church and people, receiving the Heathen as His own; and it is precisely by all these acts of power and love, that Israel shall know that the Lord of hosts had sent Him.

¹ שָׁלוֹחַ is used with acc. pers., and אָחִיר also of persons, 2 Sam. iii. 26, 2 Kgs viii. 14, or with אָחִיר of pers. alone, 2 Kgs xiv. 9. שָׁלוֹחַ אָחִיר is not elsewhere used like our "sent after a thing." So generally אָחִיר is used with verbs of motion, הִלֵּךְ אָחִיר, Gen. xxxvii. 17, 2 Kgs xxiii. 3; יָבֵא אָחִיר, Nu. xxv. 8; הָיָה אָחִיר, 1 Sam. xii. 14; רָדַף אָחִיר, 2 Kgs xxv. 5; אָחִיר, 1 Sam. xi. 7: or, spiritually, הִלַּכְתִּים אָחִיר כְּחֻשְׁבוֹתֵיהֶם Is. lxx. 2; אָחִיר רוּחַם, Ez. xiii. 3; אָחִיר עֵינֵי הָיָל לִבִּי, Job xxxi. 7; but אָחִיר is not used in our sense of seeking, "going after a thing," except in the one phrase וְאַחֲרָיו כָּל יְרוּק דְּרִישׁ Job xxxix. 8, "searcheth after every green thing." It is the less probable here, because, apart from this, (beside the 5 duplicate passages in Isaiah and 2 Kings, 2 Sam. and 1 Chronicles) the construction of שָׁלוֹחַ with acc. of the person sent and אֵל of the person to whom he is sent, occurs in

"In what follows, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, After glory, He hath sent Me &c., the Saviour is introduced speaking, Who, being Almighty God, saith that He was sent by the Father Almighty, not according to that whereby He was Almighty, but according to that, that, after glory, He was sent, ⁶ Who being in the Form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, and was made obedient unto the Father even unto death; and that, the death of the Cross. Nor is it marvel that Christ is called Almighty, in Whose Person we read in the Apocalypse of John, ⁷ These things saith the faithful Witness—I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which was and which is and which is to come, the Almighty, ⁸ to Whom all power is given in heaven and in earth; and Who saith, ⁹ All things of the Father's are Mine. But if all things, i. e. God from God, Lord from Lord, Light from Light, therefore also Almighty from Almighty; for it cannot be, that diverse should be the glory of those whose Nature is One."

For he who toucheth, so as to injure¹⁰ you, toucheth the apple of His eye, i. e. of Him Who sent Him, Almighty God¹¹, as in the song of Moses, ¹² He led him about, He instructed him, He kept him as the apple of His eye; and David prays, ¹³ Keep me as the apple of the eye.

And ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent Me. "2 He was sent, not as God, but as Man. For as God He is equal to the Father. For He saith, "3 I am in the Father and the Father in Me, and, The Father Who dwelleth in Me He doeth the works, and, "4 I and My Father are one, and "5 He who hath seen Me hath seen the Father. But He is sent, as Man, fulfilling the dispensation for us, not lessening the Divine Nature. The Prophet then intimated not the duality only, but the equality of the Persons."

10. Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion. It is a great jubilee of joy, to which Zion is invited. Thrice beside is she invited with this same word, and all for the restored or renewed Presence of God. "6 Cry aloud for joy, thou barren which bare not, as here, on the coming in of the Gentiles, "7 Cry aloud for joy, O daughter of Zion; jubilate, O Israel; rejoice and exult with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem; the Lord, the King of Israel, is in the midst of thee. "8 Shout and cry aloud for joy, O inhabitant of Zion; for great is the midst of thee is the Holy One of Israel. The source of joy is a fresh coming of God, a coming, whereby He should dwell abidingly among them: truly what is this, but the Incarnation? As S. John saith, "9 The Word was made Flesh and dwelt among us; and, "10 Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them and shall be their God. "11 Hence too you may learn how great a subject of contentment above is the Presence of the Saviour upon earth. He could not then but bid the spiritual Zion, "12 which is the Church of the Living God, the most sacred multitude of those saved by faith, to cry aloud for joy and rejoice. But it was announced that He should come and be in the midst of her. For S. John saith to us, The Word "13 was in the world, and, being God, was not severed from His creatures, but He was Himself the Source of life to all living, and holding all things together to well-being and life; but "14 the world knew Him not: for it worshipped the creature. But He came among us, when, taking our likeness, He was conceived by the holy Virgin, and "15 was seen upon earth and conversed with men, and the divine David witnesseth saying, "16 Our God shall come manifestly, and shall not keep silence. Then also was there a haven for the Gentiles. For now no longer was the race of Israel alone taught, but the whole earth was engoldened with the evangelical preachings, and in every nation and country great is His Name."

"17 This too is to be understood of the Person of the Lord, that He exhorts His people, being restored from the captivity to their former abode, to be glad and rejoice, because the Lord Himself cometh and dwelleth in the midst of her, and many nations shall believe in Him, of Whom it is said, "18 Ask of Me and I will give Thee nations for Thine inheritance, and the ends of the earth for Thy possession, and He shall dwell in the midst of them, as He saith to His disciples, "19 Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

11. And many nations shall join themselves, cleaving to Him by a close union. Isaiah had so spoken of single proselytes¹⁹; Jeremiah had used the word of Israel's self-exhortation after the return from Babylon; "20 going and weeping, they shall go and seek the Lord their God, saying, Come and let us join ourselves unto the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten. This Zechariah now predicts of many nations. The Jews were scarcely half-restored themselves, a mere handful. They had wrought no conversions among the heathen, yet prophecy continues its unbroken voice, many nations shall join themselves unto the Lord.

And shall be My people, lit. be to Me a people. This is exactly the history of the Christian Church, unity amid diversity; many nations still retaining their national existence, yet owned by God as one people and His own. The words are those in which God adopted Israel in Egypt; ¹ I will take you to Me for a people, and I will be your God. This was the covenant with them, ² that thou shouldst enter into covenant with the Lord thy God,—that He may establish thee to-day for a people unto Himself, and that He may be unto thee a God. The contrary was the title of the heathen, ³ not a people; with whom God said, I will move Israel to jealousy. The closeness of union Jeremiah expresses; ⁴ As the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave to Me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the Lord, that they might be unto Me for a people and for a name and for a praise and for a glory. This was the object of the existence of Israel; to this it was to be restored ⁵ by conversion ⁶; to this special privilege of Israel many nations were to be admitted; yet not so as to be separate from Israel, for He adds, and I will dwell in, the midst of thee, Judah. God would dwell in His Church, formed of Israel and the Gentiles, yet so that the Gentiles should be grafted into Israel, becoming one with them.

12. And the Lord shall inherit Judah His portion. The inheritance of the Lord is the title which God commonly gave to Israel. God is said to be the portion of Israel ⁷; of the pious ⁸; once only beside, is Israel said to be the portion of God ⁹; once only is God said to inherit Israel, ¹⁰ Pardon our iniquity and our sin, and take us for thine inheritance. Zechariah unites the two rare idioms.

In the holy land. The land is again made holy by God, and sanctified by His Presence. So He calls the place where He revealed Himself to Moses, holy ground ¹². So it is said, ¹³ the holy place, ¹⁴ the holy house, ¹⁵ the holy ark, ¹⁶ the holy city, ¹⁷ the holy mountain, ¹⁸ the holy people, ¹⁹ the holy chambers, or, with reference to their relation to God Who consecrates them, ²⁰ My holy mountain, ²¹ Thy holy habitation, ²² Thy holy dwelling-place, ²³ Thy holy temple, ²⁴ Thy holy mountain, ²⁵ Thy holy oracle, ²⁶ Thy holy city, ²⁷ cities, ²⁸ His holy place, ²⁹ His holy border. It is not one technical expression, as people now by a sort of effort speak of "the holy land." Everything which has reference to God is holy. The land is holy, not for any merits of theirs, but because God was worshiped there, was specially present there. It was an anticipation and type of "Thy holy Church throughout all the world doth acknowledge Thee." This land their fathers had ³⁰ polluted with blood; God says, ³¹ they defiled My land; Ezekiel called her eminently, ³² the land that is not cleansed. Now God said, ³³ I will remove the iniquity of the land, and she was again a holy land, as hallowed by Him.

It is not a mere conversion of the heathen, but, as Isaiah ³⁴ and Micah ³⁵ foretold; a conversion, of which Jerusalem should be the centre, as our Lord explained to the Apostles after His Resurrection, ³⁶ that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

13. Be silent, lit. hush¹, all flesh, before the Lord; man in his weakness², flesh and blood in the language of the New Testament³, before God his Maker. All flesh, the whole human race⁴, is to be hushed before God, because His judgments, as His mercies, are over all.

For God ariseth. God seemeth to be quiescent, as it were, when He bears with us; to arise, when He puts forth His power, either for us, when we pray, ° Lord, awake to help me; or in displeasure. His holy habitation is alike the tabernacle⁵, temple⁶, heaven⁷, since His presence is in all.

III. 1. And He, God, (for the office of the attendant angel was to explain, not to shew
the visions) shewed me Joshua the High Priest, standing before the Angel of the Lord; probably to be judged by him⁸; as in the New Testament, to stand before the Son of Man; for although standing before, whether in relation to man⁹ or God¹⁰, expresses attendance upon, yet here it appears only as a condition, contemporaneous¹¹ with that of Satan's, to accuse him. Although, moreover, the Angel speaks with authority, yet God's Presence in him is not spoken of so distinctly, that the High Priest would be exhibited as standing before him, as in his office before God.

And Satan, etymologically, the enemy, as, in the New Testament, ¹² your adversary the devil, etymologically, the accuser. It is a proper name of the Evil one, yet its original meaning, the enemy¹³, was not lost. Here, as in Job, his malice is shewn in accusation; ¹⁴ the accuser of our brethren, who accused them before our God, day and night. In Job¹⁵, the accusations were calumnious; here, doubtless, true. For he accused Job of what would have been plain apostasy¹⁶; Joshua and Zerubbabel had shared, or given way to, the remissness of the people, as to the rebuilding of the temple and the full restoration of the worship of God¹⁷. For this, Haggai had reproved the people, through them¹⁸. Satan had then a real charge, on which to implead them. Since also the whole series of visions relates to the restoration from the captivity, the guilt, for which Satan impleads him with Jerusalem and Jerusalem in him, includes the whole guilt, which had rested upon them, so that for a time God had seemed to have cast away His people¹⁹. Satan stands at his right hand, the place of a protector²⁰, to shew that he had none to save him, and that himself was victorious.

ch. 6. 11.

See, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee; the pardoning words of the Lord to David by Nathan, 'The Lord too hath put away thy sin. And clothe thee² with change of raiment³, i. e. such as were taken off and reserved for great occasions. As the filthy garments were not necessarily other than the High Priest's vesture, symbolically defiled through the sins of the people, so neither need these be other than the priestly garments in their purity and freshness. The words imply the condition, not the nature of the vestment. "The high-priest having been thus taken to represent the whole people, the filthy garments would be no unclear symbol of the wickedness of the people. For clad, as it were, with their sins, with the ill-effaceable spot of ungodliness, they abode in captivity, subject to retribution, paying the penalty of their unholy deeds. But when God had pity on them, He bade them be freed from their defilements, and in a manner re-clad with justifying grace. He indicates to them the end of their toils. For where remission of sin is, there follows of necessity freedom from the evils brought through sin."—He adds that a clean mitre should be put upon his head,⁴ that so we might understand that the glory of the priesthood ever, in a sort, concurs with the condition of the people. For the boast of the priesthood is the purity of those in their charge.—As then when the people was in sin, the raiment of the priest also was in a manner defiled, so if it were again well-approved, pure and bright is the fashion of the priesthood, and free its access to God. So the divine Paul having ministered to the Gentiles the Gospel of Christ, seeing them advancing in graces, writes, ^eBy your boast, brethren, which I have in Christ Jesus, and, ^fmy joy and crown."

5. And I said, let them set a fair mitre^g on his head. This seems to have been purposely omitted, in order to leave something, and that, the completion of all, to be done at the intercession of the prophet. The glory and complement of the High Priest's sacrificial attire was the mitre with the holy crown upon it and the plate of pure gold, on which was graven, Holiness to the Lord^h; which was to be upon the High-priest's forehead, that he may bear the iniquity of the holy things which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts; which was always to be upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord. The renewed gift of this was reserved for the intercession of man co-working with God.

The charge is given to Joshua, and in him to all successive high-priests, while Israel should continue to be God's people, as the condition of their acceptance.

7. If thou wilt walk in My ways and if thou wilt keep My charge. Both of these are expressions, dating from the Pentateuch, for holding on in the way of life, well-pleasing to God and keeping the charge given by God^k. It was the injunction of the dying David to Solomon, ^lKeep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in His ways, to keep His statutes &c.

Then shall thou also judge My house.
Judgment, in the place of God, was part of the High-priest's office¹. Yet these judgments also were given in the house of God.
The cause was directed to be brought to God, and He through His priests judged it.
Both then may be comprehended in the world, the oversight of the people itself and the judgment of all causes brought to it.
"Thou shalt judge those who minister in the house of My sanctuary."

And I will give thee place to walk among those who stand by², i.e. among the ministering spirits, who were ³standing before the Angel of the Lord. This can be fully only after death, when the saints shall be received among the several choirs of angels. "In the resurrection of the dead I will revive thee and give thee feet walking among these Seraphim." Even in this life, since ⁴our conversation is in heaven, and the life of priests should be an angel-life, it may mean, that he should have free access to God,
his soul in heaven, while his body was on this earth.

8. Thou and thy companions which sit before thee; yea⁵ men of marvelous signs are they⁶.
It seems probable that the words addressed to Joshua begin here; else the men of signs would be the companions of Joshua, to the exclusion of Himself. His companions are probably ordinary priests, who sit as sharing his dignity as priest, but before him, as infe-riors. So Ezekiel says, "I was sitting in my house, and the elders of Israel were sitting before me. They are ⁷images of the things to come.

Isaiah's two sons, with their prophetic names, Haste-spoil spread-prey, and a-remnant shall-return, were with his own name, salvation-of-the-Lord, ¹⁰signs and portents of the future Israel. Isaiah, walking naked and barefoot, was ¹¹a sign and portent against Egypt. God tells Ezekiel, that in the removal of his stuff, as stuff for the captivity, ¹²I have set thee for a portent unto the house of Israel. I, he explains his act¹³, am your portent; like as I have done, so shall it be done unto you. When forbidden to mourn on the death of his wife; ¹⁴Ezekiel is unto you for a portent; according to all that he hath done, shall ye do; and when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord God.
Wherein then were Joshua and the other priests portents of what should be? One fact alone had stood out, the forgiveness of sins. Accusation and full forgiveness, out of God's free mercy, were the substance of the whole previous vision. It was the full reinstatement of the priesthood. The priesthood so restored was the portent of what was to come. To ¹⁵offer the offering of the people, and make an atonement for them; ¹⁶to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins once a year, was the object of the existence of the priesthood. Typical only it could be, because they had but the blood of bulls and goats to offer, which could, in themselves, ¹⁷never take away sins. But in this their act they were portents of what was to come. He adds here, For, behold, I will bring My Servant the Branch.

The Branch had now become, or Zechariah made it, a proper name. Isaiah had prophesied, ¹⁸In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious for the escaped of דין is used metaphorically of the people of God, parallel word My courts, shews that the house is the literal temple.

Israel; and, in reference to the low estate of him who should come, ¹ There shall come forth a rod out of the stump of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots; and Jeremiah, ² Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth, and this is the name whereby He shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness; and, ³ In those days and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David, and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. Of him Zechariah afterward spoke as, ⁴ a man whose name is the Branch. Here Zechariah names him simply, as a proper name, My servant [the] Branch, as Ezekiel prophesied of ⁵ My servant David. The title My servant, which is Isaiah's chiefest title of the Messiah, occurs in connection with the same image of His youth's lowly estate, and of His atoning Death. ⁶ He shall grow up before Him as a sucker, and as a root from a dry ground; ⁷ a scion shall grow out of his roots. ⁸ He alone was above all marked by this name, who never in anything withdrew from the Will of God. ⁹ God had before promised to Joshua, i. e. to the priesthood of the law, that they should judge His house and fulfill the types of the legal worship. Yet not long after, the things of the law were to be translated into the true worship, and the unloveliness of the types to be recast into the lovely spiritual polity. ¹⁰ A righteous king was to reign and princes to rule with judgment, as the Prophet spake. Another priest was to arise, after the order, ¹¹ not of Aaron but of Melchizedec, ¹² a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle which God pitched and not man. For our Lord Jesus Christ entered the holy of holies, ¹³ not by the blood of bulls and goats, but by His own Blood, having obtained eternal redemption, and ¹⁴ having by One Oblation perfected for ever them that are sanctified. Lest then God should seem to have spoken untruly, in promising to the legal priesthood that it should ever have the oversight over His house, there was need to fore-announce the mystery of Christ, that the things of the law should cease and He Himself should judge His own house through the Scion from Himself, His Son."

¹⁵ Look ye to the Branch of the Lord; set Him as the example of life; in Him, as a most strong tower, place with most becoming faith all your hope of salvation and immortality. For He is not only a Branch, who shall fill you with the richness of Divine fruit, but a stone also, to break all the essays of the enemy."

⁹ For behold the stone, that I have laid before Joshua. This must be an expansion of what he had said, or the ground of it, being introduced by, for. It must be something future, to be done by God Himself, since God says, I will grave the graving thereof; something connected with the remission of sins, which follows upon that graving. The stone, then, cannot be the stone of foundation of the material temple¹⁵. For this had long before been laid. The head-corner-stone, the completion of the building¹⁶, had nothing remarkable, why God should be said to grave it. The plumbline¹⁷ was not a part even of the material temple. The stone is one stone. But to interpret it by other prophecy, one stone there is, of which God says, ¹⁸ Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation, he that believeth shall not make haste; that stone, of which our Lord reminded the Jews, ¹⁹ the stone which the builders refused is become the head-stone of the corner; ²⁰ Jesus Christ Himself, the chief corner-stone, in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth into an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.

On this stone had Joshua, with all those typical priests, to look, in Whom Alone they and all have forgiveness, Whose Sacrifice their sacrifices pictured and pleaded. "It," says an old mystical Jewish book²¹, "is the stone of foundation, on which the earth is founded, which God Himself laid, that the world might receive blessing from it." ²² The Shechinah is called the stone, through which the world subsisteth; of which thing which concurs to its beauty. "1 This stone is of earth, and of the power and workmanship of God." "2 It signifies Him Who had His birth in virgin-earth, but framed skillfully by the power of the Holy Spirit." That Precious stone was further graven, through the Providence and Will of God, when "3 He caused it to be wounded by the nails of the Cross and the soldier's lance, and in His Passion took away the iniquity of the earth in one day, of which it is written, 'This in the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it.' Beautiful were the gifts and graces which Christ received, as Man; but beautiful beyond all beauty must be those glorious scars, with which He allowed His whole Body to be riven, that "4 throughout the whole frame His love might be engraven." "6 What even in the Body of the Lord can be lovelier or more lightful than those five Wounds, which He willed to retain in His immortal Being, lest the blessed should be deprived of that splendor, surpassing far the light of sun and stars?"

And I will remove the iniquity of the land in one day. On one day in the year was the typical atonement; in one day absolutely, God Himself would make the iniquity of that land to depart. One day is always emphatic¹, that things are crowded into it, which seemed too much for one day. Year by year came the day of atonement: its yearly repetition shewed that nothing lasting was effected. On one day that removal should be, which needed no renewal². A Jewish writer confessed the mystery, while he said³, "One day; I know not what that day is." Ask any Christian child, "On what day was iniquity removed, not from the land only, but from all lands?" he would say, "On the day when Jesus Died."

10 Under the vine and under the fig tree. Micah had already made the description of the peaceful days of Solomon¹⁰, a symbol¹¹ of the universal fearless peace of the time of Christ. "12 Christ by His Passion shall not only take away iniquity, but also bring peace, delight, free communication of all things, so that all things among Christians should be common. For the law of Christ enjoineth charity, forgiveness of injuries, patience, love of enemies &c., all which bring temporal peace."

IV. 1. The angel came again. The angel (as before¹³) had gone forth to receive some fresh instruction from a higher angel or from God.

And awakened me, as a man is awakened out of sleep. Zechariah, overwhelmed by the greatness of the visions, must have sunk down in a sort of stupor, as after the vision of the ram and he-goat, as Gabriel was speaking with him, Daniel says, "14 I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground, and he touched me and set me upright; and again at the voice of the angel, who, after his three weeks' fast¹⁵, came to declare to him¹⁶ the scripture of truth; and at the Transfiguration, "17 Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep, and when they were awake, they saw His glory." "18 Wondrous and stupendous mysteries were they which were shewn to the divine man. He saw the Branch of the Lord; he saw His invincible might; he saw His brightness of Divine intelligence and Providence; he saw the amplitude of beauty and dignity. Nailed then and struck still with amazement, while he revolved these things in his mind, sunk in a sort of sleep, he is borne out of himself and, mantled around with darkness, understands that the secret things of Divine wisdom cannot be perfectly comprehended by the mind of any. This then he attained that, his senses being overpowered, he should see nothing, save that wherein is the sum of wisdom, that this

6. This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel. "As if he were to say, the meaning of the vision and scope of what has been exhibited is, 'God's doings have almost cried aloud to Zerubbabel that all these visions shall come to an end in their time, not effected by human might nor in fleshly strength, but in power of the Holy Ghost and through Divine Will.' For the Only Begotten became Man as we: but He warred not after the flesh, to set up the Church as a candlestick to the world, nor did He, through sensible weapons and armed phalanxes, make those two people His own, or place the spiritual lights on the candlestick; but in the might of His own Spirit He appointed in the Church 'first Apostles, then prophets and evangelists, and all the rest of the saintly band, filling them with Divine gifts and enriching them abundantly by the influx of His Spirit.'"

"1 Not then in great power nor in fleshy might were the things of Christ, but in power of the Spirit was Satan spoiled, and the ranks of the adverse powers fell with him; and Israel and those who aforesaid served the creature rather than the Creator, were called to the knowledge of God through faith. But that He saved all under heaven, not by human arm, but by His own power as God Emmanuel, Hosea too protested ², I will have mercy upon the house of Judah and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow nor by sword nor by battle nor by chariots nor by horses nor by horsemen. But exceeding fittingly was this said to Zerubbabel, who was of the tribe of Judah and at that time administered the royal seat at Jerusalem. For that he might not think that, since such glorious successes were fore-announced to him, wars would in their season have to be organized, he lifts him up from these unsound and human thoughts, and bids him be thus minded, that the force was divine, the might of Christ, Who should bring such things to pass, and not human."

Having given this key of the whole vision, without explaining its details, God enlarges what He had said to Zerubbabel, as He had in the preceding chapter to Joshua ³.

7. Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt be a plain. The words have the character of a sacred proverb; ⁴ Every one that exalteth himself shall be abased. Isaiah prophesies the victories of the Gospel in the same imagery, ⁵ Every valley shall be exalted and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight and the rough places plain. And in the New Testament S. Paul says, ⁶ The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. As it is the character of Anti-Christ, that he ⁷ opposeth and exalteth himself above everything that is called God, so of Satan himself it had been said in the former vision, that he stood at the right hand of Joshua ⁸ to resist him. So then the mountain symbolizes every resisting power; Satan and all his instruments, who, each in his turn, shall oppose himself and be brought low. In the first instance, it was Sanballat and his companions, who opposed the rebuilding of the temple, on account of the "exclusiveness" of Zerubbabel and Joshua ⁹, because they would not make the temple the abode of a mixed worship of him whom they call your God and of their own idolatries. In all and each of his instruments, the persecuting Emperors or the heretics, it was the one adversary. ¹⁰ "The words seem all but to rebuke the great mountain, i. e. Satan, who riseth up and leadeth against Christ the power of his own stubbornness, who was figuratively spoken of before ¹¹.—For that as far as it was allowed and in him lay, he warred fiercely against the Saviour, no one would doubt, who considered how he approached Him when fasting in the wilderness, and seeing Him saving all below, willed to make Him his own worshipper, shewing Him ¹² all the kingdoms of the world, saying that all should be His, if He would fall down and worship him. Then out of the very choir of the holy Apostles he snatched the traitor disciple, persuading him to become the instrument of the Jewish perverseness. He asks him, Who art thou? disparaging him and making him of no account, great as the mountain was and hard to withstand, and in the way of every one who would bring about such things for Christ, of Whom, as we said, Zerubbabel was a type."

And he shall bring forth the headstone ¹³. The foundation of the temple had long been laid. Humanly it still hung in the balance whether they would be permitted to complete it ¹⁴: Zechariah foretells absolutely that they would. Two images appear to be used in Holy Scripture, both of which meet in Christ: the one, in which the stone spoken of is the foundation-stone; the other, in which it is the head corner-stone binding the two walls together, which it connects. Both were corner stones; the one at the base, the other at the summit. In Isaiah the whole emphasis is on the foundation; ¹ Behold Me Who have laid in Zion a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, well-founded. In the Psalm, the building had been commenced; those who were building had disregarded and despised the stone, but *it became the head of the corner, crowning and binding the work in one*². Both images together express, how Christ is the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last; the Foundation of the spiritual building, the Church, and its summit and completion; the unseen Foundation which was laid deep in Calvary, and the Summit to which it grows and which holds it firm together. Whence S. Peter unites the two prophecies, and blends with them that other of Isaiah, that Christ would ³ be a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence. To Whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men but chosen of God and precious, ye also are built up a spiritual house—Whence also it is contained in the Scripture, Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner-stone, elect, precious:—unto you which believe He is precious, but: unto them which be disobedient, the same stone which the builders refused is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence, to them which stumble at the word being disobedient.

With shoutings⁵, grace, grace unto it, i. e. all favor from God unto it, redoubled favors, grace upon grace. The completion of the building was but the commencement of the dispensation under it. It was the beginning not the end. They pray then for the continued and manifold grace of God, that He would carry on the work, which He had begun. Perseverance, by the grace of God, crowns the life of the Christian; our Lord's abiding presence in grace with His Church unto the end of the world, is the witness that He Who founded her upholds her in being.

8. And the word of the Lord. ⁶ This word of the Lord is not addressed through 'the interpreting angel,' but direct from the Lord, and that through the 'Angel of the Lord.' ⁷ For though in the first instance the words, the hands of Zerubbabel &c., relate to the building of the material temple, and announce its completion through Zerubbabel, yet the inference, and thou shalt know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you, shews that the meaning is not exhausted thereby, but that here too this building is mentioned only as a type of the building of the spiritual temple⁸; and the completion of the typical temple is but a pledge of the completion of the true temple. For not through the completion of the material temple, but only through the building of the kingdom of God, shadowed forth by it, can Judah know, that the Angel of the Lord was sent to him."

of small things? and [i. e. seeing that?] there have rejoiced and seen the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel, these seven, the Eyes of the Lord, they are running to and fro in all the earth, i. e. since God hath with joy and good-pleasure beheld the progress of the work of Zerubbabel, who can despise the day of small things? The day of small things was not only that of the foundation of the temple, but of its continued building also. The old men indeed, that had seen the first house, wept with a loud voice, when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes². But while in progress too, Haggai asks, ⁴ Who is left among you that saw this house in its first glory? And how do ye see it now? is not in your eyes such as it, as nothing? But that temple was to see the day of great things, when ⁵ the later glory of this house shall be greater than the former, and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts.

They are the eyes of the Lord which run to and fro. He uses almost the words of the prophet Hanani to Asa³, the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew Himself strong in behalf of those whose heart is perfect toward Him. Yet this assurance that God's watchful Providence is over the whole earth, betokens more than the restoration of the material temple, whose only hindrance could be the will of one man, Darius.

The day of small things is especially God's day, Whose strength is made perfect in weakness;

"Wouldst thou be great? Become little." "Whenever," said S. Theresa¹, "I am to receive some singular grace, I first annihilate myself, sink into my own nothingness, so as to seem to myself to be nothing, be capable of nothing."

11. And I answered and said. The vision, as a whole, had been explained to him. The prophet asks as to subordinate parts, which seemed perhaps inconsistent with the whole. If the whole imports that everything should be done by the Spirit of God, not by human power, what means it that there are these two olive-trees? And when the Angel returned no answer, to invite perhaps closer attention and a more definite question, he asks again;

12. What are the two spikes² of the olive? comparing the extreme branches of the olive-tree, laden with their fruit, to the ears of corn, which were by or in the hand of³ the golden pipes⁴, which empty forth the golden oil from themselves. Zechariah's expression, in the hand of or, if so be, by the hand of the two pipes, shews that these two were symbols of living agents, for it is nowhere used except of a living agent, or of that which it personified as such⁵.

⁴ Of the 276 cases beside this, in which כִּיד occurs, in three only is it used of any other than a personal agent, and in these the agent is personified; Job viii. 4, and he cast them away in the hand of their transgression; Prov. xviii. 21, death and life are

Which stand by the Lord of the whole earth, as His servants and ministers.

The candlestick is almost authoritatively interpreted for us, by the adoption of the symbol in the Revelation, where our Lord is exhibited³ as walking in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, and, it is said, 'the seven candlesticks are the seven Churches; and our Lord says to the Apostles, on whom He founded the Church; ⁴Ye are the light of the world: men light a candle, and put it on a candlestick, and it giveth light to them that are in the house.'

"The golden candlestick is the Church, as being honored in the world, most bright in virtues, raised on high exceedingly by the doctrines of the true knowledge of God. But there are seven lamps, having light, not of their own, but brought to them from without, and nourished by the supplies through the olive tree. These signify the holy Apostles, Evangelists, and those who, each in their season, were teachers of the Churches, receiving, like lamps, into their mind and heart the illumination from Christ, which is nourished by the supplies of the Spirit, casting forth light to those who are in the house." "The pipes of the lamps, which pour in the oil, signify the unstinted prodigality of the loving-kindness of God to man."

The most difficult of explanation (as is plain from the variety of interpretations) is this last symbol of the spikes of the olive-tree, through whom flows the oil of the Holy Spirit to the candlesticks, and which yet represent created beings, ministers, and servants of God. Perhaps it represents that, in the Church, grace is ministered through men, as S. Paul says, ⁵Unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore he saith, when He asin the power, lit. the hand, of the tongue; Is. lxi. 6, thou hast made us to melt away by the hand of our iniquities. With regard to צִדִּיק, צִדִּיק, this could not be otherwise; but also in the 92 cases in which צִדִּיק is used, in which צִדִּיק is used, and צִדִּיק, occurs, the pronoun relates to a personal agent.

cended up on high, He led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men. And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers, for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ—that we may grow up into Him in all things which is the Head, even Christ, from Whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love. What S. Paul expresses by⁶ all the body, having nourishment ministered and being knit together by joints and bands, from the Head, and so increasing with the increase of God, (as he elsewhere speaks of⁷ the ministration of the Spirit; ⁸he that ministereth to you the Spirit) that Zechariah may express by the oil being poured, through the living⁹ tubes, the bowl, the sevenfold pipes, into the lamps, which shone with the God-given light. So S. Paul speaks again, of¹⁰ having this treasure in earthen vessels. Joshua and Zerubbabel, as representatives of the priestly and royal offices, shadowed forth what was united in Christ, and so, in their several offices, they might be included in the symbol of the olive-tree, they could not exhaust it; for men who, having served God in their generation, were to pass away, could not be alone intended in a vision, which describes the abiding being of the Church.

"Christ is both All-holy Priest and supreme Eternal King. In both ways He supplies to us the light which He brought. For from Him piety and righteousness flow unceasingly to the Church, that it never lack the heavenly light. The oil is expressed into tubes; thence passed through pipes into the vessel which contains the lamps; to designate the various-suppliers of light, which, the nearer they are to the effluence of the oil, the more they resemble Him by Whom they are appointed to so Divine an office. The seven lamps are the manifold Churches, distinct in place but most closely bound together by the consent of one faith and by the bond of charity. For although the Church is one, yet it is distinct according to the manifold variety of nations. They are said to be seven, both on account of the seven gifts of the Spirit, mentioned by Isaiah, and because in the numbers 3 and 4, is contained an emblem of piety and righteousness. There are 7 pipes to each lamp, to signify that each has need of many instruments, that the light may be maintained longer. For as there are diversities of gifts, so must there needs be the functions of many ministers, to complete one work. But the lamps are set in a circle, that the oil of one may flow more readily into others, and it, in turn, may receive from others their superabundance, to set forth the communion of love and the indissoluble community of faith."

V. 1. Hitherto all had been bright, full of the largeness of the gifts of God; of God's favor to His people¹; the removal of their enemies²; the restoration and expansion and security of God's people and Church under His protection³; the acceptance of the present typical priesthood and the promise of Him, through Whom there should be entire forgiveness⁴; the abiding illumining of the Church by the Spirit of God⁵. Yet there is a reverse side to all this, God's judgments on those who reject all His mercies. ⁶Prophecies partly appertain to those in whose times the sacred writers prophesied, partly to the mysteries of Christ. And therefore it is the wont of the prophets, at one time to chastise vices and set forth punishments, at another to predict the mysteries of Christ and the Church."

And I turned and, or, Again⁷ I lifted up my eyes, having again sunk down in meditation on what he had seen, and behold a roll flying; as, to Ezekiel was shewn a hand with a roll of a book therein, and he spread it before me. Ezekiel's roll also was ^cwritten within and without, and there was written therein lamentation and mourning and woe. It was a wide unfolded roll, as is involved in its flying; but its ^d"flight signified the very swift coming of punishment; its flying from heaven that the sentence came from the judgment-seat above."

2 And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits.

2. And he (the interpreting angel) said unto me. It cannot be without meaning, that the dimensions of the roll should be those of the tabernacle¹⁰, as the last vision was that of the candlestick, after the likeness of the candlestick therein. The explanations of this correspondence do not exclude each other. It may be that ¹¹judgment shall begin at the house of God; that the punishment on sin is proportioned to the nearness of God and the knowledge of Him; that the presence of God, which was for life, might also be to death, as S. Paul says; ¹²God maketh manifest the savor of this knowledge by us in every place; for we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved and in them that perish; to the one we are the savor of death unto death, and to the other the savor of life unto life; and Simeon said, ¹³This child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel.

Over the face of the whole earth, primarily land, since the perjured persons, upon whom the curse was to fall¹⁴, were those who swore falsely by the name of God: and this was in Judah only. The reference to the two tables of the law also confines it primarily to those who were under the law. Yet, since the moral law abides under the Gospel, ultimately these visions related to the Christian Church, which was to be spread over the whole earth. The roll apparently was shewn, as is fixed by the six boards, i. e. nine cubits, with the two boards for the corners of the tabernacle in the two sides. Ib. 22, 23. Josephus gives the whole thirty cubits long, (the holy of holies being ten cubits square) ten broad (Ant. 3. 6. 3.). Kimchi strangely neglects this, and refers to the porch of Solomon's temple, in which the dimensions of the tabernacle were repeated (1 Kgs vi. 3.), but which was itself only an ornament to the temple.

"He calleth curse that vengeance, which goeth through the whole world, and is brought upon the workers of iniquity. But hereby both prophets and people were taught, that the God of all is the judge of all men, and will exact meet punishment of all, bringing utter destruction not on those only who live ungodly toward Himself, but on those also who are unjust to their neighbors. For let no one think that this threat was only against thieves and false-swearers; for He gave sentence against all iniquity. For since all the law and the prophets hang on this word, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself, He comprised every sort of sin under false swearing and theft. The violation of oaths is the head of all ungodliness. One who so doeth is devoid of the love of God. But theft indicates injustice to one's neighbor; for no one who loves his neighbor will endure to be unjust to him. These heads then comprehend all the other laws."

Shall be cut off, lit. *cleansed away*², as something defiled and defiling, which has to be cleared away as offensive: as God says, I will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone, and so often in Deuteronomy, *thou shalt put the evil away from the midst of thee*³, or of the oath; yet Oath hath a son, nameless, handless, footless; but swift he pursueth, until he grasp together and destroy the the whole race and house." "1 In the third generation, there was nought descended from him," who had consulted about this perjury, "nor hearthstone reputed to be his. It had been uprooted and effaced." A Heathen orator² relates, as well known, that "the perjurer escapes not the vengeance of the gods, and if not himself, yet the sons and whole race of the foresworn fall into great misfortunes." God left not Himself without witness.

"3 The prophet speaks of the curse inflicted on the thieves and false swearers of his own day; but à fortiori he includes that which came upon them for slaying Christ. For this was the greatest of all, which utterly overthrew and consumed Jerusalem, the temple and polity, so that that ancient and glorious Jerusalem exists no longer, as Christ threatened. "4 They shall lay thee even with the ground, and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another. This resteth upon them these" 1800 "years."

5. Then the angel went forth from the choirs of angels, among whom, in the interval, he had retired, as before⁵ he had gone forth to meet another angel.

6. This is the ephah that goeth forth. "6 We too are taught by this, that the Lord of all administers all things in weight and measure. So, foretelling to Abraham that his seed should be a sojourner and the cause thereof, He says, "7 for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full, i.e., they have not yet committed sins enough to merit entire destruction, wherefore I cannot yet endure to give them over to the slaughter, but will wait for the measure of their iniquity." The relation then of this vision to the seventh is, that the seventh tells of God's punishment on individual sinners; this, on the whole people, when the iniquity of the whole is full.

This is their resemblance, as we say, their look⁸, i.e. the look, appearance, of the inhabitants⁹ in all the land. This then being the condition of the people of the land, at the time to which the vision relates, the symbolical carrying away of the full measure of sin cannot be its forgiveness, since there was no repentance, but the taking away of the sin with the sinner. "10 The Lord of all is good and loving to mankind; for He is patient toward sinners and endures transgressors, waiting for the repentance of each; but if one perseveres long in iniquity, and come to the term of the endurance allowed, it remains that he should be subjected to punishment, and there is no account of this long forbearance, nor can he be exempt from judgment proportioned to what he has done. So then Christ says to the Jewish people, rushing with unbridled phrensy to all strange excess, "11 Fill ye up the measure of your fathers. The measure then, which was seen, pointed to the filling up of the measure of the transgression of the people against Himself."

"12 The angel bids him behold the sins of the people Israel, heaped together in a perfect measure, and the transgression of all fulfilled—that the sins, which escaped notice, one by one, might, when collected together, be laid open to the eyes of all, and Israel might go forth from its place, and it might be shewn to all what she was in her own land." "13 I think the Lord alluded to the words of the prophet, as though He would say, Fill up the measure of sins which your fathers began of old, as it is in Zechariah, i.e. ye will soon fill it; for ye so haste to do evil, that ye will soon fill it to the utmost."

lead, the heaviest Hebrew weight, elsewhere of gold or silver; the golden talent weighing, 1,300,000 grains; the silver, 660,000; here, being lead, it is obviously an undefined mass, though circular¹, corresponding to the Ephah. The Ephah too was the largest Hebrew measure, whose compass cannot now, with certainty, be ascertained². Both probably were, in the vision, ideal. "³ Holy Scripture calleth the punishment of sin, lead, as being by nature heavy. This the divine David teacheth us, 'mine iniquities are gone over my head: as an heavy burden, they are too heavy for me.' The divine Zechariah seeth sin under the image of a woman; for most evils are engendered by luxury. But he seeth the punishment, like most heavy lead, lying upon the mouth of iniquity, according to a Psalm, 'all iniquity shall stop her mouth.'" "⁴ Iniquity, as with a talent of lead, weighs down the conscience."

This is a woman, lit. one woman, all sin being concentrated and personified in one, as he goes on to speak of her as the, personified, *wickedness*⁵. The sitting may represent her abiding tranquil condition in her sins, according to the climax in the first Psalm, 'and hath not sat in the seat of the scornful; and, 'thou sittest and speakest against thy brother;" "⁶ not standing as by the way, but sitting, as if of set purpose, of wont and habit." "⁷ Whoso hath peace in sins is not far from lying down in them, so that, oppressed by a spirit of slumber, he neither sees light, nor feels any blow, but is kept down by the leaden talent of his obduracy."

² It is thought that Josephus (Ant. 15. 9. 2.) put the μέτρον by mistake for the μετρητής, which is 3/4 of the μέτρον; the μετρητής holding nine of our gallons, the μέτρον twelve. The Ephah was probably an Egyptian measure, since the LXX substitute οἰαί &c. corresponding to the Egyptian word for "measure," and Ephah has no Semitic etymology.

had wings like the wings of a stork: and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and the heaven.

8. And cast her into the midst of the Ephah. As yet then the measure was not full. "¹² She had the lower part within the Ephah, but the upper, especially the head, without. Though the Jews had slain the prophets and done many grievous things, the greatest sin of all remained to be done. But when they had crucified Christ and persecuted the Apostles and the Gospel, the measure was full; she was wholly within the Ephah, no part remained without, so that the measure was filled."

And he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof, i. e. doubtless of the Ephah; as in Genesis¹³, a great stone was on the mouth of the well, so that there should be no access to it.

9. There came out two women. It may be that there may be no symbol herein, but that he names women because it was a woman who was so carried; yet their wings were the wings of an unclean bird, strong, powerful, borne by a force not their own; with their will, since they flew; beyond their will, since the wind was in their wings; rapidly, inexorably, irresistibly, they flew and bore the Ephah between heaven and earth. No earthly power could reach or rescue it. God would not. It may be that evil spirits are symbolized, as being like to this personified human wickedness, such as snatch away the souls of the damned, who, by serving them, have become as they.

11. To build it an house in the land of Shinar. The name of Shinar, though strictly Babylonian, carries back to an older power than the world-empire of Babylon; which now too was destroyed. *In the land of Shinar*¹ was that first attempt to array a world-empire against God, ere mankind was yet dispersed. And so it is the apter symbol of the antithesis or Anti-Christian world, which by violence, art, falsehood, sophistry, wars against the truth. To this great world-empire it was to be removed; yet to live there, no longer cramped and confined as within an Ephah, but in pomp and splendor. A house or temple was to be built for it, for its honor and glory; as Dagon² or Ashtaroth³, or Baal⁴ had their houses or temples, a great idol temple, in which the god of this world should be worshiped.

And it—"the house," shall be established firmly on its base, like the house of God, and it, (wickedness⁵) shall be tranquilly rested on its base, as an idol in its temple, until the end come. In the end, the belief of those of old was, that the Jews would have great share in the antagonism to Christ and His empire. At the first, they were the great enemies of the faith, and sent forth, S. Justin says⁶, those everywhere who should circulate the calumnies against Christians, which were made a ground of early persecutions. In the end, it was believed, that Anti-Christ should be from them, that they would receive him as their Christ, the last fulfillment of our Lord's words, I am come in My Father's name and ye receive Me not; another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

VI. 1. Behold, four chariots going forth "by the secret disposal of God into the theatre of the world," from between two mountains of brass. Both Jews⁷ and Christians have seen that the four chariots relate to the same four empires, as the visions in Daniel.

2 In the first chariot were ^ared horses; and in the second chariot ^bblack horses;

3 And in the third chariot ^cwhite horses; and in the fourth chariot grised and || bay horses.

"The two mountains." It may be that the imagery is from the two mountains on either side of the valley of Jehoshaphat, which Joel had spoken of as the place of God's judgment¹⁰, and Zechariah afterward¹¹. It may then picture that the judgments go forth from God. Anyhow the powers, symbolized by the four chariots, are pictured as closed in on either side by these mountains, strong as brass, unsurmountable, undecaying, "that they should not go forth to other lands to conquer, until the time should come, fixed by the counsels of God, when the gates should be opened for their going forth." The mountains of brass may signify the height of the Divine wisdom ordering this, and the sublimity of the power which putteth them in operation; as the Psalmist says, Thy righteousnesses are like the mountains of God.

2. 3. The symbol is different from that in the first vision. There¹⁴, they were horses only, with their riders, to go to and fro to enquire; here they are war-chariots with their horses, to execute God's judgments, each in their turn. In the first vision also, there is not the characteristic fourfold division, which reminds of the four world-empires of Daniel¹⁵; after which, in both prophets, is the mention of the kingdom of Christ. Even if the grised horses be the same as the speckled of the first vision, the black horses are wanting there, as well as the succession, in which they go forth. The only resemblance is, that there are horses of divers colors, two of which, red and white, are the same. The symbol of the fourth empire, grizzled, strong¹⁶, remarkably corresponds with the strength and mingled character of the fourth empire in Daniel.

with the infliction of famine. Of the Medes, Isaiah had said¹, I will stir up the Medes against thee [Babylon], which shall not regard silver; and gold, they shall not delight in it. Their bows also shall dash the young men to pieces; and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children.

The white went forth after them: for the Greek empire occupied the same portion of the earth as the Persian. White is a symbol of joy, gladness², victory³, perhaps also, from its relation to light, of acute intelligence. It may relate too to the benevolence of Alexander to the Jewish nation. "⁴ Alexander used such clemency to the conquered, that it seemed as though he might be called rather the founder than the destroyer of the nations whom he subdued."

And the grizzled, the Romans in their mingled character, so prominent in the fourth empire of Daniel⁵, go forth to the south country, i.e. Egypt; as Daniel speaks of ⁶the ships of Chittim and the intervention of the Romans first in regard to the expulsion of Antiochus Epiphanes from Egypt; in Egypt also, the last enduring kingdom of any successor of Alexander, that of the Ptolemies, expired. "30 years afterward, the Son of God was to bring light to the earth. The prophet so interweaves the prediction, that from the series of the four kingdoms it is brought to the Birth of the Eternal King⁷."

7. And the strong went forth and sought to go, that they might walk to and fro through the earth. The mention of their strength corresponds to the extent of the power and commission, for which they asked, to go to and fro, up and down, at their will, unhindered, through the whole earth. The Babylonian empire held Egypt only out of Asia; the Persian was conquered in its efforts against Europe, in Greece; Alexander's was like a meteor, gleaming but breaking into the four:

the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth.

He commanded, and they, which were before withheld, went, and they walked to and fro ⁸on the earth, ordering all things at their will, under the Providence of God, whereby He gave free access to the Gospel in all their wide empire. The Greek empire being extinguished, the Romans no longer went into any given country, but superintended and governed all human things in (it is the language of the New Testament) all the world. "⁹ These same, the dappled and ashen grey horses were commanded to traverse the earth, and they did traverse it; for they mastered all under heaven, and ruled the whole earth, God consenting and arraying those who swayed the Roman might with this brilliant glory. For, as God, He knew beforehand the greatness of their future piety."

These have quieted My spirit in the North country, or rather, have made My anger to rest¹¹ on, i.e. have carried it thither and deposited it there, made it to rest upon them, as its abode, as S. John saith of the unbelieving, ¹²The wrath of God abideth on him. Babylon had been the final antagonist and subduer of the people of God. It had at the outset destroyed the temple of God, and carried off its vessels to adorn idol-temples. Its empire closed on that night when it triumphed over God¹³, using the vessels dedicated to Him, to the glorifying of their idols. In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain. This final execution of God's anger upon that their destroyer was the earnest of the rest to them; and in this the visions pause.

9. And the word of the Lord came to me. The visions being closed, Zechariah marks the change by adopting the usual formula, with which the prophets authenticated, that they spake not of themselves, but by the Spirit of God. The act enjoined is a symbolic act, pointing and summing up and interpreting the visions, as some of the visions had been already expanded by fresh revelations following immediately upon them.

10. Take of the captivity, of that which they had brought with them¹. The captivity was, in Jeremiah², and Ezekiel³, the title of those who had been actually carried captive and were at that moment in captivity. Ezra continues it of those who had been in captivity, though now returned from exile. Yet not without a reference to the circumstances or causes of that captivity. It is the captivity⁴ which Sheshbazzar brings from Babylon, or Ezra subsequently⁵; the children of the captivity, who set themselves to build the temple of God⁶; who dedicated it and kept the passover⁷. The title is used apparently as an aggravation of sin, like that which had been chastened by that captivity⁸. Here, the term seems to imply some blame, that they remained of their own accord in this state of severance from the altar, where alone special worship of God and sacrifice could be offered. They had been removed against their will; yet, as Christians often do, acquiesced in the loss, rather than forego their temporal advantages. Still they wished to

And this their imperfect zeal was instantly accepted.

And go thyself, to make the act more impressive, on that same day, as matter of urgency, and thou shalt come to the house of Josiah son of Zephaniah, *whither they have come from Babylon*⁹. The exiles who had brought presents for the building of the temple, lodged, it seems, in the house of Josiah, whether they doubted or no that their presents would be accepted, since they chose Babylon, not Jerusalem for their abode. This acceptance of their gifts symbolized the incoming of those from afar. It is remarkable that all five names express a relation to God. Tobiah, "The Lord is my good;" Yedai, "God knoweth" or "careth for;" Josiah, "The Lord supporteth;" Zephaniah, "The Lord hideth;" and perhaps Cheldai, "The Lord's world"¹⁰. They had taken religious instead of worldly names. Probably Zechariah was first to accept the offerings from the three exiles, and then to take the actual gold from the house of Josiah whither they had brought it. The pilgrims from Babylon and their host are included in one common blessing.

Lord is seen in the Revelation, ¹on His Head were many crowns. The singular is used of ²a royal crown, apparently of a festive crown³; and figuratively⁴; even of Almighty God Himself as a crown⁵; but no where of the mitre of the high-priest.

The characteristic of the act is, that the crown or crowns (it is not in the context said, which) were placed on the head of the one high priest, Joshua; and thou shalt place [it or them, it is not said which] upon the head of Joshua son of Josedeck the high-priest, and shalt say unto him. If crowns were made of each material, there were two crowns. But this is not said, and the silver might have formed a circlet in the crown of gold, as, in modern times, the iron crown of Lombardy, was called iron, because it had ⁶a plate of iron in its summit, being else of gold and most precious." In any case the symbolical act was completed by the placing of a royal crown upon the head of the high-priest. This, in itself, represented that He, Whom he and all other priests represented, would be also our King. It is all one then, whether the word designate one single crown, so entitled for its greatness, or one united royal crown, i. e., one crown uniting many crowns, symbolizing the many kingdoms of the earth, over which our High Priest and King should rule. Either symbol, of separate crowns⁷, or an united crown⁸ has been used in the same meaning, to symbolize as many empires, as there were crowns.

On Zerubbabel no crown was placed. It would have been confusing; a seeming restoration of the kingdom, when it was not to be restored; an encouragement of the temporal hopes, which were the bane of Israel. God had foretold, that none of the race of Jehoiakim should prosper, sitting on the throne of David, or ruling any more in Israel. Nehemiah rejects the imputation of Sanballat⁹, Thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, There is a king in Judah. He answers, There are no such things done as thou sayest; and thou feignest them out of thine own heart. But Isaiah had foretold much of the king who should reign: Zechariah, by placing the royal crown on the head of Joshua, foreshadowed that the kingdom was not to be of this world. The royal crown had been taken away in the time of Zedekiah, ¹⁰Thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem and take away the crown; this shall not be this; exalt the low and abase the high; an overthrow, overthrow will I make it; this too is not; until he come whose the right is, and I will give it.

But the Messiah, it was foretold, was to be both priest and king; ¹¹a priest after the order of Melchizedec, and a king, set by the Lord ¹²upon His holy hill of Zion. The act of placing the crown on the head of Joshua the high-priest, pictured not only the union of the offices of priest and king in the person of Christ, but that He should be King, being first our High Priest. Joshua was already High Priest; being such, the kingly crown was added to him. It says in act, what S. Paul says, that ¹³Christ Jesus, being found in fashion as a man, humbled Himself and became

In our own memory, Napoleon I. having been crowned in France, was crowned with the iron crown at Monza.

⁸ "The headdress of the king, on state occasions, was the crown of the upper or of the lower country, or the phant, the union of the two. Every king, after the sovereignty of the Thebaid and lower Egypt had become once more vested in the same person, put on this double crown at his coronation, and we find in the grand representation given of this ceremony at Medeenet Haboo that the principal feature of the proclamation, on his ascension to the throne, was the announcement that Remeses had put on the crown of the upper and lower country.—When crowned, the king invariably put on the two crowns at the same time, though on other occasions he was permitted to wear each separately, whether in the temple, the city, or the field of battle." 12. The Prophet is taught to explain his own symbolic act. Behold the Man whose name is the Branch¹. "Not for himself, but for Christ, Whose name Joshua bare, and Whose Priesthood and Princedom he represented," was the crown given him. The Prophet had already foretold the Messiah, under the name of the Branch. Here he adds,

And he shall grow up out of His place², lowly and of no seeming account, as God foretold by Jeremiah, ³I will cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and Jesus Himself said, ⁴Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. Alone He grew up before God, as a tender plant⁵, unknown of man, known to God. It is that still, Divine life at Nazareth, of which we see only that one bright flash in the temple, the deep saying, understood even by Joseph and Mary, and then, ⁶He went down with them and came to Nazareth and was subject unto them.

And he shall build the temple of the Lord. The material temple was soon to be finished, and that by Zerubbabel, to whom this

¹ The consent of the ancient Jews in interpreting "the Branch" of the Messiah is very remarkable. "R. Berachiah (about A. D. 200, Wolf. Bibl. Hebr. ii. 870) said, that 'God, blessed for ever, saith to Israel, Ye say before Me, we are become orphans and have no father; the Redeemer too, Whom I am about to make to stand from you, He shall have no father, as is said, Behold the Man Whose name is the Branch, and he shall shoot [lit. from below him] from his place; and so saith Isaiah, And he grew up like a sucker before him.'" (Bereshith Rabba on Gen. xxxvi. 22. in Martini Pug. Fid. f. 594 quoted also by a Jewish convert, Joshua Hattorki, known among us as Hieron. de S. Fide, c. Jud. i. 5. Bibl. Max. Patr. xxvi. 536. His quotation is independent of Martini, since he adds the quotation from Ps. ii. "and elsewhere, 'The Lord said unto me, Thou art my Son,'" Jon. paraphrases, "Behold a Man, Whose name is Messiah, Who shall be revealed, and shall be multiplied." (יִתְרֵב), by which צֶמַח is rendered Ps. lxxxv. 12) "and he shall build the temple of the Lord, and he shall bear glory, and he shall sit and shall rule on his throne, and he shall be a great priest on his throne, and counsel of peace there shall be between them both." Rashi says, "He hints at the Messiah, and so paraphrases Jonathan, Behold a Man Whose name is Messiah, &c." (in Mart. p. 376. The printed edd. substitute "And some interpret it of king Messiah.") R. Nachman observes on the force of the word man, "Man (in Nu. i. 4.) is not said here but of the Messiah the Son of David, as is said, 'Behold the Man, Whose name is the Branch,' Jonathan paraphrases The Man Messiah, and so it is said, 'a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.'" It was then a new temple, to be built from the foundation, of which He Himself was to be the foundation², as He said, ³On this rock I will build My Church; and in Him⁴ all the building, fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple to the Lord. ⁵"He it is, Who built the house; for neither Solomon nor Zerubbabel nor Joshua son of Josedech could build a house worthy of the majesty of God. For ⁶the most High, S. Stephen says, dwelleth not in temples made with hands, as saith the prophet; Heaven is My throne and earth is My footstool; what house will ye build Me, saith the Lord? For if they could have built a house for God, He would not have allowed His house to be burned and overthrown. What then is the house of God which Christ built? glory, since it is affirmed of Him as of none beside, "He shall bear glory," "He should build the temple of the Lord," as none beside ever built it; He should bear glory, as none beside ever bare it, ¹the glory as of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. This word glory is almost always used of the special glory of God², and then, although seldom, of the Majesty of those, on whom God confers majesty as His representatives, as Moses, or Joshua³, or the glory of the kingdom given to Solomon⁴. It is used also of Him, a likeness of Whom these vicergerents of God bare, in a Psalm whose language belongs (as Jews too have seen,) to One more than man⁵, although also of glory given by God, either of grace or nature⁶. So in our Lord's great High Priest's prayer He says, ⁷Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine ownself with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was; and prays, ⁸that they also whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me, where I am; that they may behold My glory which Thou hast given Me. So S. Paul, applying the words of the eighth Psalm, says of our Lord, ⁹We see Jesus, Who was made a little lower than the angels, crowned with glory and honor; and the angels and saints round the Throne say, ¹⁰Worthy is the Lamb which was slain to receive power and wisdom and strength and honor and glory and blessing, and those on earth answer, Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. That glory Isaiah saw¹¹; in His miracles He manifested forth His glory¹², which resided in Him; in His Transfiguration, the three Apostles saw His glory¹³, shining out from within Him; into this His glory¹⁴, He told the disciples at Emmaus, the prophets said, that He was to enter, having first suffered what He suffered; in this His glory He is to sit, when He judges¹⁵. And He shall sit and rule on His Throne. His rule shall be, not passing but abiding, not by human might, but in peaceful majesty, as God says, ¹⁶Yet have I set My king upon My holy hill of Zion, and again, ¹⁷Sit Thou on My Right Hand, until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool; and the angel said to Mary, ¹⁸The Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of His kingdom there shall be no end.

And He shall be a priest upon His Throne. He shall be at once king and priest, as it is said, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec. When the Christ should reign, He should not cease to be our Priest. He, having all power given to Him in heaven and earth, reigneth over His Church and His elect by His grace, and over the world by His power, yet ever liveth to make intercession for us. ¹⁹Not dwelling now on what is chiefest, that ²⁰by Him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or powers; all things were created by Him and for Him, and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist, how many crowns of glory belong to Him, One and the Same, God and man, Christ Jesus! He then will bear glory and will sit upon His throne and shall be a priest on His throne. How just this is, it is easier to think than to express, that He should sit and rule all things, by Whom all things were made, and He should be a Priest for ever, by Whose Blood all things are reconciled. He shall rule then upon His throne, and He shall be a priest upon His throne, which cannot be said of any of the saints, because it is the right of none of them, to call the throne of his rule or of his priesthood his own, but of this Only Lord and Priest, Whose majesty and throne are one and the same with the Majesty of God, as He saith, ²¹When the Son of Man shall come in His Majesty [Glory], then shall He sit upon the throne of His Majesty [Glory]. And what meaneth that re-duplication, and He shall rule on His Throne, but that One and the Same, of Whom all this is said, should be and is King and Priest. He Who is King shall rule on His Throne, because kingdom and priesthood shall meet in One Person, and One shall occupy the double throne of kingdom and priesthood." He Alone should be our King; He Alone our Saviour: He Alone the Object of our love, obedience and adoration.

And the counsel of peace shall be between them both. The counsel of peace is not merely peace, as S. Jerome seems to interpret: "He is both king and priest, and shall sit both on the royal and sacerdotal throne, and there shall be peaceful counsel between both, so that neither should the royal eminence depress the dignity of the priesthood, nor the dignity of the priesthood, the royal eminency, but both should be consistent in the glory of the One Lord Jesus." For had this been all, the simple idiom, there shall be peace between them, would have been used here, as elsewhere¹. But counsel of peace, must, according to the like idioms², signify "a counsel devising or procuring peace" for some other than those who counsel thereon. We have the idiom itself, *counsellors of peace*³.

They twain might be said of things⁴: but things are naturally not said to counsel, so that the meaning should be, that the thrones of the priests and of the Branch should counsel. For the throne is in each case merely subordinate. It is not as we might say, "the See of Rome," or "of Constantinople," or "of Canterbury," meaning the successive Bishops. It is simply the material throne, on which He sits. Nor is anything said of any throne of a priest, nor had a priest any throne. His office was to stand before the Lord⁵, his intercessorial office to offer gifts and sacrifices for sin. To offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins and then for the people's, was his special office and honor. There are then not two thrones. One sits on His Throne, as King and Priest. It seems only to remain, that the counsel of peace should be between Jesus and the Father; as S. Jerome says, "I read in the book of some, that this, there shall be a peaceful counsel be- tween the two, is referred to the Father and the Son, because He ^acame to do not His own will, but the Will of the Father, and ^bthe Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father." In Christ all is perfect harmony. There is a counsel of peace between Him and the Father Whose temple He builds. The Will of the Father and the Son is one. Both had one Will of love toward us, the salvation of the world, bringing forth peace through our redemption. God the Father¹⁰ so loved the world, that He gave His Only-Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life; and God the Son¹¹ is our peace, Who hath made both one, that He might reconcile both unto God in one body by the Cross, and came and preached peace to them which were afar off and to them that were nigh. Others seem to me less naturally to interpret it of Christ in His two offices. "¹² There shall be the counsel of peace between them, the ruler and the priest, not that Christ is divided, but that those two principdoms, which were hitherto divided, (the priest and the king being different persons) should be united in the One Christ. Between these two principdoms, being inseparably joined in one, shall be the counsel of peace, because through that union we have peace; and through Him¹³ it pleased the Father to reconcile all things unto Himself, and that all things should be brought to peace through the Blood of His cross, whether things in earth or things in heaven."

14. And the crowns shall be to Helem. There is no ground apparent to us, why the name Helem appears instead of Holdai¹⁴, or Hen for Josiah: yet the same person must have been called both Hen and Josiah, since the father's name is the same in both places. They cannot both be intended as explanations of the former names, since Helem stands insulated in Hebrew, its meaning conjectural¹⁵.

Perhaps then they were the own names of the individuals, and the names compounded with the name of God, honorable names which they had taken.

For a memorial in the temple of the Lord. They brought a passing gift, but it should be for a lasting memorial in their behalf. It is a renewal of the well-known term of the law¹. The two stones, engraven with the names of the children of Israel, upon the shoulders of the Ephod, were to the end, that Aaron should bear their names before the Lord upon his two shoulders for a memorial²; continually, it is added of the breastplate with its twelve precious stones³; the atonement money of the children of Israel was to be appointed for the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, that it may be a memorial for the children of Israel before the Lord, to make atonement for their souls⁴; to make an atonement for their souls before the Lord. They were to blow with the trumpets over their burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifice of their peace-offerings, that they may be to you for a memorial before your God⁵. When Midian had been smitten before Israel, and not one of Israel had been slain, they brought all the gold which had accrued to them, and Moses and Eleazar took the gold, and brought it into the tabernacle, a memorial for the children of Israel before the Lord⁶. So the angel said to Cornelius, thy prayers and thy alms are come up for a memorial before God.⁷ "This is what we look for, that to all the saints and friends of God, whom these signify, those crowns which they made of their gold and silver for the Lord Jesus, shall be an everlasting memorial in that heavenly temple of the Lord." The tradition of the Jews, that this was literally observed⁸, can hardly be without foundation. "These their offerings shall be for grace to those who dedicated them and an occasion of doxology. For the piety of princes becomes to the rest a path to the love of God. But when Christ is crowned by us, then shall also the multitude of the Gentiles haste to the knowledge of Him."

not used of strength. חָלִים is used of "good condition" of an animal, Job xxxix. 4; (as in Arab.); in Hif. is "restored one to health" (Is. xxxviii. 16), as Syr. in Ethp. In Syr. חָלִים is used of recovered health, S. Mark v. 34, S. John v. 11, Acts iv. 10; as opposed to sickness, S. Mark ii. 17; or sound healthy words, S. John vi. 3, 2 Tim. i. 11. In Arab. חָלִים conj. i. is "dreamt" ii. "was kind, forbearing," v. "became fat" (of animals). Other senses are derived from dreaming.

And they who are far off shall come. They who came from Babylon with offerings to God, became types of the Gentiles, of whom the Apostle says, Now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off have become nigh through the blood of Christ; and, He came and preached peace to you which were far off and to them that were nigh; and the promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are far off, as many as the Lord our God shall call.

And build in, or upon, the temple of the Lord¹, not "build it" for it was to be built by the Branch, but build on, labor on, it. It was a building, which should continually be enlarged; of which S. Paul says, I, as a wise master-builder, according to the grace given unto me, laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon; let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. "What shall they build? Themselves, compacting themselves with the saints, and joining together in faith to oneness with those of Israel, Jesus Christ Himself being the head corner-stone and uniting together in harmony through Himself, what was of old divided. For He united the two peoples into one new man, making peace, and reconciling in His own Body all things unto the Father, which being accomplished, we shall own the truth of the holy prophets, and know clearly that it was God Who spake in them and declared to us beforehand the mystery of Christ."

So our Lord said, ² If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of Myself; ³ He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not because ye are not of God: ⁴ Every one that is of the truth heareth My voice. ⁵ Because he had said, And ye shall know that the Lord hath sent me unto you, he warns them, that the fruit of that coming will reach to those only, who should hear God and with ardent mind join themselves to His name. For as many as believed in Him were made sons of God; but the rest were cast into outer darkness. But they receive Christ, who hear His voice and do not refuse His rule. For He was made the cause of eternal salvation to all who obey Him."

VII. 1. In the fourth year of Darius. Two years after the series of visions, shewn to him, and two years before the completion of the temple. Chisleu being December, it was the end of B. C. 518.

2. When they had sent unto the house of God. Rather, And Bethel sent; i. e. the inhabitants of Bethel sent. The house of God is nowhere in Holy Scripture called Bethel. Bethel is always the name of the place⁶. The house of God is designated by historians, Psalmists,

⁴ The LXX, Jon., Syr. render in the accusative, to Bethel. The Vulg. alone has "ad domum Dei."

prophets, by the name, Beth-elohim, more commonly Beth-Ha-elohim, the God; or of the Lord, יהוה¹. Zechariah and Haggai use these names. It is not likely that the name, Beth-el, should have first been given to the house of God, when it had been desecrated by the idolatries of Jeroboam. Bethel also is, in the Hebrew order of the words, naturally the subject². Nor is there any reason why they should have sent to Bethel, since they sought an answer from God. For it would be forced to say that they sent to Bethel, in order that those at Bethel should send to Jerusalem; which is not said. It were unnatural also that the name of the sender should not have been mentioned, when the names of persons inferior, because sent, are recorded³. Bethel, in Nehemiah's time⁴, was one of the chief places of Benjamin. Two hundred twenty and three of the men of Bethel and Ai⁵ had returned with Zerubbabel. The answer being to the people of the land, such were doubtless the enquirers, not those still in Babylon. The answer shews that the question was not religious, though put as matter of religion. It is remarkable that, whereas in the case of those who brought presents from Babylon, the names express some relation to God, these names are singularly, the one of a parricide son of name of a man, who sent the others. Rashi and S. Jerome's Hebrew instructors made Sherezer and Regem-melech the senders. Rashi says that they sent to their kinsmen in Bethel, that these should come to intreat the face of God at Jerusalem. S. Jerome's teachers said more naturally, that "Sherezer and Regem-melech sent to the house of God; " only "Bethel" is not so used, and the theory that they were "Persian officers of Darius fearing God," is inconsistent with the question as to a Jewish political fast of long standing. The interposition of the place whither they were sent, between the verb and the subject, without any mark that it is not the subject, would be unnatural. The E. V. follows Kimchi, taking ישרון as impersonal. But here it is a formal message from some definite person or persons. In Gen. xlviii. 1, ויאמר ליעקב, is altogether like our "one told Jacob." In Esth. ix. 30, the subject is probably Mordecai, mentioned v. 29.

Sennacherib¹, and of one, chief among the King of Babylon's princes²; the other probably a secular name, "the king's friend³."

"I do not see why under the name of Bethel, the city so called is not understood. For since Jerusalem was not yet fortified, the Jews chose them sites in various places, where they should be less harassed. All hatred was concentrated on that city, which the neighbors wished not to be restored to its former greatness. Other cities they did not so molest. Bethel then, i. e. the assembly of the city, sent messengers to Jerusalem to offer sacrifices to God and consult the wise there."

To entreat the face of the Lord. They wished, it seems, (so to speak) to ingratiate themselves with God with an account of their past self-humiliation, on the day when the house of God was burned by Nebuchadnezzar. In regard to God, the word is always used of entreating Him by earnest prayer⁴.

3. Should I weep in the fifth month, separating myself? In the fifth month, from the seventh to the tenth day, Jerusalem was in flames, fired by Nebuchadnezzar. ⁵ He burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem and every great man's house he burnt with fire.

"Now since it is said that the temple is builded and we see that no cause of sorrow remaineth, answer, we pray, are we to do this or to change our sorrow into joy?"

to intensify the fast which they had kept. The Nazarite was bound to ^a separate himself from wine and strong drink, and so, they severed themselves to the Lord, and consecrated themselves to Him². These had severed themselves from food, from things pleasant, from pleasure, from sin, it may be, for the day, but not abidingly: they had not given themselves to God.

They of Bethel had spoken as one man, as Edom said to Israel, ¹¹ Thou shalt not pass by me; and ¹² the men of Israel said to the Hivite; Perhaps thou dwellest in the midst of me, and how shall I make a league with thee? When ye fasted and that, mourning. It was no mere abstinence from food (severe as the Jewish fasts were, one unbroken abstinence from evening to evening) but with real mourning, the word being used only of mourning for the dead¹⁵, or, in a few instances¹⁶, for a very great public calamity; probably with beating on the breast.

In the seventh month. The murder of Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon made governor of the land, completed the calamities of Jerusalem, in the voluntary, but prohibited exile to Egypt, for fear lest the murder should be avenged on them¹.

Did ye at all fast unto Me, Me²? God emphatically rejects such fasting as their's had been, as something, unutterably alien from Him, to Me, Me³! Yet the fasting and mourning had been real, but irreligious, like remorse for ill-deeds, which has self only for its ground. He prepares the way for His answer by correcting the error of the question. "Ye fasted to yourselves, not to Me. For ye mourned your sorrows, not your misdeeds; and your public fast was undertaken, not for My glory, but out of feeling for your own grief. But nothing can be pleasing to God, which is not referred to His glory. But those things alone can be referred to His glory, which are done with righteousness and devotion."

6. And when ye eat and when ye drink, is it not ye who eat and ye who drink? Conversely now that, after your return, ye feast for joy, this is no religious act; ye have all the good of it, there is no thanksgiving to God. Contrary to the Apostle's saying, Whether ye eat or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God. "He eateth and drinketh to himself, who receiveth the nourishments of the body, which are the common gifts of the Creator, without the needy. And any one fasts to himself, if he doth not give to the poor what for the time he withdraweth from himself, but keepeth it to be thereafter offered to his appetite. Hence it is said by Joel, sanctify a fast. For to 'sanctify a fast' is to shew an abstinence worthy of God through other good deeds. Let anger cease, quarrels be hushed. For in vain is the flesh worn, if the mind is not refrained from evil pleasures, since the Lord says by the Prophet, Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure. Behold, ye fast for strife and debate &c.

7. Should ye not hear the words, or, Know ye not the words? The verb is presupposed in the emphatic question, as in, Shall I, the blood of these men? David omits the word "drink" for abhorrence.

By the former prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah⁴, when Jerusalem was dwelling abidingly¹⁰, at ease, as the whole world then was, except herself, and the south and the low-country, both belonging to Judah, were inhabited. The restoration then was still very incomplete, since he contrasts their then condition with the present, as inhabited or no. The mountain, the south, and the low country, known still by its name of Sephela to Greeks¹¹, made up the territory of Judah¹².

8. Instead of quoting the former prophets, Zechariah gives the substance of their exhortations, as renewed to himself.

"bounding" for joy [all]. The noun מְסַפֵּר is in like way used of "mourning" for the dead, Gen. i. 10, Jer. vi. 26, Nu. v. 16, Zech. xii. 10, 11, 12; for the destruction of a people or place, Jer. xlviii. 38, Ez. xxvii. 24, Mt. i. 8, 11; for imminent destruction, Am. v. 17, Ezech. iv. 3; or great public calamity, Jo. ii. 12, Is. xlv. 12. In Ps. xxx. 12, it stands contrasted with a great outward expression of joy, dancing, מְדוּלֵּל [all].

The injunction itself runs throughout the prophets ². Shew mercy, i. e. tender love, to all ; compassion, to the unhappy. Omit no act of love, God so loves the loving. ³ Like S. Paul to the Romans ⁴, he names only the duties to the neighbor, but understands what relates to God. For the love of our neighbor presupposes the love of God, from which it springs. ⁵ "After strictness of justice, let mercy to all follow, and specially to brethren, of the same blood and of one faith. Brother and neighbor we ought to account the whole human race, since we are all born of one parent, or those who are of the household of faith, according to the parable of the Gospel ⁶, which willet us to understand by neighbor, nor our kin, but all men."

10. And oppress not. He had commanded positive acts of love ; he now forbids every sort of unlove. He that oppresseth the poor, Solomon had said ¹, reproacheth his Maker. The widow, the orphan, the stranger, the afflicted, are, throughout the law, the special objects of God's care. This was the condition which God made by Jeremial ² ; If ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings, if ye thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbor ; if ye oppress not the stranger the fatherless and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt, then will I cause you to dwell in this place. selves to God's word, lest He should convert them by it.

Lest they should hear the law and the words which the Lord God sent by His Spirit by the hand of the former prophets. The Holy Ghost was the chief agent; by His Spirit; the inspired prophets were His instruments; by the hand of. Nehemiah confesses the same to God: Thou didst protest to them by Thy Spirit by the hand of Thy prophets. Moses was one of the greatest prophets. The law then may be included, either as delivered by Moses, or as being continually enforced by all the prophets. Observe the gradations. 1) The words of God are not heard. 2) The restive shoulder is shewn; men turn away, when God, by the inner motions of His Spirit or by lesser chastisements, would bring them to the yoke of obedience. "They would not bear the burden of the law, whereas they willingly bore that most heavy weight of their sins." 3) Obduracy. "Their adamant heart could be softened neither by promises nor threats." Therefore nothing remained but the great wrath, which they had treasured to themselves against the day of wrath. And so Zechariah returns to that, wherewith his message and visions of future mercy began, the great wrath which fell upon their fathers.

"I sought not," He says, "for your tears; I enjoined not bitterness of sorrow; but what, had they been done, the calamity, for which those tears were meet, had never befallen you. What was it which I admonished you formerly by the former prophets to recall you from sin? What I bid you by Zechariah now. This I preach, admonish, testify, inculcate upon you."

So Wisdom had said by Solomon; "then, i. e. when distress and anguish cometh upon them, they shall call upon Me, but I will not answer; they shall seek Me early, and they shall not find Me. So by Isaiah, When ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear; your hands are full of bloods. So by Hosea⁶, by Micah⁷, by Jeremiah⁸. It was one message which was verified in every day of chastisement, "there will be a 'too late,'" not a final "too late," until the end of ends comes, but a "too late" for them, a "too late" to avert that particular judgment of God, whereby the sinner's earthly trial and future were changed permanently.

14. But I scattered them, rather, And I will scatter them¹⁰. The saying continues what God had said that He had said, and which had come to pass. Among all nations whom they knew not. So God had repeatedly said by Jeremiah, I will cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, ye nor your fathers; where I will not shew you favor. This was the aggravation of the original woe in the law: The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand, a nation of fierce countenance. There was no mitigation of suffering, when the common bond between man and man, mutual speech, was wanting.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The restoration of Jerusalem. 9 They are encouraged to the building by God's favor to them. 16 Good works are required of them. 18 Joy and enlargement are promised.

AGAIN the word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying,

And they made the pleasant land¹ desolate. They were the doers of what they by their sins caused, by bringing down the judgments of God. Heretofore the land which God had given them, had been in our language "the envy" of all who knew it now they had made it into a desolation, one wide waste².

"³ What is said in the beginning of the chapter against Jews who abstained indiscreetly, applies mystically to all, not inward, but rude Christians, who not being diligent enough but rather negligent about acts of piety and inward prayer and reformation of the powers of the soul, account highly of bodily exercises and outward observances, and use no slight scrupulosity as to things of less moment, and do not attend to the chief things, charity, humility, patience meekness. On these it must be inculcated, that if they wish their fasts and other outward exercises to please God, they must judge true judgment, and be compassionate, kind, liberal to their neighbors, keep their mind ever steadfast in God, cast away wholly all hardness of heart, and be soft and open to receive within them the word of God. Otherwise their land will be desolate, i. e. deprived of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and they scattered amid various vices." "⁴ That which was formerly a pleasant land, and the hospice of the Trinity, is turned into a desert and dwelling-place of dragons."

VIII. "⁵ After the Lord had, in the preceding chapter, manifoldly rebuked the Jewish people, He now comforts it with renewed promises, as a good physician, who after a bitter draught employs sweet and soothing remedies; as that most loving Samaritan poured in wine and oil." The chapter falls into two portions, each marked by the words, The Word of the Lord of hosts came, or came unto me, the first⁶ declaring the reversal of the former judgments, and the complete, though conditional, restoration of God's favor; the 2d¹ containing the answer to the original question as to those fasts, in the declaration of the joy and the spread of the Gospel. The first portion has, again, a sevenfold, the second, a threefold subordinate division; marked by the beginning, Thus saith the Lord of hosts.

2. Thus saith the Lord of hosts. "² At each word and sentence, in which good things, for their greatness, almost incredible are promised, the prophet premises, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, as if he would say, Think not that what I pledge you as my own, and refuse me not credence as man. What I unfold are the promises of God."

I was jealous, lit. *I have been and am jealous for*³. He repeats in words slightly varied, but in the same rhythm, the declaration of His tender love wherewith He opened the series of visions, thereby assuring beforehand that this was, like that, an answer of peace. The form of words shews, that this was a jealousy for, not with her; yet it was one and the same strong, yea infinite love, whereby God, as He says, ⁴*clave unto their fathers to love them and chose their seed after them out of all nations*. His jealousy of their sins was part of that love, whereby, "⁵without disturbance of passion or of tranquillity, He inflicted rigorous punishment, as a man fearfully reproves a wife who sins." "⁶They are two different forms of love according to two needs. "⁷The jealousy⁸ of God is good, to love men and hate the sins of men. Contrariwise the jealousy of the devil is evil, to hate men and love the sins of men." "⁹Since God's anger had its origin in the vehemence of His love (for this sort of jealousy arises from the greatness of love), there was hope that the anger might readily be appeased toward her."

3. I am returned. "¹⁰Without change in Myself, I am turned to that people from the effect of justice to the sweetness of mercy, and I will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem, in the temple and the people, indwelling the hearts of the good by charity and grace. Christ also, Very God and Very Man, visibly conversed and was seen in Zion." "When He says, 'I am turned,' He shews that she was turned too. He had said, Turn unto Me and I will turn unto you; otherwise she would not have been received into favor by Him. As the fruit of this conversion, He promises her His presence, the ornaments of truth, the hope of security, and adorns her with glorious titles."

God had symbolized to Ezekiel the departure of His special presence, in that the glory of the God of Israel which was over the temple, at the very place where they placed the image of jealousy², went up from the Cherub, whereupon it was, to the threshold of the house; then stood over the Cherubim; and then went up from the midst of the city and stood upon the mountain, which is on the east side of the city, so removing from them. He had prophesied its return in the vision of the symbolic temple, how the glory of the Lord came into the house by the way of the gate looking toward the East, and the Spirit took me up and brought me into the inner court, and behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house. This renewed dwelling in the midst of them, Zechariah too prophesies, in the same terms as in his third vision¹, I will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem.

And Jerusalem shall be called the city of truth, being what she is called, since God would not call her untruly; so Isaiah says, afterward thou shalt be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city, and they shall call thee the city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel. So Zephaniah had prophesied, The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies. Truth embraces everything opposite to untruth; faithfulness, as opposed to faithlessness; sincerity, as opposed to simulation; veracity, as opposed to falsehood; honesty, as opposed to untruth in act; truth of religion or faith, as opposed to untrue doctrine. "It shall be called the city of truth, i. e. of the True God or of truth of life, doctrine, and justice. It is chiefly verified by the Coming of Christ, Who often preached in Jerusalem, in Whom the city afterward believed."

And the mountain of the Lord of hosts, Mount Zion, on which the temple shall be built, shall be called and be the mountain of holiness. This had been the favorite title of the Psalmists¹², and Isaiah¹³; and Obadiah had foretold, upon Mount Zion there shall be holiness; and Jeremiah, As yet they shall use this speech in the land of Judah and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity; The Lord shall bless thee, O habitation of justice, and mountain of holiness. It should be called and be; it should fulfill the destination of its titles; as, in the Apostles' Creed we profess our belief of "the holy Catholic Church," and holiness is one of its characteristics.

4. There shall yet dwell old men and old women. "Men and women shall not be slain now, as before in the time of the Babylonish destruction, but shall fulfill their natural course." It shall not be, as when He gave His people over unto the sword; the fire consumed their young men and their maidens were not given to marriage; the priests were slain by the sword and their widows made no lamentation; apart from the horrible atrocities of heathen war, when the unborn children were destroyed in their mothers' womb¹⁷, with their mothers. Yet¹⁸, once more as in the days of old, and as conditionally promised in the law¹⁹. As death is the punishment of sin, so prolongation of life to the time which God has now made its natural term, seems the more a token of His goodness. This promise Isaiah had renewed²⁰, There shall no more be an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days. In those fierce wars neither young nor very old were spared. It implied then a long peace, that men should live to that utmost verge of human life.

The man, whose staff is in his hand for the multitude of days. The two opposite pictures, the old men, ¹so aged that they support with a staff their failing and trembling limbs," and the young in the glad buoyancy of recent life, fresh from their Creator's hands, attest alike the goodness of the Creator, Who protecteth both, the children in their yet undeveloped strength, the very old whom He hath brought through "all the changes and chances of this mortal life," in their yet sustained weakness. The tottering limbs of the very old, and the elastic perpetual motion of childhood are like far distant chords of the diapason of the Creator's love. It must have been one of the most piteous sights in that first imminent destruction of Jerusalem², how ³the children and the sucklings swooned in the streets of the city; how the young children fainted for hunger in the top of every street. We have but to picture to ourselves any city in which one lives, the ground strewn with these little all-but corpses, alive only to suffer. We know not, how great the relief of the yet innocent, almost indomitable joyousness of children is, until we miss them. In the dreadful Irish famine of 1847 the absence of the children from the streets of Galway was told me by Religious as one of its dreariest features⁴. In the dreary back-streets and alleys of London, the irrepressible joyousness of children is one of the bright sun-beams of that great Babylon, amid the oppressiveness of the anxious, hard, luxurious, thoughtless, care-worn, enger, sensual, worldly, frivolous, vain, stolid, sottish, cunning, faces, which traverse it. God sanctions by His word here our joy in the joyousness of children, that He too taketh pleasure in it, He the Father of all. It is precisely their laughing⁵, the fullness of her streets of these merry creations of His hands, that He speaks of with complacency.

6. If it should be marvelous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in those ⁶*[not these] days, shall it be marvelous in Mine eyes also? saith the Lord of hosts.* Man's anticipations, by reason of his imperfections and the chequered character of earthly things, are always disappointing. God's doings, by reason of His infinite greatness and goodness, are always beyond our anticipations, past all belief. It is their very greatness which staggers us. It is not then merely that the temporal promises seemed "too good to be true" (in our words) ⁷"in the eyes of the people who had come from the captivity, seeing that the city almost desolate, the ruins of the city-walls, the charred houses shewed the doings of the Babylonians." It is in the day of the fulfillment, not of the anticipation, that they would seem marvelous in their eyes, as the Psalmist says, ⁸*This is the Lord's doing: and it is marvelous in our eyes.* The temporal blessings which God would give were not so incredible. They were but the ordinary gifts of His Providence: they involved no change in their outward relations. His people were still to remain under their Persian masters, until their time too should come. It was matter of gladness and of God's Providence, that the walls of Jerusalem should be rebuilt: but not so marvelous, when it came to pass. The mysteries of the Gospel are a marvel even to the blessed Angels. That fulfillment being yet future, so the people, in whose eyes that fulfillment should be marvelous, were future also. And this was to be a remnant still. It does not say, this people which is a remnant, nor this remnant of the people, i. e., those who remained over out of the people who went into captivity, or this remnant, but "the remnant of this people," i. e., those who should remain over of it, i. e., of the people who were returned. It is the remnant of the larger whole, *this people*⁹. It is still the remnant according to the election of grace; that election which obtained what all Israel sought, but, seeking wrongly, were blinded¹⁰.

Shall it be marvelous in Mine eyes also? It is an indirect question in the way of exclamation¹¹. It be marvelous in Mine eyes also, rejecting the thought, as alien from the nature of God, to Whom ¹ all things are possible, yea, what with men is impossible. As God says to Jeremiah, ² Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh. Is there anything too hard for Me? ³ For with God nothing shall be impossible. ⁴ The things which are impossible with men are possible with God. ⁵ For with God all things are possible. ⁶ For He is the Lord of all powers, fulfilling by His will what exceedingly surpasseth nature, and effecting at once what seemeth Him good. The mystery of the Incarnation passeth all marvel and discourse, and no less the benefits redounding to us. For how is it not next to incredible, that the Word, Begotten of God, should be united with the flesh and be in the form of a servant, and endure the Cross and the insults and outrages of the Jews? Or how should one not admire above measure the issue of the dispensation, whereby sin was destroyed, death abolished, corruption expelled, and man, once a recreant slave, became resplendent with the grace of an adopted son?

7. I will save My people from the East country and from the West country, ¹ i. e. the whole world; for Israel had been scattered in every part of the world." God had said to Israel, ² I will bring thy seed from the east and gather thee from the west; I will say to the north, Give up, and to the south, Keep not back. The two tribes had been carried to Babylon and had been dispersed, or had been allowed to migrate to the various provinces of the Babylonian or Persian empire. But these were in the East, though commonly called the North, because they invaded Israel from the North. Those who had migrated to Egypt were in the South. As yet none were in the West. The dispersion, as well as the gathering, was still future. When our Lord came, they had migrated Westward. Greece, Italy, Asia minor, were full of them; and from all they were gathered. All St. Paul's Epistles written to named Churches, were written to Churches formed from converts in the West. In all these countries God would gather His one people, His Church, not of ³ the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles, grafted into them, as our Lord said, ⁴ I say unto you, that many shall come from the East and from the West, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven; but the children of the kingdom (the unbelieving Jews, who were not the remnant) shall be cast out into outer darkness.

8. They shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem, not the literal Jerusalem; for this would not contain the Jews from all quarters of the world, whom, as they multiplied, the whole land could not contain; but the promised Jerusalem, the Jerusalem, which should be inhabited as towns without walls, to which the Lord should be a wall of fire round about.

And they shall be My people. He promises this as to those who were already His people; I will save My people—and will bring them, and they shall dwell—and they shall be My people. And this they were to be in a new way, by conversion of heart, as Jeremiah says, ¹ I will give them an heart to know Me, that I am the Lord, and they shall be My people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto Me with their whole heart, and, ² This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and will write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people.

³ The circuit of one city will not contain so great a multitude. But one confession of faith, one conspiracy of sanctity, one communion of religion and righteousness, can easily enfold all born of the holy fathers, united to them in faith and piety. And God is specially called the God of all these. For He specially consults for these, loads them with benefits, fences them in with most strong protection, illumines them with His light, crowns them, when confirmed in the Image of His beauty, with glory immortal and Divine."

In truth and in righteousness. This too is on account of their former relation to God. Isaiah had upbraided them for a worship of God, ¹ not in truth and righteousness. Jeremiah had said, ² Thou shalt swear, the Lord liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness. God should be their God in truth and righteousness; ³ truth in fulfilling His promises; righteousness in rewarding every man according to his works."

9 Let your hands be strong. The fulfillment of God's former promises are the earnest of the future; His former providences, of those to come. Having then those great promises for the time to come, they were to be earnest in whatever meantime God gave them to do. He speaks to them, as hearing in these days, i. e. that fourth year of Darius in which they apparently were, these words from the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day when the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid, the temple, that it might be built. Haggai was now gone to his rest. His voice had been silent for two years. But his words lived on. The fulfillment of what the prophets had then spoken in God's Name, was a ground, why their hands should be strong, now and thereafter, for every work which God gave or should give them to do. ¹Some things are said to Jerusalem, i. e. to the Jews, which belong to them only; some relate to what is common to them and the other members of the Church, i. e. those who are called from the Gentiles. Now he speaks to the Jews, but not so as to seem to forget what he had said before. He would say, Ye who hear the words, which in those days when the temple was founded, Haggai and Zechariah spake, be strong and proceed to the work which ye began of fulfilling the will of the Lord in the building of the temple, and in keeping from the sins, in which ye were before entangled. For as, before ye began to build the temple, ye were afflicted with many calamities, but after ye had begun, all things went well with you, as Haggai said ², so, if you cultivate piety and do not depart from God, ye shall enjoy great abundance of spiritual good." ³The memory of past calamity made the then tranquillity much sweeter, and stirred the mind to greater thanksgiving. He set forth then the grief of those times when he says; "

10. There was no hire for man, lit. hire for man came not to pass. ⁴It was longed for, waited for, and came not. So little was the produce, that neither laborer nor beast of burden were employed to gather it in.

Neither was there peace to him who went out or came in because of the affliction, better, of the adversary. In such an empire as the Persian, there was large scope for actual hostility among the petty nations subject to it, so that they did not threaten revolt against itself, or interfere with the payment of tribute, as in the Turkish Empire now, or in the weak government of Greece. At the rebuilding of the walls, after this time, the Samaritans, Arabians, Ammonites, Ashdodites conspired to fight against Jerusalem, and to slay them ⁵. They are summed up here in the general title used here, our adversaries ⁶.

For I set; lit. and I set. Domestic confusions and strife were added to hostility from without. Nehemiah's reformation was, in part, to stop the grinding usury in time of dearth or to pay the king's taxes, through which men sold lands, vineyards, even their children ⁷.

God (lit.) let them loose, each against his neighbor, in that He left them to their own ways and withheld them not.

There remain five insulated cases; "was made God's people," Deut. xxvii. 9; "a desire accomplished," Pr. xiii. 19; "hath not been done," (rejecting an imputation) Neh. vi. 1; "was departed," Dan. ii. 1; as if he had ceased to be, lb. viii. 27.

11. And now. The words imply a contrast of God's dealings, rather than a contrast of time. I am not to the remnant of this people. He had said, I will be to them God; so now He does not say that He will not do to them, as in former days, but I am not to the remnant of this people as heretofore. He would be, as He was in Jesus, in a new relation to them.

12. For the seed shall be peace¹. "Your seed shall be peace and a blessing, so that they will call it 'a seed of peace.'" The unusual construction is perhaps adopted, in order to suggest a further meaning. It is a reversal of the condition, just spoken of, when there was no peace to him that went, or to him that returned.

The vine shall give her fruit and the ground shall give her increase. The old promise in the law on obedience², as the exact contrary was threatened on disobedience³. It had been revived in the midst of promise of spiritual blessing and of the coming of Christ, in Ezekiel⁴. "By the metaphor of sensible things he explains (as the prophets often do) the abundance of spiritual good in the time of the new law, as did Hosea⁵, Joel⁶, Amos⁷, and many others." And I will cause the remnant of the people to inherit. "As if he said, I promised these things not to you who live now, but to the future remnant of your people, i. e. those who shall believe in Christ and shall be saved, while the rest perish. These shall possess these spiritual goods, which I promise now, under the image of temporal." As our Lord said⁸ He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be My son.

¹ It cannot be, the seed shall be safe, (Jon.), for השלום is never used except of peace; nor is even שלום used as a predicate, except of human beings, either directly or as implied, as in Job v. 24, thy tent, שלום אהלך; Job xxi. 9, their houses are peace from fear, בתיהם שלום מפחד. The sense in-columitas, integritas, is wrongly assumed in Rôd. Ges. Thes. Deut. xxix. 18, 1 Kgs. ii. 33, Ps. xxxvii. 11, 37, 1xxii. 3, 7, Is. lii. 7, lvii. 19, 21, Jer. iv. 10, vi. 14, except as far as this may be involved in "peace."

Nor can השלום be a noun. abs. before גַּם, nor

13. As ye were a curse among the nations, O house of Judah and house of Israel, so I will save you. The ten tribes bore the name of Israel, in contrast with the two tribes with the name of Judah, not only in the history but in the prophets; as Hosea says¹, I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, and on the house of Judah I will have mercy. Here he unites both; both, in the time of their captivity, were a curse, were held to be a thing accursed, as it is said, ² He that is hanged is the curse of God, i. e. a thing accursed by Him; and God foretold of Judah, that they should be ³ a desolation and a curse, and by Jeremiah, ⁴ I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for hurt, a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse in all places whither I shall drive them; and in deed, when it was so, ⁵ therefore is your land a desolation and an astonishment and a curse without an inhabitant, as at this day. Now the sentence was to be reversed as to both. As ye were a curse, among the nations, naming each, so I will save you. There would have been no proportion between the curse and the blessing, unless both had been included under the blessing, as they were under the curse. But Israel had no share in the temporal blessing, not returning from captivity, as Zechariah knew they were not returned hitherto. Therefore the blessings promised must be spiritual. Even a Jewish commentator saw this. ⁶ "It is possible, that this may have been spoken of the second temple, on condition that they should keep the commandments of the Lord; or, it is still future, referring to the days of the Messiah: and this is proved by the following verse which says, O house of Judah and house of Israel. During the second temple the house of Israel did not return.

And ye shall be a blessing. This is a revival and an application of the original promise to Abraham, thou shalt be a blessing; which was continued to Jacob, God give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee and to thy seed with thee. And of the future king, of whom it is said, Thou gavest him length of days for ever and ever, David says, Thou hast made him blessings for ever, and again, They shall be blessed in Him. So Isaiah had said of the days of Christ, In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land; and symbolically of the cluster of grapes, Destroy it not: for a blessing is in it; and Ezekiel, I will make them and the places round about My hill a blessing. They were this; for of them, according to the flesh, Christ came, Who is over all, God blessed for ever; of them were the Apostles and Evangelists, of them every writer of God's word, of them those who carried the Gospel throughout the world. "Was this fulfilled, when the Jews were under the Persians? or when they paid tribute to the Greeks? or when they trembled, hour by hour, at the mention of the Roman name? Do not all count those who rule much happier than those oppressed by the rule of others? The prediction then was fulfilled, not then, but when Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, shone on the earth, and He chose from the Hebrews lights, through whom to dissipate darkness and illumine the minds of men who were in that darkness. The Jews, when restored from the captivity, seemed born to slavery." They were reputed to be of slaves the most despised. "But when they had through Christ been put in possession of that most sure liberty, they overthrew, through their empire, the power and tyranny of the evil spirits."

So He says by Jeremiah, ¹³*I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace and not of evil.* And, with the same contrast as here, ¹⁴*As I have watched over them to pluck up and to break down and to throw down, and to destroy and to afflict, so will I watch over them, to build and to plant, saith the Lord.* His having done what He purposed before was an earnest the more, that He would do what He purposed now. His chastisements were the earnest of His mercies; for they too were an austere form of His love. ¹⁵When the Lord stretches out His hand to strike those who are contumacious in guilt, none can hold His hand that He exact not the due punishment. Therefore He says, that He repented not; so, when He receives to grace those who repent of their sins, no one can any way delay the course of His benevolence. ¹⁶*For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.*

And to the house of Judah. ¹⁶He speaks to the two tribes, not to, or of, the ten, because Christ was to come to the two tribes, and Zechariah was prophesying to them, and they were to be admonished to prepare themselves in good works, lest the coming of Christ should not profit them, on account of their depraved ways. But the ten tribes were far off in the cities of the Medes, nor was Christ to come to them; but they were to hear the Gospel through the Apostles, and so he prophesies of the conversion of all to the glory of Christ, yet he could not admonish all, but those only to whom he was sent.

16. These are the things that ye shall do. He exhorts them to the same duties, to which the former prophets had exhorted their fathers ¹⁷ and, as before, first positively to truth and peace; then to avoid everything for such love whereby they would be Israel-

to speak;

20. It shall yet be that. The promises are those which God had already made by Isaiah¹² and Micah¹³. Yet where was the shew of their fulfillment? The Jews themselves, a handful: the temple unfinished; its completion depending, in human sight, upon the will of their heathen masters, the rival worship at Samaria standing and inviting to coalition. Appearances and experience were against it. God says virtually, that it was, in human sight, contrary to all expectations.
But "weakness is aye Heaven's might."
Despite of all, of the fewness of those who were returned, their downheartedness, broken condition, hopelessness, though all had hitherto failed, though, or rather because, all human energy and strength were gone, as forty years' wandering. This is true. For since Moses went up into the mount in the third month

(Ex. xix. 1, 16, xxiv. 12, 16.), the end of the forty days
(Ib. 18), after which he came down and brake the tables (Ex. xxxii. 15, 19) would fall in the fourth month. Ribera calculates the fourth month thus:

Isai. 60. 3, &c. & 66. 23.

God had said before, The Lord shall yet¹ choose Jerusalem, so now, It shall yet² be that.

Nations and many cities shall come. He describes vividly the eagerness and mutual impulse, with which not only many but mighty nations should throng to the Gospel, and every fresh conversion should win others also, till the great tide should sweep through the world.

21. The inhabitants of one city shall go to another. It is one unrelaxing extension of the faith, the restlessness of faith and love. "3 They shall not be satisfied with their own salvation, careless about the salvation of others; they shall employ all labor and industry, with wondrous love, to provide for the salvation of others as if it were their own." It is a marvelous stirring of minds. Missionary efforts, so familiar with us as to be a household word, were unknown then. The time was not yet come. Before the faith in Christ came, the Jewish people were not to be the converters of mankind. They were to await for Him, the Redeemer of the world, through Whom and to Whom they were to be first converted, and then the world through those who were of them. This mutual conversion was absolutely unknown. The prophet⁴ predicts certainly that it would be, and in God's time it was. From you, S. Paul writes to a small colony in Greece⁵, sounded out the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to Godward is spread abroad. "6 Your faith, he writes to the heathen capital of the world, is spoken of throughout the whole world. Within eighty years after our Lord's Ascension, the Roman governor of Bithynia reported, on occasion of the then persecution, that it spread as a contagion. "7 The contagion of that superstition traversed not cities only but villages and scattered houses too." Before the persecution, the temples had been desolated, the solemn rites long intermitted, the sacrificed animals had very rarely found a purchaser. An impostor of the same date says, "8 Pontus is full of atheists and Christians." "9 There is no one race of men," it was said before the middle of the second century¹⁰, "whether Barbarians or Greeks or by whatsoever name called, whether of those wandering houseless tribes who live in wagons or those pastoral people who dwell in tents, in which there are not prayers and Eucharists to the Father and Creator of all things, through the name of the crucified Jesus." "The word of our teacher," said another¹¹, "abode not in Judea alone, as philosophy in Greece; but was poured out throughout the whole world, persuading Greeks and barbarians in their several nations and villages and every city, whole houses and each hearer individually, and having brought over to the truth no few even of the very philosophers. And if any ordinary magistrate forbid the Greek philosophy, forthwith it vanishes; but our teaching, forthwith at its first announcement, kings and emperors and subordinate rulers and governors with all their mercenaries and countless multitudes forbid, and war against us and try to extirpate; but it rather flourishes." The second century had not closed, before another said, "12 We are a people of yesterday, and yet we have filled every place belonging to you, cities, islands, castles, towns, assemblies, your very camp, your tribes, companies, palace, senate, forum! We leave you your temples only. We can count your armies; our numbers in a single province will be greater." "13 Men cry out that the state is beset; that the Christians are in their fields, in their forts, in their islands. They mourn, as for a loss, that every sex, age, condition, and now even rank is going over to this sect." "14 On whom besides have all nations believed, except on Christ Who hath already come?" Then having enumerated the nations mentioned in the Acts¹⁵, he adds, "And now the varieties of the Getulians, and the many tracts of the Moors, all the bounds of the Spains, and the divers nations of the Gauls, and places of the Britons, unreached by the Romans but subdued to Christ; of Sarmatians, Dacians, Germans, and Scythians, and of many remote nations, and many provinces and islands, unknown to us, and which we can

In all which places the name of Christ, Who hath already come, reigneth, seeing that before Him the gates of all cities are opened and none are shut against Him, before Whom ¹the bars of iron are broken in pieces and the gates of brass are opened. In all these places dwelleth a people called by the name of Christ. For who could reign over all, save Christ the Son of God, Who was foretold as about to reign over all nations forever? Then having contrasted the limited rule of Solomon, Darius, the Pharaohs, Nebuchadnezzar, Alexander, "the Romans who protect their own empire by the strength of their legions and are unable to extend the might of their kingdom beyond these nations [Germans, Britons, Moors, Getulians], he sums up, "but the kingdom and the Name of Christ is extended everywhere, is believed in everywhere, is worshiped by all the nations above enumerated. Everywhere He reigns, everywhere is adored, is given everywhere equally to all. With Him no king hath greater favor; no Barbarian inferior joy; no dignities or birth enhance the merit of any; to all He is equal; to all, King; to all Judge; to all, God and Lord." A little later, a heathen owns, while calumniating, ²"Those most foul rites of that impious coalition are growing throughout the whole world, as bad things come up most luxuriantly, evil ways creeping on daily." The Christian answers, ³"That our number increases daily, this is no imputation of error, but a testimony to praise. For in a good mode of life, its own persevere, aliens accrue to it."

The day of Pentecost was to be the reversal of the confusion of Babel; all were to have one voice, as God had said, ⁶It (the time) shall come to gather all nations and tongues, and they shall come and see My glory.

They shall lay hold of the skirt of one man who is a Jew, ⁷"that is, of the Lord and Saviour, of Whom it is said, ⁸A prince shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until He shall come, for Whom it is laid up, and for Him shall the Gentiles wait; for ⁹there shall be a rod of Jesse, and He who shall arise to rule over the Gentiles, to Him shall the Gentiles seek. And when they shall lay hold of Him, they shall desire to tread in His steps, since God is with Him. Or else, whosoever shall believe out of all nations, shall lay hold of a man who is a Jew, the Apostles who are from the Jews, and shall say, Let us go with you; for we have known through the prophets and from the voice of all the Scriptures, that the Son of God, Christ, God and Lord, is with you. Where there is a most manifest prophecy, and the coming of Christ and His Apostles and the faith of all nations is preached, let us seek for nothing more."

¹⁰"Christ turning our sorrow into joy and a feast and good days and gladness, and transferring lamentation into cheerfulness, the accession to the faith and union to God by sanctification in those called to salvation shall not henceforth be individually; but the cities shall exhort each other thereto, and all nations shall come in multitudes, the later ever calling out to those before them, I too will go. •1 Cor. 14. 25.

For the zeal of some is ever found to call forth others to fulfill what is good. But what is the aim proposed to the cities, that is, the Gentiles? To enter it and to seek the face of the Lord, i. e. Christ, Who is the exact image of God the Father, and, as is written, 'the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His Person, of Whom also the divine David saith, 'Shew Thy countenance to Thy servant. For the Image and Countenance of God the Father hath shone upon us. Having Him propitious and kind, we lay aside the injury from sin, being justified through faith, 'not by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to His great mercy.—But how they shall come, he explains. By the ten men you are to understand the perfect number of those who come. For the number ten is the symbol of perfection. But that those of the Gentiles, who cleave to the holy Apostles, took in hand to go the same way with them, being justified by the faith in Christ, he sets evidently before us. For little children, if they would follow their fathers, lay hold of the hem of their dress, and, aided by the touch and hanging from their dress, walk steadily and safely. In like way, they too who 'worshipped the creature rather than the Creator, choosing as their true fathers the bringers-in of the Gospel-doctrines, and joining themselves by like-mindedness to them, follow them, being still of childlike minds, and go the same way, ever shewing themselves zealous followers of their life, and by continued progress advancing 'to a perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. But why do they follow them? Being persuaded that God is with them, i. e. Emmanuel, God with us. But that this calling belongs not only to those of the blood of Israel but to all nations throughout the world, he indicated by saying, that those who laid hold of that hem should be of all languages. But when were the nations called to the knowledge of the truth, and when did they desire to seek the face of the Lord and to entreat it, and to go the same way, as it were, as the holy Apostles, except when the Only-Begotten came to us, Who is ⁶the expectations of the nations; to Whom also the divine David singeth, ⁷All the nations, whom Thou hast made, shall come and worship before Thee, O Lord? For the multitude of the nations also is saved through Him."

The startling condescension of this passage is, that our Lord is spoken of as "a man, a Jew." Yet of His human Nature it is not only the simple truth, but essential to the truth. Pilate said to Him in scorn, Am I a Jew? Yet of His human Nature it is not only the simple truth, but essential to the fulfillment of God's promises. The Christ was to be ⁹the Son of David. ¹⁰Hath not the Scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was? David, ¹¹being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; ¹²Of this man's seed hath God, according to promise, raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus. Whence S. Paul begins his great doctrinal Epistle with this contrast, ¹³the Gospel of God concerning His Son Jesus Christ, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power. He was that ¹⁴one Man among a thousand, whom Solomon says, I found; but a woman among all those have I not found; the one in the whole human race. It was fulfilled in the very letter when ¹⁵they brought to Him all that were diseased, and besought Him that they might only touch the hem of His garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole. ¹⁶The whole multitude sought to touch Him, for there went virtue out of Him and healed all.

Even the Jews saw the reference to the Messiah. ¹⁷"All nations shall come, falling on their faces before the Messiah and the Israelites, saying, Grant, that we may be Thy servants and of Israel. For as relates to the doctrine and the knowledge of the law, the Gentiles shall be their servants, according to that, In those days ten men &c." in [or. upon¹] the land of Hadrach. The foreground of this prophecy is the course of the victories of Alexander, which circled round the holy land without hurting it, and ended in the overthrow of the Persian empire. The surrender of Damascus followed first, immediately on his great victory at the Issus; then Sidon yielded itself and received its ruler from the conqueror, Tyre he utterly destroyed; Gaza, we know, perished; he passed harmless by Jerusalem. Samaria, on his return from Egypt, he chastised.

It is now certain that there was a city called Hadrach in the neighborhood of Damascus and Hamath, although its exact site is not known. "It was first found upon the geographical tablets² among the Assyrian inscriptions." "In the catalogue of Syrian cities, tributary to Nineveh, (of which we have several copies in a more or less perfect state, and varying from each other, both in arrangement and extent) there are three names, which are uniformly grouped together and which we read Manatsuah, Magidā [Megiddo] and Du'ar [Dor]. As these names are associated with those of Samaria, Damascus, Arpad, Hamath, Carchemish, Hadrach, Zobah, there can be no doubt of the position of the cities³." In the Assyrian Canon, Hadrach is the object of three Assyrian expeditions,⁴ 9183 (B. C. 818), 9190 (811) and 9200 (801). The first of these follows upon one against Damascus, 9182 (817). In the wars of Tiglath-pileser ii. (the Tiglath-pileser of Holy Scripture,) it has been twice deciphered; 1) in the war B. C. 738, 737, after the mention of "the cities to Saua the mountain which is in Lebanon were divided, the land of Bahalzephon to Ammana" (Ammon), there follows Hadrach⁵; and subsequently there are mentioned as joined to the league, "19 districts of Hamath, and the cities which were round them, which are beside the sea of the setting sun." 2) In his "war in Palestine and Arabia," "the city of Hadrach to the land of Saua," and six other cities are enumerated, as "the cities beside the upper sea," which, he says, "I possessed, and six of my generals as governors over them I appointed." No other authority nearly approaches these times. The nearest authority is of the second century after our Lord, A. D. 116. "R. Josè, born of a Damascene mother, said," answering R. Yehudah ben Elai⁶, "I call heaven and earth to witness upon me, that I am of Damascus, and that there is a place called Hadrach." S. Cyril of Alexandria says⁷; that "the land of Hadrach must be somewhere in the Eastern parts, and near to Emath (now Epiphania of Antioch) a little further than Damascus, the metropolis of the Phœnicians and Palestine." A writer of the 10th century⁸ says that there was "a very beautiful mosque there, called the Mesjed-el-Khadra, and that the town was named from it." The conjecture that Hadrach might be the name of a king⁹, or an idol¹⁰, will now probably be abandoned, nor can the idea, (which before seemed the most probable and which was very old), that it was a symbolic name, hold any longer. For the Prophets do use symbolic names¹¹; but then they are

¹³ The people, not the land, is called "the people of Chemosh" (i.e. the people who worshipped it) Nu. xxi. 29. Jer. xviii. 46. Nor is there any like name of an idol. "Derketo" (v. Alphen) would be תִּרְעֻנָּה. Hitzig gave up the combination, by which he made the name of an idol. (Kl. Proph. Ed. 3.)

¹⁴ As "Ariel," Is. xxix. 1, 2, 7; "The burden of the names which they themselves frame. Micah again selects several names of towns, now almost unknown and probably unimportant, in order to impress upon his people some meaning connected with them¹, but then he does himself so connect it. He does not name it (so to say), leaving it to explain itself. The name Hadrach² would be a real name, used symbolically, without anything in the context to shew that it is a symbol.

The cities, upon which the burden or heavy prophecy tell, possessed no interest for Israel. Damascus was no longer a hostile power; Hamath had ever been peaceable, and was far away; Tyre and Sidon did not now carry on a trade in Jewish captives. But the Jews knew from Daniel, that the empire, to which they were in subjection, would be overthrown by Greece³. When that rapid attack should come, it would be a great consolation to them to know, how they themselves would fare. It was a turning point in their history and the history of the then known world. The prophet describes⁴ the circuit, which the conqueror would take around the land which God defended; how the thunder-cloud circled round Judæa, broke irresistibly upon cities more powerful than Jerusalem, but was turned aside from the holy city in going and returning, because God encamped around it.

⁵ The selection of the places and of the whole line of country corresponds very exactly to the march of Alexander after the battle of Issus, when Damascus, which Darius desert of the sea," Ib. xxi. 1; "the sea," Jer. xlix. 23; "Sheshac," of Babylon, (whatever the explanation is, perhaps from sinking down, coll. שֶׁשֶׁךְ Gen. viii. 1.) Jer. xxv. 26, li. 41; "the land Morathaim," ("double rebellion"), and "the inhabitants of Pekod" ("visitation") of Babylon (Jer. i. 21); not Dumah, which is probably a real proper name, Is. xxi. 11; nor כְּמִי (Jer. li. 1.) for כְּשִׁירִים; for כְּשִׁירִים could not be mentally substituted for it, since כְּשִׁירִים יִשְׂרָאֵל would be an impossible combination. For inhabitants are of a land, city &c; but כְּשִׁירִים are the people themselves.

² The word, divided into two halves, would signify, "sharp-soft," שָׁרֵף is used of sharpness (see on Hab. i. 8. comp. Ps. lvii. 5, Is. xlix. 2); רַךְ of delicacy.

Deut. xxxiii. 54-56; of weakness, Ib. xx. 8, 2 Chr. xiii. 7. And so it would signify, what was in one respect or at one time "sharp," and in or at another, "soft." A Jewish tradition, extant in times soon after our Lord, so explained it: "Severe to the Gentiles, and tender to Israel." (R. Judah ben Elai, a disciple of R. Akibah. Wolf. Bibl. Hebr. ii. 691.) S. Jerome has the same from his Jewish teacher. "The burden of the word of the Lord is on the land of Hadrach; on which the Lord exercised both His austerity and clemency; austerity on those who would not believe, clemency on those who, with the Apostles, returned to Him." The name would have singularly suited Persia, whose empire Alexander was engaged in destroying, when this prophecy was fulfilled, and which was aimed at in them. It would describe them as they were, fierce and cruel, as conquerors, but infamous, even among the Heathen, for their incests. Sins of the

had chosen as the strong depository of his wealth, of Persian women of rank, confidential officers and envoys⁶, was betrayed, but so opened its gates to his general, Parmenio. Zidon, a city renowned for its antiquity and its founders, surrendered freely; Tyre, here specially marked out, was taken after a 7 months' siege; Gaza too resisted for 5 months, was taken, and, as it was said, "plucked up"⁷.

And Damascus shall be the rest thereof. God's judgment fell first upon Damascus. But the word "resting-place" is commonly used of quiet peaceful resting, especially as given by God to Israel; of the ark, the token of the Presence of God, after its manifold removals, and of the glorious dwelling-place of the Christ among men⁸. The prophet seems then purposely to have chosen a word of large meaning, which should at once express (as he had before⁹), that the word of God should fall heavily on Damascus and yet be its resting-place. Hence, about the time of our Lord, the Jews interpreted this of the coming of the Messiah, that "¹⁰ Jerusalem should reach to the gates of Damascus. Since Damascus shall be the place of His rest, but the place of His rest is only the house of the sanctuary, as it is said, This is My rest for ever; here will I dwell." Another added¹¹, "All the prophets and all prophesied but of the years of redemption and the days of the Messiah." Damascus, on the conversion of S. Paul, became the first resting-place of the word of God, the first-fruits of the Gentiles whom the Apostle of the Gentiles gathered from East to West throughout the world.

When [or For] the eyes of man, as [lit. and i. e. especially beyond others] of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the Lord. This also implies a conversion of Gentiles, as well as Jews. For man, as contrasted with Israel, must be the heathen world, mankind.¹ "The eyes of all must needs look in adoration to God, expecting all good from Him, because the Creator of all provided for the well-being of all, as the Apostle says, ³ Is He the God of the Jews only? Is He not also of the Gentiles? Yea, of the Gentiles also. God's time of delivering His people is, when they pray to Him. So Jehoshaphat prayed, ⁴ O our God, wilt Thou not judge them? For we have no strength against this great company, which is come against us, and we know not what we shall do; but our eyes are on Thee⁵; and the Psalmist says, ⁶ The eyes of all wait toward Thee; and, ⁷ as the eyes of servants are unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden are unto the hand of her mistress, so our eyes are unto the Lord our God, until He have mercy upon us. "For in those days," says a Jew, who represents the traditional interpretation⁸, "man shall look to his Creator, and his eyes shall look to the Blessed One, as it was said above, we will go with you, and they shall join themselves, they and their cities, to the cities of Israel." And another⁹, "In those days the eyes of all mankind shall be to the Lord, not to idols or images; therefore the land of Hadrach and Damascus, and the other places near the land of Israel—shall be included among the cities of Judah, and shall be in the faith of Israel."

Near to it in place and character, it shall share its subdual. After the betrayal of Damascus, Parthenio was set over all Syria. "The Syrians, not as yet tamed by the losses of war, despised the new empire, but, swiftly subdued, they did obediently what they were commanded."

And Zidon, Zidon, although probably older than Tyre¹², is here spoken of parenthetically, as subordinate. Perhaps, owing to its situation, it was a wealthy¹³, rather than a strong place. Its name is "Fishing-town;" in Joshua, it is called "the great"¹⁴, perhaps the metropolis; while Tyre is named from its strength¹⁵. It infected Israel with its idolatry¹⁶, and is mentioned among the nations who oppressed them and from whom God delivered them on their prayers¹⁷, probably under Jubin. In the time of the Judges, it, not Tyre, was looked to for protection¹⁸. In the times of Ezekiel it had become subordinate, furnishing "rowers"¹⁹ to Tyre; but Esarhaddon, about 80 years before, boasts that he had taken it, destroyed its inhabitants, and re-peopled it with men from the East, building a new city which he called by his own name²⁰. Tyre too had been taken by Nebuchadnezzar²¹. At the restoration from the captivity, Zidon had the first place²², which it retained in the time of Xerxes²³. But Artaxerxes Ochus gained possession of it by treachery, when all Phœnicia revolted from Persia, and, besides those crucified, 40,000 of its inhabitants perished by their own hands²⁴, twenty years before the invasion of Alexander, to whom it submitted willingly²⁵.

alone, as being alone of account in the days of which he is speaking, those of Alexander.

Although, rather, because she is very wise.
Man's own wisdom is his foolishness and destruction, as the foolishness of God is his wisdom and salvation. The god ¹ taketh the wise in their own craftiness. ² For after that, in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Of the Hagarines it is said, they ³ seek wisdom upon earth; none of these know the way of wisdom, or remember her paths. The wisdom of Tyre was the source of her pride, and so of her destruction also.
⁴ Because thy heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas; yet thou art a man and not God, though thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God; behold thou art wiser than Daniel,
there is no secret that they can hide from thee.
Therefore I will bring strangers upon thee—they shall bring thee down to the pit. So of Edom Obadiah says, ⁵ The pride of thy heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock. Shall I not destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau?

3. And Tyre did build herself a stronghold.
She built it for herself, not for God, and trusted to it, not to God, and so its strength brought her the greater fall. The words in Hebrew express yet more. "Tyre" (Zor) lit.
"the rock," built herself mazor, tower, a rock-like fort, as it were, a rock upon a rock for exceeding strength, binding her together.
"6 The walls, 150 feet high and of breadth proportionate, compacted of large stones, embedded in gypsum," seemed to defy an enemy who could only approach her by sea. "7 In order to make the wall twice as strong they built a second wall ten cubits broad, leaving a space between of five cubits, which they filled with stones and earth." Yet high walls do not fence in only; they also hem in.
Mazor is both "a stronghold" and "a siege." Wealth and strength, without God, do but invite and embitter the spoiler and the conqueror."

And she heaped up silver as the dust, and fine

gold as the mire of the streets. Though he heap up silver as the dust, Job says. ⁸ The King, Solomon, made silver in Jerusalem as stones⁹.
Through her manifold commerce she gathered to herself wealth, as abundant as the mire and the dust, and as valueless. "Gold and silver," said a heathen, "are but red and white earth." Its strength was its destruction. Tyre determined to resist Alexander,
"10 trusting in the strength of the island, and the stores which they had laid up," the strength within and without, of which the Prophet speaks.

4. Behold. Such were the preparations of Tyre. Over against them, as it were, the prophet sets before our eyes the counsels of God. "11 Since they had severed themselves from the providence of God, they were now to experience His power." *The Lord will cast her out¹², lit. deprive her of her possessions, give her an heir of what she had amassed,
viz: the enemy; and he will smite her power or wealth¹³, of which Ezekiel says, ¹⁴ With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures: by the greatness of thy wisdom and by thy traffic thou hast increased thy riches, and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches¹⁵.* All wherein she relied, and so too the stronghold itself, God would smite in the sea. The sea was her confidence and boast.
She said ¹⁶ I am a God; I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas.

The scene of her pride was to be that of her overthrow; the waves, which girt her round, should bury her ruins and wash over her site. Even in the sea the hand of God should find her, and smite her in it, and into it, and so battle of Issus with unlimited resources, "engineers from Cyprus and all Phoenicia," and "a fleet of 180 ships from Cyprus," attests the wisdom in which the prophet says, she would trust. "She had already a profusion of catapults and other machines useful in a siege, and easily prepared manifold others by the makers of war-engines and all sorts of artificers whom she had, and these invented new engines of all sorts; so that the whole circuit of the city was filled with engines." Divers who should loosen the mole; grappling hooks and nets to entangle near-assailants; melted metal or heated sand to penetrate between the joints of their armor; bags of sea-weed to deaden the blows of the battering machines; a fire-ship navigated so as to destroy the works of the enemy, while its sailors escaped; fiery arrows; wheels set in continual motion, to turn aside the missiles against them; bear witness to an unwearied inventiveness of defence. The temporary failures might have shaken any mind but Alexander's (who is even said to have hesitated⁵) but that he dared not, by abandoning the enterprise, lose the prestige of victory. Yet all ended in the massacre of 6, 7, or 8000 of her men, the crucifixion of 2000, the sale of the rest, whether 13,000 or 30,000, into slavery⁶. None escaped save those whom the Sidonians secreted in the vessels⁷, with which they had been compelled to serve against her.

And she herself⁸, when her strength is overthrown, shall be devoured with fire. "Alexander, having slain all, save those who fled to the temples, ordered the houses to be set on fire."

The mightiest and wealthiest, Tyre, having fallen, the neighbor cities of Philistia who had hoped that her might should be their stay, shall stand in fear and shame. Tyre, being a merchant-city, the mother-city of the cities of the African coast and in Spain, its desolation caused the more terror¹⁰.

¹⁰ Herodotus states it to have been the wont of the Persian monarchs to put the sons even of revolted kings on their fathers' thrones (iii. 15), and in the review of the Persian troops under Xerxes mentions different tributary kings, among whom the king of Sidon had first rank; then the king of Tyre; then the rest (viii. 67). Josephus speaks of "the kings of Syria" (Ant. xi. 8. 5.)

And the [a] king shall perish from Gaza, i. e. it shall have no more kings. It had been the policy of the world-empires to have tributary kings in the petty kingdoms which they conquered, thus providing for their continued tranquil submission to themselves¹¹. The internal government remained as before: the people felt no difference, except as to the payment of the tribute. The policy is expressed by the title "king of kings," which they successively bore. Sennacherib speaks of the kings of Ascalon, Ekron and Gaza¹². A contemporary of Alexander¹³ mentions, that the king of Gaza was brought alive to Alexander on its capture. Alexander's policy was essentially different from that of the world-monarchs before him. They desired only to hold an empire as wide as possible, leaving the native kings, if they could; and only, if these were intractable, placing their own lieutenants. Alexander's policy was to blend East and West into one¹⁴. These petty sovereignties, so many insulated centres of mutual repulsion, were essentially at variance with this plan, and so this remnant of sovereignty of 1500 years was taken away by him, when, after a siege in which he himself was twice wounded, he took it. Alexander wholly depopulated it, and re-peopled the city with strangers.

And Ashkelon shall not be inhabited. Ashkelon yielded at once to Jonathan, when he "camped against it"¹⁵, after he had taken and "burned Ashdod and the cities round about it." In another expedition of Jonathan its inhabitants "¹⁶ met him honorably," while "they of Gaza shut him out" at first. "¹⁷ Simon—passed through the country unto Ascalon, and the holds there adjoining," without resistance, whereas "he turned aside to Joppe, and won it." He placed Jews in Gaza, but of Ascalon nothing is said. The ruins of a Christian city, built on its site, "khirbet-Ascalon," have been lately discovered in the hills near Tell Zakariyeh¹⁸, and so, a little South of Timnath, a Philistine city in the days of Samson, whence

Samson went to it, to gain the 30 changes of raiment¹. Commentators have assigned reasons, why Samson might have gone so far as the maritime Ascalon, whereas, in fact, he went to a city close by.

That city, in 536 A.D., had its Bishop².
 "The site shews the remains of an early Christian Church or convent:" as a great lintel of stone³, resembling somewhat the Maltese Cross, lies on the ground." It was probably destroyed by the inundation of Mohammedan conquest. In 1163 A.D. it was a ruin. The distance of the ruins from the Ascalon Maium corresponds to that assigned by Benjamin of Tudela, being twice the distance of that city from Ashdod⁴; but since he was at Beth Jibrin⁵, he must have been not far from the spot where it has been lately discovered⁶. The Ashkelon, which was Herod's birth-place and which he beautified, must have been the well-known city by the sea; since the distance from Jerusalem assigned by Josephus⁷ is too great for the old Ashkelon, and he speaks of it as on ⁷ Jeremiah, xlvii. 7, How can it (the sword of the Lord) be quiet, seeing that the Lord has given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea-shore?

 has often been wrongly quoted in proof that Ashkelon was on the sea-shore." On the contrary, Jeremiah speaks of them as distinct; "against Ashkelon and against the sea-shore." The דור הים, in the 3 other places, in which it occurs, is only a title for Philistia itself, as lying between the Shephelah and the sea. Thus in Deut. 1, 7, Palestine is divided into the hill country, the 'Arabah, the Shephelah, the Negeb, and the דור הים. In Joshua, ix. 1, the division is, "the hill country, the Shephelah, and the whole coast of the great sea, הים חוף הים, הגדול." Ezekiel (xxv. 16) uses הים חוף הים, as equivalent to the Cherethim and Philistim, whom he had named in v. 5. Jeremiah names together the whole tract and a chief city of it, as the prophets so often speak of "Judah and Jerusalem."

The "mamzer" was one born unlawfully, whether out of marriage, or in forbidden marriage, or in adultery¹¹. Here it is, probably, like our "spurious brood¹²," whether it was so itself or in the eyes of the Ashdodites; whence he adds,

I will cut off the pride of the Philistines.
 Pride would survive the ruin of their country, the capture of their cities, the loss of independence. It would not survive the loss of their nationality; for they themselves would not be the same people, who were proud of their long descent and their victories over Israel. The breaking down of nationalities, which was the policy of Alexander, was an instrument in God's hands in cutting off their pride.

7. And I will take away his bloods out of his

 the bloods will also be, the blood

שקין always retains its appellative sense. It is not merely "idols," but idols, in that they were "abominations." It is generally in constr., "the shall remain over to our God. Of the Philistines too, as of Israel, a remnant shall be saved. After this visitation their idolatry should cease; God speaks of the Philistine nation as one man; He would wring his idol-sacrifices and idol-enjoyments from him; he should exist as a nation, but as God's.

And he shall be as a governor in Judah, lit. "a captain of a thousand," merged in Judah as in a larger whole, as each tribe was divided into its "thousands," yet intimately blended, in no inferior position, with the people of God, as each converted nation became an integral yet unseparated whole in the people of God.

And Ekron as a Jebusite. Ekron was apparently the least important of the few remaining Philistine cities¹; yet he shall be, as those of the Canaanite nations who were not destroyed, nor fled, but in the very capital and centre of Israel's worship,² dwell with the children of Benjamin and Judah, and were, as a type of the future conversion and absorption of the heathen, incorporated into Judah.

8. And I will encamp about my house (for³ my house's sake) because of the army⁴; because, it is added in explanation, of him that passeth by and of him that returneth; Alexander, who passed by with his army, on his way to Egypt, and returned, having founded Alexandria.

It was a most eventful march; one of the most eventful in the history of mankind. The destruction of the Persian empire, for which it prepared, was in itself of little moment; Alexander's own empire was very brief. As Daniel had foretold⁵, he came, cast down Persia to the ground, waxed very great, and when he was strong, the great horn was broken. But with the marvelous perception which characterized him, he saw and impressed upon his successors the dependableness of the Jewish people. When he came into Judah, he sent to the high priest for aid against Tyre and for the like tribute as he used to pay to Darius, promising that he would not repent of choosing the friendship of the Macedonians⁶. The high priest refused on the ground of the oath, by which his people were bound in fealty to the earthly king of kings, whom Alexander came to subdue. Alexander threatened to teach all, through its fate, to whom fealty was due. This, after the conquest of Gaza, he prepared to fulfill. He came, he saw, he was conquered. Jaddua and his people prayed to God. Taught by God in a dream not to fear, he went to meet the conqueror. The gates of the city were thrown open. There marched out, not an army such as encountered the Romans, but as he had been taught, a multitude in white garments, and the priests going before in their raiment of fine linen. The high priest, in his apparel of purple and gold, having on his head the mitre, and on it the golden plate⁷, whereon was written the name of God, advanced alone, and the Conqueror, who was expected to give the city to be plundered, and the high priest to be insulted and slain, kissed the name of God, recognizing in the priest one whom he had seen in the like dress in a dream, who had bidden him, when hesitating, cross to Asia; for that he would go before his army and deliver the Persian empire to him.

The result is related to have been, that Alexander promised to allow the Jews in Judaea to live according to their own laws, remitted the tribute of every seventh year, acceded beforehand to the terms to be proposed by those in Babylonia and Media, and that many Jews joined his army, under condition that they might live under their own laws.

Rationalism, while it remains such, cannot admit of Daniel's prophecies which the high priest shewed him, declaring that a Greek should destroy the Persian empire, which Alexander rightly interpreted of himself. But the facts remain; that the conqueror, who, above most, gave way to his anger, bestowed privileges almost incredible

The context also favors the reading; for unless the passers by and returners had been a powerful army, there had been no occasion for that defence of which God speaks. The correction עֲבָדָה would come to the same, "a military post;" only, in actual use, this is a "fort," "fortress." 1 Sam. xiv. 12, i. q. עָבָד lb. xlii. 23, xiv. 1, 4, 6, 11, 15, on a nation, which under the Medes and Persians had been "the most despised part of the enslaved;" made them equal in privileges to his own Macedonians², who could hardly brook the absorption of the Persians, although in inferior condition, among themselves³. The most despised of the enslaved became the most trusted of the trusted. They became a large portion of the second and third then known cities of the world. They became Alexandrians, Antiochenes, Ephesians⁴, without ceasing to be Jews. The law commanded faithfulness to oaths, and they who despised their religion respected its fruits.

The immediate successors of Alexander, Ptolemy Lagi⁵ and Antiochus Nicator, followed his policy; Ptolemy especially on the ground of the fealty shewn to Darius; Nicator, as having observed their faithfulness as soldiers, who had served with him⁶; but they were so enrolled on this visit to Jerusalem. The Heathen kings multiplied, in their own purpose, faithful subjects to themselves; in God's design, they prepared in Asia and Egypt a seed-plot for the Gospel. The settlement of the Jews at Alexandria formed the language of the Gospel; that wonderful blending of the depth of the Hebrew with the clearness and precision of the Greek. Everywhere the seed of the preparatory dispensation was sown, to be fostered, grow and ripen with the harvest of the Gospel.

For now have I seen with Mine eyes. This is the counterpart of what the Psalmists and pious men so often pray, ⁷Awake to help me and behold; ⁸Look down from heaven, behold and visit this vine; ⁹Look upon my trouble from them that hate me; ¹⁰Look upon my affliction and my trouble; look upon my enemies, for they are many; ¹¹Look upon my adversity and deliver me; ¹²O Lord, behold my affliction; ¹³Behold, O Lord, for I am in distress; ¹⁴Look and behold my reproach; ¹⁵Open Thine eyes, O Lord, and see; ¹⁶Look down from heaven, and behold from the habitation of Thy holiness and glory. With God, compassion is so intrinsic an attribute, that He is pictured as looking away, when He does not put it forth. With God, to behold is to help.

9. From the protection, which God promised to His people and to His House, the Prophet passes on to Him Who was ever in his thoughts, and for Whose sake that people and temple were preserved. He had described the great conqueror of this world,

¹ Tacitus limits the description to the time, "when the East belonged to the Assyrians, Medes and Persians." Hist. v. 8.

² Alexander gave them (the Jews) a place to dwell in, and they obtained equal rank with the Macedonians. I know not what Apion would have said, had they been settled near the Neopolis and not near the palace, and were not their race now too called 'Macedonians.' If then he (Apion) has read the Epistles of Alexander the King, and has met with the rescripts of Ptolemy Lagi and the kings after him, and has lighted on the column which stands in Alexandria and contains the rights given by the great Cæsar to the Jews; if, I say, he knows these things, and, knowing them, has dared to write the contrary, he is unprincipled; if he knew nothing of them, he is ill-instructed." "Alexander collected some of our people there, not for want of such as should colonize the city which he founded with great earnestness. But carefully proving all as to good faith and probity, he gave this distinction to our people. For he honored our nation, as Hecateus too says of us, that, for the probity and good faith which the Jews evinced toward him, he gave them in addition the territory of Samaria to hold, free from tribute. And Ptolemy Lagi too was like-minded with Alexander as to those who dwell in Alexandria." Jos. lb. This early equalizing of the Jews with Alexandrians is recognized in the edit of Claudius: "Having learnt that the Jews in Alexandria were from the first called Alexandrians, having been settled there together with the Alexandrians straightway at the earliest period, and having received from the kings equal citizenship, as appeared plain both from their letters and from the ordinances," &c. [in Jos. Ant. xix. 6. 2.] In Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet," p. 146, n. 3.

⁴ His (Apion's) marveling, how, being Jews, they were called Alexandrians, betrays the same ignorance. For all who are invited into a given colony, much as they differ in race, take their name from its founders. Those of us, who dwell at Antioch, are called Antiochenes. For Seleucus, the founder, gave them citizenship. And so too in Ephesus, and the rest of Ionia, they bear the same name with the natives, the Successors (of Alexander) having given it to them." Jos. c. Ap. ii. 4. See Pusey's "Daniel the Prophet," p. 146, n. 2.

⁵ Ptolemy Lagi, "understanding that, those from Jerusalem were most reliable as to their oaths and fealty, (from the answer which they gave to the embassy of Alexander after he had conquered Darius,) having located many of them in the garrisons and given them equal rights of citizenship with the Macedonians in Alexandria, took an oath of them that they would keep fealty to the descendants of him who gave them this charge. And no few of the other Jews came of their own accord into Egypt, invited by the goodness of the soil and the liberality of Ptolemy." Jos. Ant. xii. 1. lb. p. 145, n. 8.

⁶ They (the Jews) obtained the honor from the kings of Asia also, having served in the army with them. For Seleucus Nicator, in the cities which he founded in Asia and in lower Syria, and in the metropolis itself, Antioch, conferred on them citizenship, and made them rank with the Macedonians and Greeks who were settled therein, so that this citizenship remains even now also." sweeping along in his course of victory. In contrast with such as he, he now exhibits to his people the character and procession of their king. Rejoice greatly. Not with this world's joy. God never exhorts man to rejoice greatly in this world's fleeting joys. He allows us to be glad, as children, before Him; He permits such buoyancy of heart, if innocent; but He does not command it. Now He commands His people to burst out into a jubilee of rejoicing: they were to dance and shout for gladness of spirit; "despising the poor exultation of this world and exulting with that exceeding" yet chaste joy, which befits the true bliss to be brought by their King and Saviour. "This word, greatly, means that there should be no measure whatever in their exultation; for the exultation of the children of the bridegroom is far unlike to the exultation of the children of this world."

"He biddeth the spiritual Zion rejoice, inasmuch as dejection was removed. For what cause of sorrow is there, when sin has been removed, death trampled under foot, and human nature called to the dignity of freedom, and crowned with the grace of adoption and illumined with the heavenly gift?"

Behold, thy king cometh unto thee. He does not say "a king," but "thy king;" thy king, thine own, the long-promised, the long-expected; He Who, when they had kings of their own, given them by God, had been promised as the king¹; "the righteous Ruler among men, of the seed of David; He Who, above all other kings, was their King and Saviour; Whose kingdom was to absorb in itself all kingdoms of the earth; the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Her king was to come to her. He was in a manner then "of her," and "not of her;" "of her," since He was to be her king, "not of her," since He was to "come to her." As Man, He was born of her: as God, the Word made flesh, He came to her. "To thee, to be manifest unto thee²; to be thine by communion of nature³; as He is thine, by the earnest of the Eternal Spirit and the gift of the Father, to procure thy good. "Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given." Of this, His entry into Jerusalem was an image. But how should He come? "He shall come to thee," says an old Jewish writing⁴, "to atone thee; He shall come to thee, to upraise thee; He shall come to thee, to raise thee up to His temple, and to espouse thee with an everlasting espousal."

He is just and having salvation. Just or righteous, and the Fountain of justice or righteousness. For what He is, that He diffuseth. Righteousness which God Is, and righteousness which God, made Man, imparts, are often blended in Holy Scripture⁵. This is also the source of the exceeding joy. For the coming of their king in righteousness would be, to sinful man, a cause, not of joy but of fear. This was the source of the Angel's message of joy; "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour."

He is just, "because in the Divine Nature, He is the Fountain of all holiness and justice." "As Thou art righteous Thyself, Thou orderest all things righteously. For Thy power is the beginning of righteousness." According to the nature which He took, He was also most just; for He ever sought the glory of the Father, and "He did no sin, neither was guile found in His Mouth. In the way also of justice He satisfied for men, delivering Himself for their faults to the pain of the most bitter death, to satisfy the honor of the Divine Majesty, so that sin should not remain unpunished. Hence He saith of Himself; "He that seeketh His glory that sent Him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in Him. Of Whom also Stephen said to the Jews, "Your fathers slew them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One, of Whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers. Righteousness is an awful attribute of God. It is a glory and perfection of His Being, for the perfect to gaze on and adore. Mercy, issuing in our salvation, is the attribute which draws us sinners. And this lies in the promise that He should come to them, however the one word nosha' be rendered⁷. The meaning of such a prophecy as this is secure, independent of single words. The whole context implies, that He should come as a ruler and deliverer, whether the word nosha' signify

"endued with salvation," (whereas the old versions rendered it, "Saviour") or whether it be, "saved." For as He came, not for Himself but for us, so, in as far as He could be said to be saved, He was "saved," not for Himself but for us. Of our Lord, as Man, it is, in like way, said, Thou shalt not leave His soul in Hell, or, ² Whom God raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be holden of it. As Man, He was raised from the dead; as God, He raised Himself from the dead, for our sakes, for whom He died. For us, He was born a Saviour; for us, He was endued with salvation; for us, He was saved from being held of death; in like way as, of His Human Nature, the Apostle says, He was heard, in that He feared. To us, as sinners, it is happiest to hear of the Saviour; but the most literal meaning "saved" has its own proper comfort: for it implies the Sufferings, by which that salvation was procured, and so it contains a hint of the teaching by Isaiah, He was taken from oppression and from judgment; upon which that same wide reign follows, of which David, in his picture of the Passion ⁴, and Isaiah ⁵ prophesy. ⁶ "This 'saved' does not imply, that He obtained salvation for His own otherwise than from Himself. Mine own arm. He saith in Isaiah, 'brought salvation unto Me. But as Man, He obtained salvation from the indwelling Godhead. For when He destroyed the might of death, when, rising from the dead, He ascended into heaven, when He took on Him the everlasting kingdom of heaven and earth, He obtained salvation from the glory of the Father, i. e. from His own Divinity, to impart it to all His. The Hebrew word then in no way diminishes the amplitude of His dignity. For we confess, that the Human Nature of Christ had that everlasting glory added to it from His Divine Nature, so that He should not only be Himself adorned with those everlasting gifts, but should become the cause of everlasting salvation to all who obey Him."

Lowly. Outward lowliness of condition, is, through the grace of God, the best fosterer of the inward. The word lowly wonderfully expresses the union of both; lowliness of outward state with lowliness of soul. The Hebrew word expresses the condition of one, who is bowed down, brought low through oppression, affliction, desolation, poverty, persecution, bereavement; but only if, at the same time, he had in him the fruit of all these, in lowliness of mind, submission to God, piety. Thus our Lord pronounces the blessedness of "the poor" and "the poor in spirit," i. e. poor in estate, who are poor in soul also. But in no case does it express lowliness of mind without lowness of condition. One lowly, who was not afflicted, would never be so called. The Prophet then declares that their king should come to them in a poor condition, stricken, smitten, and afflicted, and with the special grace of that condition, meekness, gentleness and lowliness of soul; and our Lord bids us, Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart. ¹⁰ He saith of Himself in the Gospel, The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His Head. ¹¹ For though He was rich, He for our sakes became poor; that we through His poverty might be rich.

Lowly and riding upon an ass. Kings of the earth ride in state. The days were long since by, when the sons of the judges rode on asses ¹². Even then the more distinguished rode on white (i. e. roan ¹⁴) asses. The mule, as a taller animal, was used by David ¹⁵ and his sons ¹⁶, while asses were used for his household ¹⁷, and by Ziba, Shimei, Mephiboseth, Ahitophel ¹⁸, and, later, by the old prophet of Bethel ¹⁹. David had reserved horses for 100 chariots ²⁰, after the defeat of the Syrians, but he himself did not use them. Absalom employed chariots and horses ²¹ as part of his pomp, when preparing to displace his father; and Solomon multiplied them ²². He speaks of it as an indignity or reverse; ²³ I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking, as servants, upon the earth. The burial of an ass became a proverb for a disgraced end ²⁴. There is no instance in which a king rode on an ass, save He Whose kingdom was not of this world. The prophecy, then, was framed to prepare the Jews to expect a prophet-king, not a king of this world. Their eyes were fixed on this passage. In the Talmud, in their traditional interpretations, and in their mystical books, they dwelt on these words. The mention of the ass, elsewhere, seemed to them typical of this ass, on which their Messiah should ride. "If a man in a dream seeth an ass," says

¹ Berachoth f. 56. 2 (in Schöttgen ad loc.). There was a general consent among the Jews, that this prophecy related to the Messiah. R. Joseph (probably "the pious," the disciple of Jochanan, the disciple of Hillel, Wolf, Bibl. Hebr. ii. 848, 844) used it as an argument against R. Hillel, who disbelieved in any Messiah. "R. Hillel, 'Israel has no Messiah, for they enjoyed him in the days of Hezekiah.' R. Joseph said, 'Lord, forgive R. Hillel!' When did Hezekiah live? In [the time of] the first temple. But Zechariah prophesied in [the time of] the second temple; 'Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion, behold, thy king cometh unto thee, righteous and nosha.' He said also, 'O that he may come, and that I may be worthy to sit in the shadow of the dung of his ass.' Sanhedrin, f. 99. 1. "R. Alexander said, that R. Joshua ben Levi set against each other the Scriptures, 'Lo there came with the clouds of heaven one like unto the Son of Man,' and that, 'lowly and riding on an ass.' Deserve he [Israel], 'with the clouds of heaven;' deserve he not, 'lowly and riding on an ass.' Ib. f. 98. "All these goods, which I will do to them through the merits of the Messiah, shall be extended in all those years." R. Jannai (about A. D. 130) said from Raf, "whoever looketh for salvation, God will give him rest in the garden of Eden, according to that, 'I will feed my flock and cause them to lie down' (Ezk. xxxiv. 15) 'Just and nosha.' This is the Messiah, who justifieth his judgment against Israel because they mocked him, because he sat in prison, so he is called 'just.' But why נִשְׂחָה, but that he justifieth the judgment upon them. He says to them, 'ye are my sons; are ye not all to be saved only by the mercy of the Holy One, blessed be He?' Afflicted and riding on an ass.' This is the Messiah. But why is his name called נִשְׂחָה, 'afflicted?' Because he was afflicted all those years in prison, and the transgressors of Israel mocked him, because he rideth upon an ass on account of the wicked who have no desert." (a dislocated passage, Schöttg. says, of the Pesikta Rabbathi f. 61. 1. 2 in Schöttg. de Messia, loci gen. n. xxvii. p. 136. The Hebrew of the latter part is given by Wünsche d. Leiden des Messias p. 66.) And in a remarkable passage on Cant. i. 4, "Let us exult and rejoice in thee." "The Matrona is like a royal bride, whose husband the king, her sons and sons-in-law, were gone beyond sea. When they brought her word that her sons were returned, she said, 'What cause of joy have I? Let my daughters-in-law rejoice!' Another messenger came, that her sons-in-law were returned, she answered, 'What cause of joy have I? Let my daughters rejoice!' But when they told her that the king, her husband, was returned, she said, 'This is perfect joy, a joy above all joys!' So also in the time to come, the time of the Messiah, the prophets shall come to Jerusalem and say, (Is. ix. 4) 'thy sons shall come from far;' she will answer, 'What cause of joy have I?' The prophets will add, 'Thy daughters shall be nurtured by thy side; she will answer in like way. But when they shall say to her, 'Behold, thy king cometh unto thee, just and a Saviour,' then she shall say, 'This is perfect joy; as in, 'Exult greatly, daughter of Zion, and elsewhere, 'Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion.' Then she shall say, 'I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God (Is. lxi. 10).'" Shir hashirim Rabbah fol. 7. 3 (in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. v., Martini f. 512). They quote the prophecy also as to the union of the royal and priestly offices of the Messiah. The Bereishith Rabbah had on Gen. xiv. 18, "And Melchizedec, king of Salem." This is the name of Shem, the son of Noah. What would that teach, 'he brought forth bread and wine?' R. Samuel Bar Nachman said, He delivered to him the ways of the priesthood, and he offered bread and wine to God, as it is said, 'He was priest of the fulfill, save the True. For their minds were set on earthly glory and worldly greatness: it would have been inconsistent with the claims of one, whose kingdom was of this most High God, king of Salem.'—Otherwise; Melchizedec; this is what Scripture saith, 'The Lord aware and will not repent, 'Thou art a Priest for ever after the order of Melchizedec.' And who is he? This is the king, righteous and נִשְׂחָה, the king Messiah, according to, 'Behold thy king cometh unto thee, righteous and נִשְׂחָה.' And what would that teach, 'He brought forth bread and wine?' It is as is said, 'Be there a handful of corn upon the earth.' (Ps. lxxii. 16.) This is what is written, 'And he was a priest of the most High God.' (in Mart. f. 534 end.) Or they argue from נִשְׂחָה, as to the free mercy of God, "God says to Israel, If your merit is not of such account, I do it for my own sake; for day by day, when you are in trouble, I am with you, as in, 'I am with him in trouble,' (Ps. xci. 15); and so I deliver myself, 'And he saw that there was no one, and wondered' (Is. lix. 16); and elsewhere, 'Exult greatly, daughter of Zion—behold thy king cometh unto thee, just and נִשְׂחָה.' It is not written וְנוֹשָׂה ("and saving") but נִשְׂחָה ("and saved"); whereby it is hinted that, though your merits are not of such account, God will act for His own sake, according to, 'For my salvation is near to come.'" (Shemoth Rabbah sect. 30, fol. 129. 1. Schöttg. loc. gen. n. ix.) Martini quotes a like saying from the Bereishith Rabbah on Gen. xlix. 8. "R. Berachiah the priest, son of Rabbi, said, See what is written, 'Rejoice greatly &c.' It is not written, 'Just and נִשְׂחָה, a Saviour,' but 'Just and נִשְׂחָה saved,' and thus he says, (Is. lix. 11.) 'Say ye to the daughter of Zion—it is not written, 'thy Saviour (מְשִׁיחָךְ) cometh,' but, 'Behold thy salvation (שְׁעָךְ) cometh.' As if one might so speak, 'Israel was redeemed, and it is as if God were redeemed,' and this is one of the hard Scriptures, that the salvation of Israel is the salvation of God." fol. 518. Martini quotes also from a comment on Isaiah lvii. 1. "The righteous perisheth." "This is Messiah, of Whom it is said, 'Just and saved.'" f. 334.

In other places, the riding upon the ass is dwelt upon. Midrash Cohelith on Eccl. i. 9. f. 73. 3. "R. Berachiah said from R. Isaac, As was the first redeemer, so also shall be the last redeemer. What did the first redeemer? (Ex. iv. 28.) 'And Moses took his wife and his sons and placed them on an ass;' the second, as is written, 'lowly and riding on an ass.'" (Martini f. 330, and 690, Schöttg. Hor. Hebr. on S. Matt. xxi. 5.) In the Midrash Shemuel f. 66. 1. the saying is ascribed to R. Levi (Schöttg. on this place). And the Pirke R. Eliezer c. 31, of Abraham's ass, "This is the ass, on which the son of David shall ride, according to, 'Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion.'" (Ib.) The Zohar owns that the prophecy relates to the Messiah, but apologizes for it. "It is not the custom that the king and his Matrona should ride on an ass, but rather on horses, as in (Hab. iii. 7.) 'For thou shalt ride on thy horses, and thy chariots are salvation.' For they do not esteem a matrona so lightly, that she should ride on an ass, as the king would not to ride on an ass, like one of the people. And therefore it is said of the Messiah, 'Poor and riding upon an ass.' And he is not there called king, until he ride upon his horses, which are the people of Israel." (on Levit. f. 38. col. 151. in Schöttg. de Mess. vi. 213. p. 543.) Or they say great things of the ass. "This ass is son of the she-ass, which was created within the six days in the twilight. This is the ass, which Abraham saddled, when he purposed to sacrifice Isaac. This is the ass, on which Moses was carried when he went to Egypt. This is the ass, on which the son of David shall ride hereafter." Yalkut Reubeni (f. 79, 3, 4 on Exod. iv.

20 in Schöttg. on S. Matt. xxi. 5.) They connect it with Balaam's ass. "This is the ass destined for the Messiah, as it is written, 'Poor and riding on an ass.'" (Zohar Num. f. 83. col. 332.) Or they speak of his reigning thereon. "This is the ass, on which the Messiah shall reign," as it is written, 'Poor and riding on an ass.'" (Zohar Num. f. 83. col. 332. (on Deut. xxii. 10.) in Schöttg. de Messia vi. 2. 12. p. 541. The mention of an 'ass' in Holy Scripture suggests the thought of this prophecy, as relating to the Son of David. "And I have oxen and asses." Messiah son of David is hinted at here, of whom it is written, 'Meek and riding upon an ass.'" (Tanchuma on Gen. xxxii. 6. f. 12. 2. (in Schöttg. on S. Matt. xxi. 5.) And the Beresith Rabba on Gen. xlix. 14, had, "By the foot of the ox (Is. xxxii. 20.) is understood Messias son of Joseph, according to Deut. xxxiii. 17. 'His glory is of the firstling of a bullock.' But by the foot of the ass, Messiah son of David, as in Zach., 'Meek and riding on an ass.'" (in Mart. f. 330. See also Schöttg. loc. gen. n. liii. and lxxiv.) "When he shall come, of Whom it is written, 'J' and riding upon an ass,' he will wash his garments in wine, i. e. make clear to them the words of the law, and his clothes in the blood of grapes, i. e. cleanse them from their errors." Ib. f. 95. col. 4. And in the Beresith ketanna on Gen. xlix. 11. "binding his foal unto the vine and his ass's colt unto the choice vine." "This is he of whom it is written, 'J' and riding &c.' and he it is who planteth Israel as a choice vine (Jer. ii. 21): and how will he do it? As it is written, 'I will sprinkle clean water &c. Ezek. xxxvi. 21.'" (Zohar Deut. f. 118. col. 471. in Schöttg. Hore H. on Hab. ii. 3. p. 215. "After that depth (of the fulfillment of the vision, Hab. ii. 3.) was opened, whoever fell into it, never came up. The Messiah Ben David fell into it, with the Messiah ben Joseph, of whom one is 'poor and riding upon an ass,' the other, 'the firstling of his bullock' (Deut. xxxiii. 17.), viz. the Messiah ben Joseph. And this is alluded to in (Ex. xxi. 23.) 'If any one dig a pit and cover it not, and an ox or an ass fall therein.' And therefore the Messiah is called 'Iar naphli' 'son of the fallen.'" The Beresith Rabba quoted the prophecy also in proof of His meekness. "When the king Messiah shall come to Jerusalem to save Israel, he shall bind his ass and ride upon it and come to Jerusalem, that he may conduct himself in lowliness, as it is said, 'lowly and riding upon an ass.' And his ass's foal unto the choice vine, when he shall come to gather the congregation of Israel, [which is called a vine in that, Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt," added in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. lix.] as in Zach. x. 8. 'I will hiss to them and will gather them, then he shall ride on the foal of his ass, as in Zach. ix. 9. 'Rejoice greatly &c.' And is it not of old said of the Messiah, 'He cometh in the clouds of heaven cometh one like the Son of man?' (Dan. vii. 13.) If Israel deserveth, 'He cometh with the clouds of heaven,' and if he deserveth not, 'lowly and riding on an ass.' on Gen. xlix. 11 in Martini f. 656 (or latter part as in Sanhedrin above). In times not far from our Lord, the Messiah seems to be mentioned, as under a well-known name, "he who is borne upon an ass." The Zohar quotes a revelation to R. Eliezer and R. Abba, "Did I not say to you that the precept of the king lasts, until he shall come who is borne on an ass?" (Zohar Gen. in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. xxxi. 7 p. 79.) And "J' 'afflicted' becomes an indication that the passage relates to the Messiah. Thus 'the steps of the needy,' J' (Is. lxvi. 6) is explained "This is the Messiah, 'J' and riding on an ass.'" (Beresith R. on Gen. xlix. 10. Mart. f. 656.) The Midrash Tithlum explains Ps. xc. 15, "according to the days of the Messiah." The word, J' 'hasst afflicted purpose of God, was to be compensated by Divine power. In itself it would, if insulated, have been unmeaning. The Holy Ghost prophesied it, Jesus fulfilled it, to shew the us' corresponds to the other, 'J' afflicted and riding on an ass,' as if he would say 'according to the days of our afflicted.'" (in Schöttg. ad loc. p. 242.) and the Zohar Chidash on Eccl. ix. 14. sqq. "A little city is Zion; 'and a few men in it:' these are the six days of the creation; and there came a great king against it, this is a certain one; 'and there was found in it a poor wise man.' This is Messiah Ben David, as it is said, 'J' and riding upon an ass' and 'the righteous perisheth' (Is. lvii. 1.) so long as the overflowing cometh not upon him, it is said, 'the river shall be wasted and dried up.' (Is. xix. 5.) 'The ass,' that is Samael, and the wise man, that is Messiah Ben David, and of him it is said, 'and he delivered the city by his wisdom.' And he shall be the deliverer of Messiah ben Ephraim. And this is a redemption from above." (f. 63. 2. in Schöttg. loc. gen. n. 103. filled up from: Wünsche Leiden d. Mess. p. 103.) Schöttgen ad loc. quotes also from the Zohar Deut. 117. col. 465.

The name J' is understood as indicating the Messiah. By the word J' 'ass' is indicated the king Messiah, according to that, 'poor and riding on an ass.'" Beresith Rabba sect. 75, f. 74. 2. in Schöttg. ad loc.

In later times, R. Saadiah Gaon said on Daniel vii. 13; "And behold with the clouds of heaven one came like a Son of man." This is the Messiah our righteousness, and is it not written of the Messiah, 'J' and riding upon an ass?' i. e. he shall come with meekness, for he shall not come on horses with pride; and 'the clouds of heaven' they are the Angels of the heavenly host. This is the exceeding greatness, which the Creator shall give to the Messiah." And Rashi says, "This cannot be explained, except of king Messiah; for it is said of him, 'and his dominion shall be from sea to sea;' but we do not find that such an one ruled over Israel in the time of the second house;" and (on Exod. iv. 20) "On an ass the Messiah will reveal himself, according to 'Meek and riding on an ass.'" (in Schöttg. ad loc.) The first who referred it to any other was R. Moses Hacohen (A. D. 1148), whom Ibn Ezra quotes, as explaining it of 'Nehemiah, the Tirshatha, because of him it was said, 'There is a king in Judah;' and that there was no mention of a horse, because he was poor;" which Ibn Ezra says, was contrary to the fact in Nehemiah, and also the mention of the Greeks did not suit his times. Ibn Ezra says that, as far as he knows, "it was the king Judas the Hasmonæan, whose might suited that, 'I have made them like the sword of a mighty man,' and his hand was mighty against the Greeks, and at first he had not wealth or horses." These were private opinions; for Ibn Ezra says, "The expositors are divided about it; some say, this king is Messiah ben David, and some say, Messiah ben Joseph." Both then agreed that he was a Messiah. Abarbanel says of Ibn Ezra; "I wonder that his ill intent blinded his understanding; for he, Judas the Hasmonæan was never called king, all his days, much less of Zion; that had he prophesied of the Hasmonæan, what had he to do with Ephraim, since the kingdom of Ephraim was not in the second temple; also he did not speak peace to all nations, and did not rule from sea to sea." (On his own exposition see below.) Even R. Isaac (Chitz. Emunah c. 35 p. 283 Wagenseil), denying it as to our Lord, insists upon it as relating to their Messiah whom they looked for. R. Bechai says that "Jacob (Gen. xlix. 11) used the words J' 'his ass' and J' 'the foal of his ass,' because it is written of him (the king Messiah) 'and upon a colt, the foal of an ass' (the same words being used, אֲתוֹנוֹת, J' Binat-hathorah ad loc. f. טו"ז col. 3. Amst.) R. Tanchum admits the difficulty of supposing it to relate to a future Messiah,

Jews, of what nature His kingdom was. Hence the challenge; "Let us look at the prophecy, that in words, and that in act. What is the prophecy? Lo, thy king cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and upon a colt; not driving chariots as other kings, not in pomp nor attended by guards, but shewing herein also all gentleness. Ask the Jew then, What king, riding on an ass, came to Jerusalem? He could name none, save this One alone." An ancient writer says, "The Greeks too" (not the Jews only) "will laugh at us, saying, that 'The God of the Christians, Who is called Christ, sat upon an ass.'" The same mockery was probably intended by Sapor³ king of Persia, which the Jews met with equal pride. The taunt continues till now. "It is not hid from you, O congregation of Christians, that 'rider upon an ass' indicates Christ." The Mohammedans appropriate the title "rider upon a camel" to Mohammad, as the grand animal.⁴ The taunt of worshiping "Him Who sat upon an ass" was of the same class as those of the or, since as a Jew, he could not interpret it of Jesus, of interpreting it of any one in the time of the second temple. "Some of the interpreters make this consolation an announcement of the Expected (may he soon be revealed) and this is found in most of the Midrashoth of the ancient wise (blessed be their memory) and the obvious meaning of his words, 'and his dominion is from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth' supports this; and some of them think, that from the context it relates to the circumstances of the second house, and this is supported by his words in the passage, 'And I will raise thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece,' which was in the second house, through the Hasmonians, and now the empire of Greece is dispersed and gone. How then should he promise help against it in the future? And altogether the word of the prophecies admits of the interpretation. And many vary therein from one meaning to the other. And therefore we will mention how the language can be explained according to each opinion. And God, most high, knows what is hidden! The meaning then of 'rider upon an ass' is, in my opinion, in the first way, beautiful; that 'rider' means one who humbles himself, like (Is. lvi. 2) 'And to this man will I look, to the humble' ('rider') and contrite of spirit, not weak in condition; on account then of his lowliness he will ride upon an ass." (He compares the reduplication to that in Gen. xlix. 11.) "Or," he says, "the whole of this may be a metaphor for self-abjection, not an actual history; and what is known, is that this is his condition at first for his weakness and lowness; afterward he will attain his later condition in strength and felicity. And so for the second way, this points to the return of the kingdom to Israel through the Hasmonians, and his saying 'meek and riding upon an ass' indicates their first king, Judas the Hasmonian, and he, at the outset, was weak, because he followed upon the oppression of Greece, according to what has been transmitted of that history; and that, 'his dominion shall be from sea to sea &c.' this is the kingdom to which he attained at last, and the extension of his house; and he means by this, 'from the red sea to the sea of the Philistines and from the river to the end of the habitable land;' and this is, 'And from the river &c.' and thus words, 'I will raise up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece,' will fit. And in the first way, 'from sea to sea' will be the encircling sea [the Ocean] and from the river which is the bound of the land of Israel to the fur-worship of the Crucified; "one dead and crucified, who could not save himself;" "a crucified Man," "that great Man," or (if it suited them so to speak) "that great sophist who was crucified," but Who now, for above 1800 years, reigns, "to all, the King; to all, the Judge; to all, Lord and God." "Christ did not only fulfill prophecies or plant the doctrines of truth, but did thereby also order our life for us, everywhere laying down for us rules of necessary use and, by all, correcting our life." Even Jews, having rejected our Lord, saw this. "Not from poverty," says one⁵, "for behold the whole world shall be in his power—but from humility he will ride upon an ass; and further to shew that Israel [viz. the establishment of His kingdom or Church] shall not want horse nor chariot: therefore it is added, And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem." And another⁶; "He, i. e. thy true king David, shall come to thee; and he mentions of his qualities that he shall be *righteous and noshah*⁷ in his wars; but his salvation thet habitable earth." He answers the reference to Nehemiah, but ends by leaving the other two open. Moses ben Nachman quotes it in illustration of the contempt of the Messiah spoken of in Isaiah lii. 13. lii. 3. 7. "Theirs [the kings'] astonishment was shewn by mocking him, when he first arrived, and by asking, how one despised, meek and riding upon an ass, could conquer all the kings of the world who had laid hold on Israel?—He was 'despised,' for he had no army and no people, but was 'meek and riding on an ass,' like the first redeemer Moses our master, when he entered in Egypt with his wife and children riding upon an ass. (Ex. iv. 20.) 'He was oppressed and he was afflicted,' for when he first comes 'meek and riding upon an ass,' the oppressors and officers of every city will come to him, and afflict him with revilings and insult, reproaching both him and the God in whose name he appears, like Moses our master, who when Pharaoh said, I know not the Lord, answered him not." In Jewish Commentaries on Is. liii. p. 80, 81.

The modern school, which rides itself of definite prophecy, would have this relate to "the ideal Messiah." One does not see, how a literal prophecy, fulfilled to the letter, can relate to an ideal king; unless on the implied assumption, "There can be no prophecy of a definite event." ¹⁸ S. Chrys. in S. shall not be from strength of his wars, for he shall come *lowly and riding upon an ass*¹. And riding on an ass, this is not on account of his want, but to shew that peace and truth shall be in his days; and therefore he says forthwith, And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem; viz. that such shall be the peace and stillness in the world, that in Ephraim (i. e. the tribes) and in Jerusalem (i. e. the kingdom of Judah) they shall trust no more in horse and in rider, but in the name of God. And because it is the way of princes and chiefs to take example from the life of their kings, and to do as they, therefore he saith, that when the king Messiah rideth upon an ass, and has no pleasure in the strength of a horse, there will be no other in Jerusalem or the lands of the tribes, who will have pleasure in riding on a horse. And therefore he says, And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem; and he assigns the reason for this, when he says, And the battle-bow shall be cut off, and he shall speak peace among the nations, i. e. there shall be no more war in the world, because he shall speak peace unto the nations, and by the word of his lips² he shall dispose peace unto them."

And upon a colt, the foal of an ass. The word rendered colt, as with us, signifies the young, as yet unbroken animal. In the fulfillment, our Lord directed His disciples to find "an ass tied, and a colt with her, whereon never man sat. The prophet foretold that He would ride on both animals; our Lord, by commanding both to be brought, shewed that the prophet had a special meaning in naming both. S. Matthew relates that both were employed. "They brought the ass and the colt, and put on them their clothes, and they set Him thereon." The untrained colt, an appendage to its mother, was a yet humbler animal. But as the whole action was a picture of our Lord's humility and of the unearthliness of His kingdom, so, doubtless, His riding upon the two animals was a part of that picture. There was no need of two animals to bear our Lord for that short distance. S. John notices especially, "These things understood not His disciples at the first. The ass, an unclean stupid debased ignoble drudge, was in itself a picture of unregenerate man, a slave to his passions and to devils, toiling under the load of ever-increasing sin. But, of man, the Jew had been under the yoke and was broken; the Gentiles were the wild unbroken colt. Both were to be brought under obedience to Christ.

10. And I will cut off the chariot. The horse is the symbol of worldly power, as the ass is of meekness. Some, says the Psalmist, "put their trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God." "A horse is but a vain thing to save a man." "He delighteth not in the strength of a horse." In scarcely any place in Holy Scripture is the horse spoken of in relation to man, except as the instrument of war. It represents human might, which is either to be consecrated to the Lord, or destroyed by Him³. As the "stone, cut out without hands, broke in pieces and absorbed into itself all the kingdoms of the world, so here He, Whose Kingdom should not be of this world, should supersede human might. His kingdom was to begin by doing away, among His followers, all, whereby human kingdoms are established. He first cuts off the chariot and the horse, not from His enemies, but from His own people; His people, not as a civil polity, but as the people of God. For the prophet speaks of them as Ephraim and Judah, but Ephraim had no longer a distinct existence.

And He shall speak peace unto the heathen, as the Apostle says, "He came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh." He shall speak it to them, as He Who hath power to give it to them, peace with God, peace in themselves, the reconciliation of God and man, and the remission of their sins.

"At His birth the heavenly host announced peace to men; all His doctrine has peace for its end; when His death was at hand, He especially commended peace to His disciples, that peace which the world knoweth not, which is contained in tranquillity of mind, burning zeal for charity. Divine grace. This same peace He brought to all who gathered themselves to His empire and guidance, that, emerging from intestine wars and foul darkness, they might behold the light of liberty, and, in all wisdom keep the grace of God."

And His dominion shall be from sea to sea.

11 As for thee also, || by

The bounds of the promised land, in its utmost range, on the West, were the Mediterranean sea; on the East, the great river, the Euphrates. The prophet pictures its extension, so as to embrace the whole world, taking away, first the one bound, then the other. From sea to sea is from the Mediterranean to the extremest East, where the Ocean encircles the continent of Asia; from the river to the ends of the earth, is from the Euphrates to the extremest West, embracing the whole of Europe; and whatever may lie beyond, to the ends of the earth, where earth ceaseth to be¹. It is this same lowly and afflicted king, Whose entry into Jerusalem is on a despised animal, Who shall, by His mere will, make war to cease, Who shall, by His mere word, give peace to the heathen.

11. As for thee also. The Prophet turns from the deliverance of the whole world to the former people, the sorrows which they should have in the way, and the protection which God would bestow upon them for the sake of Him, Who, according to the flesh, was to be born of them. Thou too; he had spoken of the glories of the Church, such as her king, when He should come, should extend it, embracing earth's remotest bounds: he turns to her, Israel after the flesh, and assures her of the continued protection of God, even in her lowest estate. The deliverance under the Maccabees was, as those under the judges had been, an image of the salvation of Christ and a preparation for it. They were martyrs for the One God and for the faith in the Resurrection, and, whether by doing or by suffering, preserved the sacred line, until Christ should come.

By the blood of thy covenant. "Not by the blood of those victims of old, but by the blood of thy covenant, wilt thou be united to the empire of Christ, and so obtain salvation. As the Lord Himself says, This is the blood of covenant, which is shed for you."² The gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

That symbolic blood, by which, fore-signifying the new Covenant, He made them His own people, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words, endured still, amid all their unfaithfulness and breaches of it. By virtue of it God would send forth her imprisoned ones out of the deep, dry pit, the dungeon wherein they could be kept securely, because life was not threatened⁴. Out of any depth of hopeless misery, in which they seemed to be shut up, God would deliver them; as David says, He brought me up also out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock and established my goings; and Jeremiah, They have cut off my life in the dungeon, and cast a stone upon me. I called upon Thy Name, O Lord; out of the low dungeon Thou hast heard my voice. "The dry and barren depth of human misery, where are no streams of righteousness, but the mire of iniquity."

12. *Turn ye to the stronghold*⁵, i. e. Almighty God; as the Psalmists so often say¹⁰, The Lord is the defence of my life; and Joel¹¹, The Lord shall be a stronghold of the children of Israel; and Nahum¹², The Lord is a stronghold in the day of trouble; And, David said, *Thou hast been a shelter for me, a strong tower against the enemy*¹⁴; the Name of the Lord is a strong tower, the righteous runneth into it and is safe; and again, Be Thou to me a rock of strength, a house of defence to save me—Bring me forth out of the net that they have laid privily for me; for Thou art my stronghold. The stronghold, "cut off" from all approach from an enemy, stands in contrast with the deep dungeon of calamity. The return must be a willing return, one in their own power; return to the stronghold, which is Almighty God, must be by conversion of heart and will. Even a Jewish commentator¹⁶ paraphrases, "Turn ye to God; for He is a stronghold and tower of strength."

hope of Israel, the hope which sustained them in all those years of patient expectations, as S. Paul speaks of ¹ the hope of Israel, for which he says, I am bound with this chain. ² I stand to be judged for the hope of the promise made by God unto our fathers, unto which promise our twelve tribes, serving God instantly day and night, hope to come; for which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. And in his Epistles, ³ the hope laid up for you in heaven; ⁴ the hope of the Gospel; and, ⁵ looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. He writes also of ⁶ keeping the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end; of ⁷ the full assurance of the hope unto the end; of ⁸ fleeing to lay hold on the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast." He does not speak of hope as a grace or theological virtue, but, objectively, as the thing hoped for. So Zechariah calls to them as bound, held fast by the hope, bound, as it were, to it and by it, so as not to let it go, amid the persecution of the world, or weariness of expectation; as S. Paul also says, ⁹ before faith came, we were guarded, kept in ward, under the law, shut up unto the faith ¹⁰ which was about to be revealed.

Even to-day, amid all contrary appearances, do I declare, that I will render double unto thee; as He had said by Isaiah ¹¹, For your shame ye shall have double.

13. When, or For I have bent ¹² Judah for me, as a mighty bow which is only drawn at full human strength, the foot being placed to steady it. It becomes a strong instrument, but only at God's Will. God Himself bends it. It cannot bend itself. And filled the bow with Ephraim ¹³. The bow is filled, when the arrow is laid upon it. God would employ both in their different offices, as one. And raised up ¹⁴ thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece. Let men place this prophecy where they will, notwithstanding in the history of the world was more contradictory to what was in human sight possible. ¹⁵ Greece was, until Alexander, a colonizing, not a conquering, nation. The Hebrews had no human knowledge of the site or circumstances of Greece. There was not a little cloud, like a man's hand, when Zechariah thus absolutely foretold the conflict and its issue. Yet here we have a definite prophecy later than Daniel, fitting in with his temporal prophecy, expanding part of it, reaching on beyond the time of Antiochus, and fore-announcing the help of God in two definite ways of protection; 1) without war, against the army of Alexander ¹⁶; 2) in the war of the Maccabees; and these, two of the most critical periods in their history after the captivity ¹⁷. Yet, being expansions of part of the prophecy of Daniel, the period, to which they belong, becomes clearer in the event by aid of the more comprehensive prophecies. They were two points in Daniel's larger prediction of the 3d empire."

And I will make thee as the sword of a mighty man. The strength is still not their own. In the whole history of Israel, they had only once met in battle an army of one of the world-Empires and defeated it, at a time, when Asa's whole population which could bear arms were 580,000¹, and he met Zerah the Ethiopian with his million of combatants, besides his 500 chariots, and defeated him. And this, in reliance on the "Lord his God, to Whom he cried, Lord, it is nothing to Thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power; help us, O Lord our God; for we rest on Thee, and in Thy Name we go against this multitude." Asa's words found an echo in Judas Maccabæus², when the "small company with him asked him, How shall we be able, being so few, to fight against so great a multitude and so strong?" "It is no hard matter," Judas answered, "for many to be shut up in the hands of a few, and with Heaven it is all one to deliver with a great multitude or a small company. For the victory of battle standeth not in the multitude of an host; but strength cometh from Heaven." But his armies were but a handful; 3000, on three occasions³, on one of which they are reduced by fear to 800⁴; 10,000 on two occasions⁵; on another, two armies of 8000 and 3000, with a garrison, not trusted to fight in the open field⁶; on one, 20,000⁷; once only 40,000, which Tryphon treacherously persuaded Jonathan to disperse⁸; these were the numbers with which, always against "great hosts," God gave the victory to the lion-hearted Judas and his brothers. But Who save He, in Whose hands are the hearts of men, could foresee that He, at that critical moment, would raise up that devoted family, or inspire that faith, through which they¹⁰ out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens?

Habakkuk directly calls the lightnings the arrows of God¹²: at the light of Thine arrows they went. Here it is probably of an invisible agency, and so compared to that awful symbol of His presence, the lightning.

And the Lord God shall blow with the trumpet, as their Commander, ordering their goings. The blowing of the trumpet by the priests in war was commanded, as a reminiscence of themselves before God, "If ye go to war in your land against the enemy that oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets, and ye shall be remembered before the Lord your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies. Abijah said, God Himself is with us for our captain, and His priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you."

And shall go with whirlwinds of the south, as being the most vehement and destructive. So Isaiah, "As whirlwinds in the south sweep by, He cometh from a desert, from a terrible land. Such smote the four corners of the house where Job's children were¹³, and they perished."

probably ¹, shall tread on, the stones of the sling, as in the image of leviathan in Job, ² The son of the bow will not make him flee; sling-stones are to him turned into stubble; clubs are counted as stubble; he laugheth at the shaking of a spear. Their enemies shall fall under them, as harmless and as of little account as the sling-stones which have missed their aim, and lie as the road to be passed over. It is not expressed what they shall devour, and so the image is not carried out, but left indefinite, as destruction or absorption only; as in that, ³ thou shalt consume [lit. eat] all the people which the Lord thy God shall deliver thee; and, ⁴ they are our bread; and in that, ⁵ they shall devour [lit. eat] all the people round about, where the image is of fire, not of eating. The one thought seems to be, that their enemies should cease to be, so as to molest them any more, whether by ceasing to be their enemies or by ceasing to be. There is no comparison here, (as in Balaam) with the lion; or of eating flesh or drinking blood, which, apart from the image of the wild beast, would be intolerable to Israel, to whom the use of blood, even of animals, was so strictly forbidden. They should disappear, as completely as fuel before the fire, or food before the hungry. The fire was invigorated, not extinguished, by the multitude of the fuel: the multitude of the enemies but nerved and braced those, whom they sought to destroy.

And they shall be filled like bowls, like the corners of the altar. They shall be consecrated instruments of God; they shall not prevail for themselves, but for Him; they shall be hallowed like the bowls of the temple, from which the sacrificial blood is sprinkled on His altar, or as the corners of the altar which receive it.

16. And the Lord their God shall save them in that day. Still all should be God's doing; they themselves were but as a flock, as sheep among wolves, ready for the slaughter; but they were the flock, His people⁶, as He says, ⁷ I will increase them like the flock, men, as the flock of holy things, as the flock of Jerusalem

17. For how great is His goodness. For it is unutterable! As the Psalmist said, ¹⁶ O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy Name in all the earth! and Jacob, ¹⁷ How awful is this place! and the Psalmist, How awful are Thy doings! The goodness and the beauty are the goodness and beauty of God, Whose great doings had been his theme throughout before. Of the goodness the sacred writers often speak¹⁸, since of this we have extremest need. And this He shewed to Moses, ¹⁹ I will cause all My goodness to pass before thy face. Of this we know somewhat personally in this life; for beside the surpassing amazingness of it in the work of our redemption, we are surrounded by it, immersed in it, as in a fathomless, shoreless ocean of infinite love, which finds entrance into our souls, whenever we bar it not out.

Goodness is that attribute of God, whereby He loveth to communicate to all, who can or will receive it, all good; yea, Himself, ²⁰ Who is the fullness and universality of good, Creator of all good, not in one way, not in one kind of goodness only, but absolutely, without beginning, without limit, without measure, save that whereby without measurement He possesseth and embraceth all excellence, all perfection, all blessedness, all good." This Good His Goodness bestoweth on all and each, according to the capacity of each to receive it, nor is there any limit to His giving, save His creature's capacity of receiving, which also is a good gift from Him. "From Him all things sweet derive their sweetness; all things fair, their beauty; all things bright, their splendor; all things that live, their life; all things sentient, their sense; all that move, their vigor; all intelligences, their knowledge; all things perfect, their perfection; all things in any wise good, their goodness."

The beauty of God belongs rather to the beatific vision. Yet David speaks of the Beauty of Christ¹, Thou art exceeding fairer than the children of men; and Isaiah says, Thine eyes shall behold the King in His beauty. But the Beauty of God "eye hath not seen nor ear heard nor can heart of man conceive." Here, on earth, created beauty can, at least when suddenly seen, hold the frame motionless, pierce the soul, glue the heart to it, entrance the affections. Light from heaven kindles into beauty our dulllest material substances; the soul in grace diffuses beauty over the dulllest human countenance; the soul, ere it has passed from the body, has been known to catch, through the half-opened portals, such brilliancy of light, that the eye even for some time after death has retained a brightness, beyond anything of earth². "The earth's form of beauty is a sort of voice of the dumb earth. Dost not, on considering the beauty of this universe, its very form answer thee with one voice, 'Not I made myself, but God'?" Poets have said,

"³Old friends . . . shall lovelier be,
As more of heaven in each we see,"

or,

"⁴When he saw,
—God within him light his face."

and Holy Scripture tells us that when St. Stephen, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, was about to speak of Jesus to the council which arraigned him, all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly at him, saw his face as it had been the face of an Angel. It has been said, that if we could see a soul in grace, its beauty would so pierce us, that we should die. But the natural beauty of the soul transcends all corporeal beauty which so attracts us; the natural beauty of the last Angel surpasseth all natural beauty of soul. If we could ascend from the most beautiful form, which the soul could here imagine, to the least glorious body of the beatified, on and on through the countless thousands of glorious bodies, compared where-with heaven would be dark and the sun lose its shining; and yet more from the most beautiful deified soul, as visible here, to the beauty of the disembodied soul, whose image would scarce be recognized, because "⁵the bodily eyes gleamed with angelic radiancy;" yea, let the God-enlightened soul go on and on, through all those choirs of the heavenly hierarchies, clad with the raiment of Divinity, from choir to choir, from hierarchy to hierarchy, admiring the order and beauty and harmony of the house of God; yea, let it, aided by divine grace and light, ascend even higher, and reach the bound and term of all created beauty, yet it must know that the Divine power and wisdom could create other creatures, far more perfect and beautiful than all which He hath hitherto created. Nay, let the highest of all the Seraphs sum in one all the beauty by nature and grace and glory of all creatures, yet could it not be satisfied with that beauty, but must, because it was not satisfied with it, conceive some higher beauty. Were God forthwith, at every moment to create that higher beauty at its wish, it could still conceive something beyond; for, not being God, its beauty could not satisfy its conception. So let him still, and in hundred thousand, hundred thousand, thousand years with swiftest flight of understanding multiply continually those degrees of beauty, so that each fresh degree should ever double that preceding, and the Divine power should, with like swiftness, concur in creating that beauty, as in the beginning He said, let there be light and there was light; after all those millions of years, he would be again at the beginning, and there would be no comparison between it and the Divine Beauty of Jesus Christ, God and Man. For it is the bliss of the finite not to reach the Infinite⁶. That city of the blest which is lightened by the glory of God, and the Lamb is the light thereof, sees It, enabled by God, as created eye can see It, and is held fast to God in one jubilant ecstasy of everlasting love.

"⁷The Prophet, borne out of himself by consideration of the Divine goodness, stands amazed, while he contemplates the beauty and Deity of Christ: he bursts out with unwonted admiration! How great is His goodness, Who, to guard His flock, shall come down on earth to lay down His life for the salvation of His sheep! How great His beauty, Who is the brightness of the glory and the Image of the Father, and comprises in His Godhead the measure of all order and beauty! With what firm might does He strengthen, with what joy does He overwhelm the souls which gaze most frequently on His beauty, and gives largely and bountifully that corn, by whose strength the youths are made strong. He supplieth abundantly the wine, whereby the virgins, on fire with His love, are exhilarated and beautified. But both are necessary, that the strength of the strong should be upheld by the bread from heaven, and that sound and uncorrupt minds, melted with the sweetness of love, should be recreated with wine, i. e. the sweetness of the Holy Spirit, and be borne aloft with great joy, in the midst of extreme toils. For all who keep holily the faith of Christ, may be called youths, for their unconquered strength, and virgins for their purity and integrity of soul. For all these that heavenly bread is prepared, that their strength be not weakened, and the wine is impoured, that they be not only refreshed, but may live in utmost sweetness."

X. 1. Ask ye of the Lord rain. Ask and ye shall receive, our Lord says. Zechariah had promised in God's name blessings temporal and spiritual: all was ready on God's part; only, he adds, ask them of the Lord, the Unchangeable, the Self-same, not of Teraphim or of diviners, as Israel had done aforetime¹. He had promised, ² If ye shall hearken diligently unto My commandments, to love the Lord your God, I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, and I will send grass in thy field for thy cattle. God bids them ask Him to fulfill His promise. The latter rain³ alone is mentioned, as completing what God had begun by the former rain, filling the ears before the harvest. Both⁴ had been used as symbols of God's spiritual gifts, and so the words fit in with the close of the last chapter, both as to things temporal and eternal. "⁵ He exhorts all frequently to ask for the dew of the divine grace, that what had sprung up in the heart from the seed of the word of God, might attain to full ripeness."

The Lord maketh bright clouds, [rather] lightnings⁶, into rain, as Jeremiah says, ⁷ He causeth the vapors to ascend from the ends of the earth; He maketh lightnings into rain; and the Psalmist, ⁸ He maketh lightnings into rain, disappearing as it were into the rain which follows on them. And giveth them. While man is asking, God is answering. Showers of rain⁹, "rain in torrents," as we should say, or "in floods," or, inverted, "floods of rain." To every one grass, rather, the green herb, in the field, as the Psalmist says, ¹⁰ He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and green herb for the service of men. This He did with individual care, as each had need, or as should be best for each, as contrariwise He says in Amos, ¹¹ I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city; one piece was rained upon, and the piece, whereon it rained not, withered. The Rabbins observed these exceptions to God's general law, whereby He¹² sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust, though expressing it in their way hyperbolically; "¹³ In the time when Israel doeth the will of God, He doeth their will; so that if one man alone, and not the others, wants rain, He will give rain to that one man; and if a man wants one herb alone in his field or garden, and not another, He will give rain to that one herb; as one of the saints used to say, This plot of ground wants rain, and that plot of ground wants not rain¹⁴." Spiritually the rain is divine doctrine bedewing the mind and making it fruitful, as the rain doth the earth. So Moses saith, ¹⁵ My doctrine shall drop as the rain; my speech shall distill as the dew, as the

2. For the teraphim have spoken vanity, rather, spoke vanity. He appeals to their former experience. Their fathers had sought of idols, not of God; therefore they went into captivity. The teraphim were used as instruments of divination. They are united with the ephod, as forbidden, over against the allowed, means of enquiry as to the future, in Hosea, ² without an ephod and without teraphim; they were united in the mingled worship of Micah ³; Josiah put them away together with ⁴ the workers with familiar spirits and the wizards, to which are added, the idols.
It was probably, a superstition of Eastern origin. Rachel brought them with her from her father's house, and Nebuchadnezzar used them for divination ⁵. Samuel speaks of them, apparently, as things which Saul himself condemned. ⁶ Rebellion is as the sin of divination, and stubbornness as iniquity or idolatry, and teraphim. For it was probably in those his better days, that ⁷ Saul had put away those that had familiar spirits and wizards out of the land. Samuel then seems to tell him, that the sins to which he clave were as evil as those which he had, in an outward zeal, like Jehu, condemned. Anyhow, the teraphim stand united with the divination which was expressly condemned by the law ⁸.
The use of the teraphim by Rachel ⁹ and Michal ¹⁰ (for whatever purpose) implies that it was some less offensive form of false worship, though they were probably the strange gods ¹¹ which Jacob bade his household to put away, or, anyhow, among them, since Laban calls them, ¹² my gods.

Zechariah uses anew the words of Jeremiah
and Ezekiel, ¹ Hearken ye not to your prophets, to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers; and,

² let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken

and Ezekiel, ³ While they see vanity unto thee, while they divine a lie unto thee. The words not only joined on the Prophet's warning with the past, but reminded them of the sentence which followed on their neglect. The echo of the words of the former prophets came to them, floating, as it were, over the ruins of the former temple.

Therefore they went their way as a flock, which, having no shepherd, or only such as would mislead them, removed ⁴, but into captivity. They were troubled ⁵. The trouble lasted on, though the captivity ended at the appointed time. Nehemiah speaks of the exactions of former governors, ⁶ The former governors which were before me, laid heavy weights upon the people ⁷, and took from them in bread and wine, after forty shekels of silver; also their servants used dominion over ⁸ the people;
and I did not so, because of the fear of God.

Because there was no shepherd. As Ezekiel said of those times, ⁹ They were scattered, be-scattered: My flock was scattered upon all the

are called the *he-goats of the earth*¹; and in Ezekiel God says, I will judge between cattle and cattle, between rams and he-goats; and our Lord speaks of the reprobate as goats, the saved as sheep². God visited upon³ these in His displeasure, because He visited His flock, the people of Judah, to see to their needs and to relieve them.

And hath made them as the goodly horse, as, before, He said, I made thee as the sword of a mighty man. Judah's might was not in himself; but, in God's hands, he had might like and above the might of this world; he was fearless, resistless; as S. Paul says, the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.

4. Out of him¹ came forth, or rather, From him is the corner, as Jeremiah². Their nobles shall be from themselves, and their governor shall go forth from the midst of them. Her strength, though given by God, was to be inherent in her, though from her too was to come He Who was to be the head-corner-stone, the sure Foundation and Crowner of the whole building.

From thee the nail, an emblem of fixedness in itself, (as Isaiah says, I will fasten him a nail to a sure place) and of security given to others dependent on Him, as Isaiah says further, And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, from the vessels of cups to the vessels of flagons; all, of much or little account, the least and the greatest. ¹¹ Christ is the corner-stone; Christ is the nail fixed in the wall, whereby all vessels are supported. From it every exactor shall go forth together. God had promised¹² that no oppressor, or exactor¹³, shall pass through them any more. He seems to repeat it here. From thee shall go forth every oppressor together; go forth, not to return: as Isaiah had said, Thy children shall make haste to return; thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee. "From it, its corner-stone; from it, the sure nail; from it, the battle bow; from it,"—he no longer unites closely with it, that which should be from it, or of it, but—from it shall go forth every oppressor together; one and all, as we say; a confused pêle-mêle body, as Isaiah, all that are found of thee are bound together; ¹⁶ together shall they all perish; or, in separate clauses¹⁷, they are all of them put to shame; together they shall go into confusion.

5. And they [the house of Judah¹⁸, of whom he had said, He hath made them as the goodly horse in the battle] shall be as mighty men, trampling on the mire of the streets. Micah had said, ¹⁹ she shall be a trampling, as the mire of the streets, and David, ²⁰ I did stamp them as the mire of the street. Zechariah, by a yet bolder image, pictures those trampled upon, as what they had become, the mire of the streets, as worthless, as foul; as he had said, ²¹ they shall trample on the sling-stones. And they shall fight, because the Lord is with them, not in their own strength, he still reminds them; they shall have power, because God empowers them; strength, because God instrengthens them²²; in presence of which, the goodly war-horse of God, human strength, the riders on horses, shall be ashamed.

 the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and "I will bring them again to place them; for I "have mercy upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the LORD their God, and "will hear them.

word two¹ of Jeremiah, *"I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely."*² The two ideas are here both implied, he will cause them to return to their land, and will cause them to dwell there in peace and security.³

For I will have mercy upon them. "For the goodness and lovingkindness of God, not any merits of our's, is the first and principal cause of our whole salvation and grace. Therefore the Psalmist says, "neither did their own arm save them; but Thy right hand and Thine arm, and the light of Thy countenance, because Thou hadst a favor unto them."

And they shall be, as though I had not cast them off. (etymologically, "loathed," "cast off as a thing abhorrent.") God is ever "the God of the present." He does not half-forgive. "Their sins and their iniquities I will remember no more. God casts off the sinner, as being what he is, a thing abhorrent, as penitence confesses of itself that it is "a dead dog, a loathsome worm, a putrid corpse." God will not clothe with a righteousness, which He does not impart. He restores to the penitent all his lost graces, as though he had never forfeited them, and cumulates them with the fresh grace whereby He converts him⁴. It is an entire re-creation. They shall be, as though I had not cast them off. I will settle you as in your old estates, and will do good, more than at your beginnings, and ye shall know that I am the Lord."

For I am the Lord their God, and will hear them, as He says by Malachi⁵, "I am the Lord; I change not. His unchangeableness belongs to His Being; I Am; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed; and by Hosea, "The Lord of hosts, The Lord is His memorial, therefore turn thou to thy God. Because God was their God, and as surely as He was their

7 And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their "heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the LORD.

8 I will "hiss for them, "Isai. 5. 26. and gather them; for I have redeemed them: "and "Isai. 49. 19. Ezek. 36. 37.

God, He would hear them. His Being was the pledge of His hearing. "I, the Lord, will hear them; I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them."

7. And Ephraim, they shall be like a mighty man. Prophecy, through the rest of the chapter, turns to Ephraim, which had not yet been restored. With regard to them, human victory retires out of sight, though doubtless, when their wide prison was broken at the destruction of the Persian empire, many were free to return to their native country, as others spread over the West in Asia Minor, Greece, Rome, and so some may have taken part in the victories of the Maccabees. Yet not victory, but strength, gladness beyond natural gladness, as through wine, whereby the mind is exhilarated above itself; and that, lasting, transmitted to their children, large increase, holy life in God, are the outlines of the promise.

Their heart shall rejoice in the Lord, "as the principal object, the first, highest, most worthy Giver of all good, to Whom is to be referred all gladness, which is conceived from created goods, that "whoso glorifieth may glory in the Lord, in Whom Alone the rational creature ought to take delight."

8. I will hiss for them. Formerly God had so spoken of His summoning the enemies of His people to chastise them. "It shall be in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly, that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria, and they shall come, and shall rest all of them in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns and upon all bushes." He will hiss unto them from the ends of the earth, and behold they shall come with speed swiftly; none shall be weary or stumble among them. He would gather them, like the countless numbers of the insect creation, which, if united, would irresistibly desolate life. He would summon them, as the bee-owner, by his shrill call, summons and unites his own swarm. Now, contrariwise God would summon with the same His own people. The fulfillment of the chastisement was the earnest of the ease of the fulfillment of the mercy.

For I have redeemed them. Then they are His, being redeemed at so dear a price. "For Christ, as far as in Him lay, redeemed all." God had done this in purpose, as S. John speaks of "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

And they shall increase as they increased. "As they increased in Egypt, so shall they increase at that time." The marvels of God's favor in Egypt shall be repeated. The increase there had been promised beforehand. "Fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation. The fulfillment is recorded, 'the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them. God appointed that this should be part of their confession at their yearly prosperity, the offering of the basket of first-fruits; 'A Syrian ready to perish was my father, and he went into Egypt and sojourned there with a few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous. The Psalmist dwelt upon it. 'He increased His people greatly, and made them stronger than their enemies. It became then one of the resemblances between the first deliverance and the last. "For the Apostles and others converted from Judaism, had more spiritual children, all those whom they begot in Christ, than the synagogue ever had after the flesh."

9. And I will sow them among the nations. Such had been the prophecy of Hosea; "I will sow her unto Me in the earth, as the prelude of spiritual mercies, and I will have mercy on her that had not obtained mercy, and I will say to not-my-people, Thou art My people, and they shall say, my God. Hosea's saying, I will sow her in the earth i. e. the whole earth, and that to Me, corresponds to, and explains Zechariah's brief saying, I will sow them among the nations. The sowing, which was future to Hosea, had begun; but the purpose of the sowing, the harvest, was wholly to come; when it should be seen, that they were indeed sown by God, that great should be the day of Jezreel¹². And Jeremiah said, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah, with the seed of man and with the seed of beast. The word is used of sowing to multiply, never of mere scattering¹³."

And they shall remember Me in far countries. So Ezekiel had said, "And they that escape of you shall remember Me among the nations, whither they shall be carried captive—and they shall loath themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations, and they shall know that I am the Lord."

And shall live. As Ezekiel again says, "Ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I open your graves, and bring you up out of your graves, O My people, and shall put My Spirit in you, and ye shall live. With their children. A continuous gift, as Ezekiel, "they and their children, and their children's children for ever: and My servant David shall be their prince for ever."

And shall turn again to God, being converted, as Jeremiah had been bidden to exhort them; "Go and proclaim these words toward the North, the cities of the Medes whither they were carried captive, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, and I will not cause Mine anger to fall upon you; "Turn, O backsliding children—and I will take you, one of a city, and two of a family, and will bring you to Zion, and I will give you pastors according to Mine heart. "Return, ye backsliding children; I will heal your backslidings. And they answer, Behold, we come unto Thee; for Thou art the Lord our God. So Isaiah had said, "A remnant shall return, the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God. "They shall return by recollection of mind and adunation and simplification of the affections toward God so as ultimately to intend that one thing, which alone is necessary."

10. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt. Individuals had fled to Egypt¹⁴; but here probably Egypt and Assyria stand, as of old, for the two great conflicting empires, between which Israel lay, at whose hands she had suffered, and who represent the countries which lay beyond them. Hosea unites, ¹the West, Assyria, Egypt, the three then known divisions of the world, Europe, Asia, Africa². Asshur, after Nineveh perished, stands clearly for the world-empire of the East at Babylon³, and then in Persia⁴. Balaam includes under Asshur, first Babylon, then the third world-empire⁵. Babylon, which was first subject to Nineveh, then subjected it, was at a later period known to Greek writers (who probably had their information from Persian sources) as part of Assyria⁶.

And I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon, their old dwellings, East and West of Jordan. And place shall not be found for them⁷, as Isaiah says, ⁸The children of thy bereaved estate shall yet say in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place, that I may dwell.

11. And He, i. e. Almighty God, shall pass through the sea, affliction⁹, as He says, ¹⁰When thou walkest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee. And shall smite the waves in the sea, as in Isaiah, ¹¹The Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea. The image is from the deliverance of Egypt: yet it is said, that it should not be any exact repetition of the miracles of Egypt; it would be as the Red Sea¹², which would as effectually shut them in, and in presence of which they might again think themselves lost, through which God would again bring them. But it would not be the Red sea itself; for the sea through which they should be brought, would be affliction; as our own poet speaks of "taking arms against a sea of troubles." ¹³The promise of succor to those who believe in Christ is under the likeness of the things given to those of old; for as Israel was conveyed across the Red sea, braving the waves in it; ¹⁴for the waters stood upright as an heap, God bringing this to pass marvellously; and as ¹⁵they passed the Jordan on foot, so he says, those who are called through Moses to the knowledge of Christ, and have been saved by the ministries of the holy Apostles, they shall pass the waves of this present life, like an angrily foaming sea, and, being removed from the tumult of this life, shall, undisturbed, worship the true God. And they shall pass through temptations, like sweeping rivers, saying with great joy, in like way, ¹⁶Unless the Lord had been for us, may Israel now say, the waters had drowned us, the stream had gone over our souls." He shall smite the waves in the sea. There, where the strength of the powers of this world is put forth against His people, there He will bring it down. All the deeps of the river, i. e. of the Nile¹⁷, shall be dried up. The Nile as a mighty river is substituted for the

And the pride of Ashur shall be brought down. "1 When the good receive their reward, then their enemies shall have no power over them, but shall be punished by Me, because they injured My elect.—By the Assyrians and Egyptians he understands all their enemies."

12. I will strengthen them in the Lord, as our Lord said to S. Paul, My strength is made perfect in weakness, and S. Paul said in turn, When I am weak, then am I strong. And in His Name shall they walk up and down, have their whole conversation "2 in Him according to His will, and diligent in all things to speak and act in His grace and Divine hope." "3 Christians walk in the Name of Christ, and there is written on the new white stone given to them a new name⁴, and under the dignity of a name so great, they walk with God, as ⁵ Enoch walked and pleased God and was translated."

Saith the Lord: "2 Again the Lord God speaks of the Lord God, as of Another, hinting the plurality of Persons in the Godhead."

XI. "6 All the ways of the Lord are mercy and truth, saith the Psalmist⁷, and, ⁸ I will sing to Thee of mercy and judgment. So is this prophecy divided. Above⁹, almost all were promises of mercy, which are now fulfilled in deed; and from this, ¹⁰ Open, O Lebanon, thy doors, all are terrible edicts of truth and tokens of just judgment. How much sweetness and softness and pleasantness is therein, Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; what bitterness and acerbity and calamity to those, to whom he says, Open, O Lebanon, thy doors, that the fire may devour thy cedars; howl, O fir tree; howl, O ye oaks of Basan. As then, before, we beheld His mercy in those who believed and believe; so now let us contemplate His just judgment on those who believed not." Gilead and Lebanon¹¹ had been named as the restored home of Ephraim; but there remained a dark side of the picture, which the prophet suddenly presents, with the names of those self-same lands, "12 Open thy doors, O Lebanon; howl, O ye oaks of Basan."

1. Open thy doors, O Lebanon. Lebanon, whose cedars had stood, its glory, for centuries, yet could offer no resistance to him who felled them and were carried off to adorn the pulcras of its conquerors¹³, was in Isaiah¹⁴ and Jeremiah¹⁵ the emblem of the glory of the Jewish state; and in Ezekiel, of Jerusalem, as the prophet himself explains it¹⁶; glorious, beautiful, inaccessible, so long as it was defended by God; a ready prey, when abandoned by Him. The centre and source of her strength was the worship of God; and so Lebanon has of old been understood to be the temple, which was built with cedars of Lebanon, towering aloft upon a strong summit; the spiritual glory and the eminence of Jerusalem, as Lebanon was of the whole country, and "17 to strangers who came to it, it appeared from afar like a mountain full of snow; for, where it was not gilded, it was exceeding white, being built of marble." But at the time of destruction, it was "a den of thieves, as Lebanon, amidst its beauty, was of wild beasts."

"6 I suppose Lebanon itself, i. e. the temple, felt the command of the prophet's words, since, as its destruction approached, its doors opened without the hand of man. Josephus relates how "18 at the passover, the Eastern gate of the inner temple, being of brass and very firm, and with difficulty shut at eventide by twenty men; moreover with bars strengthened with iron, and having very deep bolts, which went down into the threshold, itself of one stone, was seen at six o'clock at night to open of its own accord. The guards of the called Bahr-el-Nil, may have had that name in the time of Daniel and been the river in his vision (Stanley Jewish Church iii. 12). 1) The Bahr-el-Nil is only the modern Arabic name for the Nile. 2) Had the canal been so called in Daniel's time and had he meant it (which is unlikely) he would naturally have called it by its name, not have translated it into the old Egyptian and Hebrew name.

temple running told it to the officer, and he, going up, with difficulty closed it. This the uninstructed thought a very favorable sign, that God opened to them the gate of all goods. But those taught in the Divine words, understood that the safety of the temple was removed of itself, and that the gate opened." A saying of this sort is still extant. "Our fathers have handed down, forty years before the destruction of the house, the lot of the Lord did not come up on the right hand, and the tongue of splendor did not become white, nor did the light from the evening burn, and the doors of the temple opened of their own accord, until Rabban Johanan ben Zaccai rebuked them, and said, 'O temple, why dost thou affright thyself? I know of thee that thy end is to be destroyed, and of this Zechariah prophesied, Open thy doors, O Lebanon, and let the fire devour thy cedars.'" The "forty years" mentioned in this tradition carry back the event exactly to the Death of Christ, the temple having been burned A. D. 73¹. Josephus adds that they opened at the passover, the season of His Crucifixion. On the other hand, the shutting of the gates of the temple, when they had ³ seized Paul and dragged him out of the temple, seems miraculous and significant, that, having thus violently refused the preaching of the Gospel, and cast Paul out, they themselves were also shut out, denoting that an entrance was afterward to be refused them.

And let a fire devour thy cedars. Jerusalem, or the temple, were, after those times, burned by the Romans only. The destruction of pride, opposed to Christ, was prophesied by Isaiah in connection with His Coming².

2. Howl, O cypress, for the cedar is fallen. Jerusalem or the temple having been likened to Lebanon and its cedars, the prophet carries on the image, speaking of the priests princes and people, under the title of firs, cypresses and oaks, trees inferior, but magnificent. He shews that it is imagery, by ascribing to them the feelings of men. The more glorious and stately, the cedars, were destroyed. Woe then to the rest, the cypress; as our Lord says, ⁵ If they do these things in the green tree, what shall be done, in the dry? and S. Peter, ⁶ If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

For the defenced⁷ forest is come down; that which was closed and inaccessible to the enemy. All which was high and lifted up was brought low, came down, even to the ground⁸.

3. A voice of the howling of the shepherds, for their glory is spoiled. It echoes on from Jeremiah before the captivity, ⁹ Howl, ye shepherds—A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock; for the Lord hath spoiled their pasture. There is one chorus of desolation, the mighty and the lowly; the shepherds and the young lions; what is at other times opposed is joined in one wailing. The pride of Jordan are the stately oaks on its banks, which shroud it from sight, until you reach its edges, and which, after the captivity of the ten tribes, became the haunt of lions and their chief abode in Palestine, "on account of the burning heat, and the nearness of the desert, and the breadth of the vast solitude and jungles"¹⁰.

4. Thus saith the Lord my God, Feed the flock of the slaughter. The fulfillment of the whole prophecy shews, that the person addressed is the prophet, not in, or for himself, but (as belongs to symbolic prophecy) as representing Another, our Lord. It is addressed, in the first instance, to Zechariah. For Zechariah is bidden, ¹¹ take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd, in words addressed to himself, personally; And the Lord said unto me. But he who was to represent the foolish shepherd, had represented the True Shepherd, since it is said to him, "Take unto thee yet." But He, the Shepherd addressed, who does the acts commanded, speaks with the authority of God. He says, ¹I cut off three shepherds in one month; ²I broke My covenant which I had made with all the peoples; ³the poor of the flock waited upon Me; ⁴I cut asunder Mine other staff, Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel. But in Zechariah's time, no three shepherds were cut off, the covenant made by God was not broken on His part, there was no such visible distinction between those who waited on God, and those who, outwardly too, rejected Him.

Feed the flock of the slaughter⁵, those who were, even before the end, slain by their evil shepherds whom they followed, and who in the end would be given to the slaughter, as the Psalmist says, ⁶we are counted as sheep for the slaughter, because they would not hear the voice of the True Shepherd, and were not His sheep. They were already, by God's judgment, a prey to evil shepherds; and would be so yet more hereafter. As a whole then, they were sheep of the slaughter. It is a last charge given to feed them. As our Lord says, ⁷Last of all, He sent unto them His Son, saying, They will reverence My Son. This failing, nothing remained but that the flock would be given up, as they themselves say, ⁸He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out His vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render Him the fruits in their seasons, i. e. our Lord explains it, ⁹The kingdom of heaven shall be taken from them, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. Yet a remnant should be saved, for whose sake the larger flock was still to be fed: and, as our Lord, as Man, wept over Jerusalem, whose sentence He pronounced, so He still feeds those who would not turn to Him that they might be saved, and who would in the end be a flock of slaughter, ¹⁰Death thy shepherd, since they chose death rather than Life.

either in their own eyes, or in the sight of God, since He gave them up and would no more avenge them. They contract no guilt. Aforetime God said; ¹²Israel was holiness to the Lord, the first-fruits of His increase; all that devour him shall be guilty¹³; evil shall come upon them, saith the Lord. Now God reversed this, as He said by the same prophet, ¹⁴My people hath been lost sheep; their shepherds have caused them to go astray; they have turned them away on the mountains;—all that found them have devoured them; and their adversaries say, We are not guilty¹⁵; because they have sinned against the Lord, the habitation of justice, yea, the hope of their fathers, the Lord. The offence of injuring Israel was that they were God's people: when He cast them forth, they who chastened them were His servants¹⁶, His instruments, and offended only when through pride they knew not in Whose hands they themselves were¹⁷, or through cruelty exceeded their office¹⁸, and so they became guilty.

And they that sell them say, Blessed be the Lord, for I am rich. Even Sennacherib felt himself in part, or thought best to own himself, to be an instrument in God's hand¹⁹. But Titus when he ²⁰entered Jerusalem, marveled at the strength of the city and its towers, which 'the tyrants' in phrensy abandoned. When then he had beheld their solid strength and the greatness of each rock, and how accurately they were fitted in, and how great their length and breadth, he said 'By the help of God we have warded: and God it was Who brought down the Jews from those bulwarks: for what avail the hands of man or his engines against such towers?' Much of this sort he said to his friends.²¹ The Jews also were sold in this war, as they had not been in former captures; and that, not by chance, but because the Roman policy was different from all, known by "experience" in the time of Zechariah. Into Babylon they had been carried captive, as a whole, because it was the will of God, after the seventy years to restore them. In this war, it was His will to destroy or disperse them; and so those above 17 were sent to Egypt to the works; those below 17 were sold. ²²The whole number taken prisoners during the wars were 1,100,000," beside those who perished elsewhere. "1 Read we the ancient histories and the traditions of the mourning Jews, that at the Tabernaculum Abrahæ (where now is a very thronged mart every year) after the last destruction, which they endured from Adrian, many thousands were sold, and what could not be sold were removed into Egypt, and destroyed by shipwreck or famine and slaughter by the people. No displeasure came upon the Romans for the utter destruction, as there had upon the Assyrians and Chaldeans."

And their own shepherds (in contrast to those who bought and sold them, who accordingly were not their own, temporal or spiritual) they to whom God had assigned them, who should have fed them with the word of God, strengthened the diseased, healed the sick, bound up the broken, and sought the lost, pity them not. He says what they should have done, in blaming them for what they did not do. They owed them a tender compassionate love³; they laid aside all mercy, and became wolves, as S. Paul says; "After my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. They who owed them all love, shall have none." "1 No marvel then, he says, if enemies shall use the right of conquest, when their very shepherds and teachers spared them not, and, through their fault, the flock was given over to the wolves." All were corrupted, High Priest, priests, scribes, lawyers, Pharisees, Sadducees. No one⁵ had pity on them.

God, by this word, lo, always commands heed to His great doings with man; I, I, Myself⁷, visibly interposing, will deliver man, the whole race of inhabitants, every one into his neighbor's hand, by confusion and strife and hatred within, and into the hand of his king, him whom they chose and took as their own king, when they rejected Christ as their King, repudiating the title which Pilate gave Him, to move their pity. Whereas He, their Lord and God, was their King, they formally⁸ denied Him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let Him go; they denied the Holy One and the Just, and said, "We have no king but Cæsar."

And they, the king without and the wild savages within, shall smile, bruise, crush in pieces, like a broken vessel¹⁰, the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them. Their captivity shall be without remedy or end. Holy Scripture often says, there is no deliverer¹¹, or "none can deliver out of My hand, or, since God delighteth in doing good, I¹² He¹⁴, will deliver, or delivered¹⁵ from the hands of the enemy, or their slavery, or their own fears, or afflictions, or the like. God nowhere else says absolutely as here, I will not deliver¹⁶. "Hear, O Jew," says S. Jerome, "who holdest out to thyself hopes most vain, and hearest not the Lord strongly asserting, I will not deliver them out of their hands, that thy captivity among the Romans shall have no end." Babylon, the prophet foretold the restoration: here only it is said of Judah, as Hosea had said of Israel, that there should be no deliverer out of the hand of the king whom they had chosen.

7. The prophetic narrative which follows, differs in its form, in some respects, from the symbolical actions of the prophets and from Zechariah's own visions. The symbolical actions of the prophets are actions of their own: this involves acts, which it would be impossible to represent, except as a sort of drama. Such are the very central points, the feeding of the flock, which yet are intelligent men who understand God's doings: the cutting off of the three shepherds; the asking for the price; the unworthy price offered; the casting it aside. It differs from Zechariah's own visions, in that they are for the most part exhibited to the eye, and Zechariah's own part is simply to enquire their meaning and to learn it, and to receive further revelation. In one case only, he himself interposes in the action of the vision¹; but this too, as asking that it might be done, not, as himself doing it. Here, he is himself the actor, yet as representing Another, Who alone could cut off shepherds, abandon the people to mutual destruction, annulling the covenant which He had made. Maimonides, then, seems to say rightly; "This, I fed the flock of the slaughter, to the end of the narrative, where he is said to have asked for his hire, to have received it, and to have cast it into the temple, to the treasurer, all this Zechariah saw in prophetic vision. For the command which he received, and the act which he is said to have done, took place in prophetic vision or dream." "This," he adds, "is beyond controversy, as all know, who are able to distinguish the possible from the impossible."

"³The actions, presented to the prophets are not always to be understood as actions but as predictions. As when God commands Isaiah, to make the heart of the people dull⁴ i. e. to denounce to the people their future blindness, through which they would, with obstinate mind, reject the mercies of Christ. Or when He says, that He appointed Jeremiah⁵ to destroy and to build; to root out and to plant. Or when He commanded the same prophet to cause the nations to drink the cup, whereby they should be bereft of their senses⁶, Jeremiah did nothing of all this, but asserted that it would be. So here."

And I will feed the flock of the slaughter, rather And [our, so] *I fed*⁷. The prophet declares, in the name of our Lord, that He did what the Father commanded Him. He fed the flock, committed to His care by the Father, who, through their own obstinacy, became the flock of slaughter. What could be done, He did for them; so that all might see that they perished by their own fault. The symbol of our Lord, as the Good Shepherd, had been made prominent by Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, ⁸*Behold the Lord will come, as a Mighty One—He shall feed His flock like a shepherd: He shall gather the lambs with His arm and carry them in His bosom: He shall gently lead those that are with young.* And Jeremiah, having declared God's judgments on the then shepherds⁹, ¹⁰*I will gather the remnant of My flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their fold; and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper—and this is the name whereby He shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness.* And Ezekiel with the like context¹¹, ¹²*Therefore will I save My flock and they shall be no more a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle. And I will set One Shepherd over them, and He shall feed them: My servant David, He shall feed them; and He shall be their Shepherd; and, uniting both offices, ¹³David, My servant, shall be king over them, and they shall all have One Shepherd.* It was apparent then beforehand, Who this Shepherd was to be, to Whom God gave the feeding of the flock.

the poor of the flock¹. The whole flock was committed to Him to feed. He had to seek out all ² the lost sheep of the house of Israel. "3 He fed, for the time, the Jews destined to death, until their time should come;" the fruit of His labor was in the ⁴ little flock, "the faithful Jews who believed in Him, out of the people of the flock aforesaid, or the synagogue, Who in the primitive Church despised all earthly things, leading a most pure life." So He says, ⁵ I will feed My flock and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God: I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong, I will feed them with judgment.

The elect are the end of all God's dispensations. He fed all; yet the fruit of His feeding, His toils, His death, the travail of His soul, was in those only who are saved. So S. Paul says, ⁶ Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus, with eternal glory. He fed all; but the poor of the flock alone, those who were despised of men, because they would not follow the pride of the High Priests and Scribes and Pharisees, believed on Him, as they themselves say, ⁷ Have any of the rulers or the Pharisees believed on Him? and S. Paul says, ⁸ Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.

And I took unto Me two [shepherd's] staves, as David says, ⁹ Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. The one I called Beauty or Loveliness¹⁰, as the Psalmist longs to behold the beauty or loveliness of God in His temple¹¹, and says; let¹² the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us.

And the other I called Bands, lit. Binders¹³. The one staff represents the full favor and loving-kindness of God; when this was broken, there yet remained the other, by which they were held together as a people in covenant with God. And I fed the flock. This was the use of his staves; He tended them with both, ever putting in exercise toward them the loving beauty and grace of God, and binding them together and with Himself.

8. And I cut off three shepherds in one month. ¹⁴ I have read in some one's commentary, that the shepherds, cut off in the indignation of the Lord, are to be understood of priests and false prophets and kings of the Jews, who, after the Passion of Christ, were all cut off in one time, of whom Jeremiah speaketh, ¹⁵ The priests said not, Where is the Lord? and they that handle the law knew Me not; the pastors also transgressed against Me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things which do not profit; and again, ¹⁶ As the thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests and their prophets; and ¹⁷ they said, Come, let us devise devices against Jeremiah; for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. ¹⁸ He speaks of the kings of the Jews, and prophets and priests; for by the three orders they were shepherded. ¹⁹ The true and good Shepherd having been already pointed out, it was right and necessary that the hirelings and false shepherds should be removed, the guides of the Jews in the law. The three shepherds were, I deem, those who exercised the legal priesthood, and those appointed judges of the people, and the interpreters of Scripture, i. e. the lawyers. For these too fed Israel. Those who had the glory of the priesthood were of the tribe of Levi only; and of them Malachi says, ²⁰ The priest's lips shall keep knowledge, and they shall seek the law at his mouth. But those who received authority to judge were also selected, yet were appointed out of every tribe. In like way the lawyers, who were ever assessors to the judges, and adduced the words of the law in proof of every matter.— But we shall find that our Lord Jesus Christ

Himself expressly pronounced woe on the Pharisees and scribes and lawyers. For He said, ¹ Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees. And when one of the lawyers hereupon answered Him saying, ² Master, so saying Thou reproachest us also, He said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers. These three Shepherds then, priests and judges and lawyers ³, who remained in their own orders and places, until the coming of Christ, were very justly taken away in one month. For since ⁴ they killed the Prince of life, thereby also are they mown down, and that in the month of the first fruits, in which Emmanuel endured to be slain for us. They remained indeed administering Israel, even after the Saviour's Cross, through the long-suffering and compassion of Almighty God calling them to repentance; but, in the sentence passed by God, they were taken away, at that time, when they delivered to the Cross the Saviour and Redeemer of all. They were taken away then in one month; "Nisan. A. D. 33. The three offices, King, Divine Teacher, Priest, were to be united in Christ: they might have been held under Him: those who rejected them in Him, forfeited them themselves. These then He made to disappear, effaced them from the earth ⁵.

And My soul was straightened for them ⁶. It is used of the Divine grief at the misery of His people ⁷. And their soul abhorred Me, nauseated Me ⁸. "When it is said, Their soul also abhorreth Me, the meaning is, 'My soul did not loathe them first, but their soul first despised Me, therefore My Soul abhorred them.' " The soul which drives away God's good Spirit, comes at last to loathe Him and the thought and mention of Him.

9. And I said, I will not feed you. God, at last, leaves the rebellious soul or people to itself, as He says by Moses, ¹⁰ Then My anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and I will forsake them, and will hide My Face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall find them: and our Lord tells the captious Jews; ¹¹ I go My way, and ye shall seek Me and shall die in your sins.

That which dieth, let it die. Zechariah seems to condense, but to repeat the abandonment in Jeremiah; ¹² Cast them out of My sight, and let them go forth. And it shall be, if they shall say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the Lord, Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity. First, God gives over to death without violence, by famine or pestilence, those whose lot it should be; another portion to violent death by the sword; that which is cut off shall be cut off; and the rest, the flock of slaughter, would be turned into wolves; and, as in the awful and horrible siege of Jerusalem, those who had escaped these deaths, the left-over, shall eat every one of the flesh of his neighbor, every law of humanity and of nature broken. ¹³ So should they understand at last, how evil and bitter a thing it is for all who lived by My help to be despoiled of that help."

10. And I took my staff Beauty, and cut it asunder. Not, as aforetime, did He chasten His people, retaining His relation to them: for such chastening is an austere form of love.

By breaking the staff of His tender love, He signified that this relation was at an end.

That I might dissolve My covenant which I had made with all the people, rather, with all the peoples, i. e. with all nations. Often as it is said of Israel, that they brake the covenant of God¹, it is spoken of God, only to deny that He would break it², or in prayer that He would not³. Here it is not absolutely the covenant with His whole people, which He brake; it is rather, so to speak, a covenant with the nations in favor of Israel, allowing thus much and forbidding more, with regard to His people. So God had said of the times of Christ⁴; In that day I will make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field and with the fowls of the heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground; and, I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and in Job⁵ thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field, and the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee. This covenant He willed to annihilate. He would no more interpose, as He had before said, I will not deliver from their hand. Whoever would might do, what they would, as the Romans first, and well nigh all nations since, have inflicted on the Jews, what they willed; and Mohammedans too have required to them their contumely to Jesus.

11. And so the poor of the flock that waited upon Me⁶ knew. The rest were blinded; those who listened to God's word, observed His Prophet, waited on Him and observed His words, knew from the fulfillment of the beginning, that the whole was God's word. Every darkening cloud around the devoted city was an earnest, that the storm, which should destroy it, was gathering upon it. So our Lord warned, When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judaea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart. The

12. And I said unto them, If ye think good, give Me My price. God asks of us a return, not having any proportion to His gifts of nature or of grace, but such as we can render. He took the Jews out of the whole human race, made them His own, a peculiar people, freed them from the bondage and the iron furnace of Egypt, gave them the land flowing with milk and honey, fed and guarded them by His Providence, taught them by His Prophets. He, the Lord and Creator of all, was willing to have them alone for His inheritance, and, in return, asked them to love Him with their whole heart, and to do what He commanded them. 12 He sent His servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of the vineyard; and the husbandmen took His servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. Last of all, He sent unto them His Son, to ask for those fruits, the return for all His bounteous care and His unwearied acts of power and love. 13 Give Me," He would say, "some fruits of piety, and tokens of faith."

"10 What? Does He speak of a price? Did the Lord of all let out His toil? Did He bargain with those, for whom he expended it for a certain price? He did. He condescended to serve day and night for our salvation and dignity; and as one hired, in view of the reward which He set before Him, to give all His care to adorn and sustain our condition. So He complains by Isaiah, that He had undergone great toil to do away our sins. But what reward did He require? Faith and the will of a faithful heart, that thereby we might attain the gift of righteousness, and might in holy works pant after everlasting glory. For He needeth not our goods; but He so bestoweth on us all things, as to esteem His labor amply paid, if He see us enjoy His gifts. But He so asketh for this as a reward, as to leave us free, either by faith and the love due, to embrace His benefits, or faithlessly to reject it. This is His meaning, when He saith,"

And if not, forbear. God does not force our free-will, or constrain our service. He places life and death before us, and bids us choose life. By His grace alone we can choose Him; but we can refuse His grace and Himself. ¹ Thou shalt say unto them, He says to Ezekiel, Thus saith the Lord God, He that heareth, let him hear, and he that forbeareth, let him forbear. This was said to them, as a people, the last offer of grace. It gathered into one all the past. As Elijah had said, ² If the Lord be God, follow Him; but if Baal, then follow him; so He bids them, at last to choose openly, whose they would be, to whom they would give their service; and if they would refuse in heart, to refuse in act also. Forbear, cease, leave off, abandon; and that for ever.

So they weighed for My price thirty pieces of silver; the price of a slave, goled to death by an ox³. Whence one of themselves says, "you will find that a freeman is valued, more or less, at 60 shekels, but a slave at thirty." He then, Whom the prophet represented, was to be valued at thirty pieces of silver. It was but an increase of the contumely, that this contemptuous price was given, not to Him, but for Him, the Price of His Blood. It was matter of bargain. ⁴ Judas said, What will ye give me, and I will deliver Him unto you? The High Priest, knowingly or unknowingly, fixed on the price, named by Zechariah. As they took into their mouths willingly the blasphemy mentioned in the Psalm; ⁵ they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, He trusted in the Lord, that He would deliver Him; let Him deliver Him, seeing that He delighted in Him; so perhaps they fixed on the thirty pieces of silver, because Zechariah had named them as a sum offered in contumely to him, who offered to be a shepherd and asked for his reward.

13. And the Lord said unto me, Cast it, as a thing vile and rejected, as torn flesh was to be cast to dogs⁷, or a corpse was cast unburied⁸, or the dead body of Absalom was cast into the pit⁹, or the dust of the idol-altars into the brook Kedron by Josiah¹⁰, or the idols to the moles and the bats¹¹; or Judah and Israel from the face of God¹² into a strange land¹³; Coniah and his seed, a vessel in which is no pleasure¹⁴, into a land which they knew not; or the rebels against God, said, ¹⁵ let us cast away their cords from us; or wickedness was cast into the Ephah¹⁶; once it is added¹⁷, for loathing.

Unto the potter. The words exactly correspond with the event, that the thirty pieces of silver were cast or flung away¹⁸; that their ultimate destination was the potter, whose field was bought with them; but that they were not cast directly to him, (which were a contemptuous act, such as would not be used whether for a gift or a purchase), but were cast to him in the house of the Lord. They were flung away by the remorse of Judas, and, in God's Providence, came to the potter. Whether any portion of this was a direct symbolic action of the prophet, or whether it was a prophetic vision, in which Zechariah himself was an actor, and saw himself in the character which he described, doing what he relates, cannot now be said certainly, since God has not told us. It seems to me more probable, that these actions belonged to the vision, because in other symbolic actions of the prophets, no other actors take part; and it is to the last degree unlikely, that Zechariah, at whose preaching Zerubbabel and Joshua and all the people set themselves earnestly to rebuild the temple, should have had so worthless a price offered to him; and the casting a price, which God condemned, into the house of God, at the command of God, and so implying His acceptance of it, were inconsistent. It was fulfilled, in act consistently, in Judas' remorse; in that he flung¹⁹ away the pieces of silver, which had stained his soul with innocent blood, in the

into the treasury; only in this case the second clause "to the treasury in the house of the Lord" would add nothing to the first, whereas, if יוֹצֵר be rendered in its natural sense "potter," this accounts for the use of the word "fling," and contains what was brought about by the joint agency of Judas and the Pharisees. But 2) no two words, in any language, are more distinct than אוֹצֵר and יוֹצֵר, both of them also being, in their several senses, common words. אוֹצֵר, "treasure," or at times, "treasury," occurs 79 times in the O. T.; יוֹצֵר, lit. "former," occurs 41 times beside these verses. There is not the slightest approximation of the meaning of the two roots; יוֹצֵר is "treasured up;" יוֹצֵר, "made." Since then, apart from inspiration, every writer wishes to be understood, it is, in the nature of things, absurd to suppose, that had Zechariah meant to say, "cast into the treasury," he should not have used the word, which everywhere else, 79 times, is used to express it, but should have used a word, which is always, viz. 41 times, used of something else. The particular form moreover, with the art. occurs 11 times in the O. T. as "the potter;" once in Isaiah (xix. 16), seven times in 2 chapters of Jeremiah, xviii. 2, 3, 4 (his) 6 (bis) xix. 11, of "the potter," once only of Almighty God, (Ps. xxxiii. 13) and that, in a different idiom. Of God, it is never used as a substantive, "the Creator." It remains a part, "Maker of," it being added, of what He is the Maker. "He that maketh the eye," Ps. xciv. 9, the hearts, Ib. xxxiii. 15, light, Is. xlv. 7; the earth, Ib. 18; the universe, Jer. x. 15, 11. 19; mountains, Amos iv. 13; grasshoppers, Ib. vii. 1; the spirit of man, Zech. xii. 1; or with pronouns, my Maker Is. xlix. 5; thy Maker Is. xliii. 1; our Maker xlii. 2, 24, his Maker Is. xxviii. 11, xlii. 16, xlv. 9, 11. The rendering then of the Jews in S. Jerome's time, D. Kim., Abraham of Toledo apparently, Abarb., Alsheikh, "the Creator," is unidiomatic, as well as that of Rashi, J. Kim. Tanch. Isaac (xvii. cent.) Chizzuk Emunah (Wagners Tel. ign. Sat. p. 146.), "treasury," which the modern Anti-Messianic interpreters follow. Aquila has τὸν ἀλάστωρ; the LXX and Symm. σκευόποιος, "foundry;" in that יוֹצֵר is used with regard to metals, Is. xlv. 12, liv. 17, Hab. ii. 18, as well as, more commonly, of clay. יוֹצֵר is used of the "potter" 2 Sam. xvii. 28, 1 Chr. iv. 23, Ps. li. 9, Is. xxx. 14, xli. 25, xlv. 7, Jer. xix. 1, Lam. iv. 2 (beside the use of הַיּוֹצֵר above); also "the former thereof" contrasted with the clay, Is. xlv. 9. The Hebrew-Arabic translation, which Pococke so much valued (12th cent.) has twice אֱלֹהֵי אֶרֶץ (used chiefly of a gold-smith). Abulwalid does not notice it in either lexicon, nor Saadyah Ibn Danan nor Parchon. They must therefore have had nothing to remark on it, interpreting it as elsewhere, "potter."

It is not then necessary even to say, that the dicta as to the interchange of א and י in Hebrew are much too vague, the instances heterogeneous. All the words, in which א and י occur as the first letter, are allied words of the same meaning, not interchanged. Such are אֶחָד and יָחַד, אֶשֶׁר and יָשָׁר, (whence the Proper Names אֶשְׂרָאֵל 1 Chr. xxv. 2. and יִשְׂרָאֵל Ib. 14.) אֶחָד and יָחַד. אֶחָד.

(2 Sam. xx. 5) are again allied, the Maltese also having a root wacchar (Vassalli Lex. malit. pp. 82, 831, in Ges. v. אָחַד. אָחַד "was stable" was, probably, the basis of יָמִין. The use of the ἀπ. λεγ.

תִּמְכֹּן הָאֵימִן "turn to the right" Is. xxx. 21, would have been anyhow a substitution of the guttural for the י, not the י for the א, and any ambiguity is precluded by the contrast of תִּמְכֹּן הָאֵימִן "turn to the left." The Kri כִּימֹן (Jer. v. 8) is only a bad correction for the Ch. כִּימֹן, and so not Biblical Hebrew. These are all the instances collected by Böttcher (Lehrb. n. 430.) In like way in the middle radical הָאֵר (Lev. x. 14) and הָיָה Deut. xiv.

13. Bötter, 1103, 4. adds הָיָה, which Saad. and Rashi, more probably, derive from הָיָה, Jer. ii. 11. In Ezek. vi. 6, אֶשֶׁן and אֶשֶׁן both occur, as variations, not of each other, but of שָׁכֵן, vi. 4.

Other cases are simple omissions of the א, not an interchange at all; as קָיָא (med. l. Arab.

Æth.) Jer. xxv. 27, כִּימֹן הָאֵימִן Ez. xxxiv. 20. Jer. vi. 7 is a mere correction for כִּימֹן, and so, again, not Biblical Hebrew. דִּוְיָ 1 Sam. xxii. 18, 22 Ch.) is a mere corruption of דִּוְיָ, א, in all languages proper names are the most easily corrupted. (See Daniel the prophet p. 405 ed. 2.) אֶשֶׁן (2 Sam. xx. 5. Mic. vi. 19) and the common אֶשֶׁן, each lose one letter of the original form, which has both. (See on Daniel the prophet p. 50 note. ed. 2) There is not then the slightest countenance for assuming that הָיָה is not, what according to its form it is, "the potter." Osor.

Jewish writers who could satisfy themselves that the 'thirty pieces of silver' were anything but what they are, some thirty precepts given to the sons of Noah (mystical interpretation in the יוֹד) ap. Arab. ad loc. p. 219. v.), or thirty dignities of royalty ("the wise of blessed memory," in Arab. Ib. p. 222. v.) or the thirty righteous in each generation, promised (as they say) by God to Abraham (Midra'h Aggadah in Rashi), or the thirty in that generation (Kim.), or who went up with Nehemiah, or were priests in his time [Tanchum has valued of them! The strong irony is carried on by the, at which I was valued of them, as in the idiom, *thou wert precious in my sight*¹. Precious the thought of God to David²; precious the redemption of the soul of man³; and precious was the Shepherd Who came to them; precious was the value, whereat He was valued by them⁴. And yet He, Who was so valued, was Almighty God. For so it stands: Thus saith the Lord God, Cast it unto the potter, the goodly price that I was prized at of them. The name, the potter, connects the prophecy with that former prophecy of Jeremiah⁵, denouncing the judgment of God for the shedding of innocent blood, whereby they had defiled the valley of the son of Hinnom, which was at the entry of the gate of the pottery⁶, and which, through the vengeance of God there, should be called the valley of slaughter⁷. The price of this innocent Blood, by the shedding of which the iniquities of their fathers were filled up, should rest on that same place, for whose sake God said, I will break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again. So then S. Matthew may have quoted this prophecy as Jeremiah's, to signify how the woes, denounced on the sins committed in this same place, should be brought upon it through this last crowning sin, and all the righteous blood which had been shed, should come upon that generation⁸.

⁸ S. Augustine suggests that S. Matthew wished to lend the reader to connect the prophecy of Zechariah with Jerem. xxxii. 9. "All copies," he says, "have not 'Jeremiah' but only 'by the prophet'; but more Miss. have the name of Jeremiah; and those who have considered the Gospel carefully in the Greek copies, say that they have found it in the older Greek (copies); and there is no reason why the name should be added, so as to occasion a fault; but there was a reason why it should be removed from some copies, this being done by a bold unskillfulness (impertitia) being distracted by the question, that this testimony was not found in Jeremiah." "S. Matthew," he says further, "would have corrected it in his life-time at least, when admonished by others who could read this, while he was yet in the flesh, unless he thought that one name of a prophet instead of another did, not without reason, occur to his memory, which was ruled by the Holy Spirit, but that the Lord appointed that to dissolve the brotherhood between Judah and Israel. Hitherto prophecy had spoken of the healing of the great breach between Israel and Judah, in Christ. The Lord, Isaiah said, shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim; and Hosea, Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together and shall appoint themselves one Head; and Jeremiah, In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel. And Ezekiel, in the midst of the captivity, in a symbolic action the counterpart of this, is bidden, Take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim and all the house of Israel his companions, and join them one to another into one stick, and they shall become one in thy hand; and, when asked the meaning of this act, he was to say, Thus saith the Lord God, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and will make them one stick, and they shall be one in Mine hand. And dropping the symbol; ¹⁵ Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone—and I will make it should be so written," 1) to shew that all the prophets, speaking by the Spirit, agreed together by a marvelous consent, which is much more than if all the things of the prophets were spoken by the mouth of one man, and so that, whatever the Holy Spirit said by them, should be received undoubtedly, and each belonged to all and all to each &c. 2) to combine it with the selling the field of Hana-neel, of which the evidence was put in an earthen vessel, de Cons. Evang. L. iii. n. 30, 31. T. iii. 2. p. 114-116.

None of the other cases of mixed quotation come up to this. S. Mark quotes two prophecies, of Malachi and of Isaiah as Isaiah's (S. Mark i. 2, 3). S. Matthew blends in one, words of Isaiah (lxii. 1) and Zechariah (ix. 9) as "the prophet" (S. Mat. xxi. 4, 5). Our Lord unites Is. lvi. 7, and Jer. vii. 11, with the words, "It is written."

Of earlier fathers Tertullian simply quotes the prophecy as Jeremiah's (adv. Marc. iv. 40). Origen says, "Jeremiah is not said to have prophesied this anywhere in his books, either what are read in the Churches, or reported (referuntur) among the Jews. I suspect that it is an error of writing, or that it is some secret writing of Jeremiah where-in it is written." (in S. Mat. p. 916.) Eusebius says, "Consider since this is not in the Prophet Jeremiah, whether we must think that it was removed from it by some wickedness, or whether it was a clerical error of those who made the copies of the Gospels carelessly." them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel: and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all—I will cleanse them, and they shall be My people and I will be their God, and David My servant shall be king over them, and they all shall have one Shepherd. Such should be the unity of those who would be gathered under the One Shepherd. And so it was. ¹The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; and long afterward it was a proverb among the Heathen, "See how these Christians love one another." Zechariah is here speaking of those who had rejected the Good Shepherd, the Israel and Judah after the flesh, who shut themselves out from the promises of God. This had its first fulfillment in the terrible dissolution of every band of brotherhood² and of our common nature, which made the siege of Jerusalem a proverb for horror, and precipitated its destruction. "Having thus separated the believing from the unbelieving, He bared the rest of His care. And what we now see bears witness to the prophecy. For the Jews, being deprived of prophets and priests and kings and temple and ark and altar and mercy-seat and candlestick and table and the rest, through which the legal worship was performed, have come to be deprived also of the guardianship from above; and, scattered, exiled, removed, serve against their will those who preach Christ: denying Him as Lord, they yield service to His servants. The prophet having foretold these things of Christ, our God and Saviour, and reproved the obstinacy of the Jews, naturally turns his prophecy straight to the God-opposed christ whom they expect, as they say. So said the Lord in the holy Gospels to them, ³*I am come in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not; another will come in his own name, and him ye will receive.* This the blessed Paul also prophesied of them, ⁴*Because they* received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved, God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie, that all might be damned, who believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness. The like does the blessed Zechariah prophesy, having received the power of the Holy Spirit."

15. Take to thee yet the instrument¹ of a foolish shepherd. "Yet. He had enacted one tragedy, in which he clearly set forth the future guilt of Judas; now another is set forth, the accumulated scoffing through Anti-Christ. For as Paul said, because they receive not the Spirit of truth, the All-righteous Judge shall send them a spirit of delusion, that they should believe a lie¹⁰. He calls him a foolish shepherd, for since the extremest folly consists in the extremest wickedness, he will be the most foolish, who reached the highest impiety, and this he will do by arrogating to himself divinity and claiming divine honors¹¹.

This is the only action, which the prophet had to enact or to relate. If it was a visible act, the instrument might be a staff which should bruise, an instrument which should bear a semblance to that of the good shepherd, but which should be pernicious. "Good shepherds, who understood their business, had slight staves, that, if there should be occasion to strike, the stricken sheep might not be bruised; but one who understandeth not, beats them with thicker clubs." Or it may mean also, whatever he would use for the hurtful treatment of the sheep, such as he proceeds to speak of. He is spoken of as, in fact, foolishly sinful⁸: for sin is the only real folly, and all real folly has sin mingled in it. The short-lived wisdom of the foolish shepherd for his own ends should also be his destruction.

Which shall not visit them that be cut off. Zechariah uses the imagery, yet not the exact words of Jeremiah⁴ and Ezekiel⁵. Neglect of every duty of a shepherd to his flock, to the sick, the broken, the sound; direct injury of them, preying upon them, make up the picture.

17. Wo to the idol shepherd, (a shepherd of nothingness, one who hath no quality of a shepherd¹¹;) who leaveth the flock. The condemnation of the evil shepherd is complete in the abandonment of the sheep; as our Lord says, ¹² He that is an hireling and not the Shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming and leaveth the sheep and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling and careth not for the sheep.

Or it may equally be, Shepherd, ¹³ thou idol, including the original meaning of nothingness, such as Anti-Christ will be, "while he calleth himself God, and willet to be worshipped." ¹⁴ This shepherd shall therefore arise in Israel, because the true Shepherd had said, I will not feed you. He is prophesied of by another name in Daniel the Prophet¹⁵, and in the Gospel¹⁶, and in the Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians¹⁷, as the abomination of desolation, who shall sit in the temple of the Lord, and make himself as God. He cometh, not to heal but to destroy the flock of Israel. This shepherd the Jews shall receive, whom the Lord Jesus shall slay with the breath of His mouth, and destroy with the brightness of His coming."

The sword shall be upon [against] his arm and right eye. His boast shall be of intelligence, and might. The punishment and destruction shall be directed against the instrument of each, the eye and the arm. "The eye, whereby he shall boast to behold acutely the mysteries of God, and to see more than all prophets heretofore, so that he shall call himself son of God. But the word of the Lord shall be upon his arm and upon his right eye, so that his strength and all his boast of might shall be dried up, and the knowledge which he promised himself falsely, shall be obscured in everlasting darkness."

The "right" in Holy Scripture being so often a symbol of what is good, the left of what is evil, it may be also imagined, that ¹⁹ the left eye, i. e. the acumen and cunning to devise deadly frauds, will remain uninjured: while the right eye, i. e. counsel to guard against evil, will be sunk in thick darkness. And so, the more he employs his ability to evil, the more frantically will he bring to bear destruction upon himself."

XII. "1 From 'I will make Jerusalem' to 'Awake, O sword,' there is a threefold exposition. For some of the Jews say that these things have already been fulfilled in part from Zorobabel to Cn. Pompey who, first of the Romans, took Judea and the temple, as Josephus relates. Others think that it is to be fulfilled at the end of the world, when Jerusalem shall be restored, which the miserable Jewish race promiseth itself with its anointed, of whom we read above as the foolish shepherd. But others, i.e. we who are called by the name of Christ, say that these things are daily fulfilled, and will be fulfilled in the Church to the end of the world."

1. The burden of the word of the Lord for, rather, upon² Israel. If this prophecy is a continuation of the last, notwithstanding its fresh title, then Israel must be the Christian Church, formed of the true Israel which believed, and the Gentiles who were grafted into them. So S. Cyril; "Having spoken sufficiently of the Good Shepherd Christ, and of the foolish, most cruel shepherd who butchered the sheep, i.e. Anti-Christ, he seasonably makes mention of the persecutions which would from time to time arise against Israel; not the Israel according to the flesh, but the spiritual, that Jerusalem which is indeed holy, ³*the Church of the Living God.* For as we say, that he is spiritually a Jew, who hath the 'circumcision in the heart, that through the Spirit, and not in the flesh through the letter; so also may Israel be conceived, not that of the blood of Israel, but rather that, which has a mind beholding God. But such are all who are called to sanctification through the faith in Christ, and who, in Him and by Him, know of God the Father. For this is the one true elected way of beholding God."

⁶ So Lap. "That Zechariah speaks literally of the times of the Maccabees which were shortly to follow, appears both from the sequence of the times, and the connection and congruency of these oracles with the deeds of the Maccabees, as also

Since the Good Shepherd was rejected by all, except the poor of the flock, the little flock which believed in Him, and thereupon the band of brotherhood was dissolved between Israel and Judah, Israel in those times could not be Israel after the flesh, which then too was the deadly antagonist of the true Israel, and thus early also chose Anti-Christ, such as was Bar-Cochba, with whom so many hundreds of thousands perished. There was no war then against Jerusalem, since it had ceased to be^b.

But Zechariah does not say that this prophecy, to which he has annexed a separate title, follows, in time, upon the last; rather, since he has so separated it by its title, he has marked it as a distinct prophecy from the preceding. It may be, that he began again from the time of the Maccabees and took God's deliverances of the people Israel then, as the foreground of the deliverances to the end^c. Yet in the times of Antiochus, it was one people only which was against the Jews, and Zechariah himself speaks only of the Greeks^d; here he repeatedly emphasizes that they were all nations^e. It may then rather be, that the future, the successive efforts of the world to crush the people of God, and its victory amid suffering, and its conversions of the world through the penitent looking to Jesus, are exhibited in one great perspective, according to the manner of prophecy, which mostly exhibits the prominent events, not their order or sequence. ^f"The penitential act of contrite sinners, especially of Jews, looking at Him Whom they pierced, dates from the Day of Pentecost, and continues to the latter days, when it will be greatly intensified and will produce blessed results, and is here concentrated into one focus. The rising up of God's enemies against Christ's Church, which commenced at the same time, and has been continued in successive persecutions from Jews, Gentiles, and other unbelievers because v. 10. ends in the Passion of Christ. For this followed the times of the Maccabees. As then Isai. vi. 9, Jeremiah, Hosea, Daniel, Ezekiel &c. foretold what was shortly to befall the Jews from Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Darius, so Zechariah foretells what should presently befall them from Antiochus under the Maccabees." in every age, and which will reach its climax in the great Anti-Christian outbreak of the last times, and be confounded by the Coming of Christ to judgment, is here summed up in one panoramic picture, exhibited at once to the eye."

Which stretcheth forth the heavens. God's creative power is an ever-present working, as our Lord says, ¹My Father worketh hitherto and I work. His preservation of the things which He has created is a continual re-creation. All "forces" are supported by Him, Who Alone hath life in Himself. He doth not the less uphold all things by the word of His power, because, until the successive generations, with or without their will, with or against His Will for them, shall have completed His Sovereign Will, He upholds them uniformly in being by His Unchanging Will. Man is ever forgetting this, and because, ²since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as from the beginning of the creation, they relegate the Creator and His creating as far as they can to some time, as far back as they can imagine, enough to fill their imaginations, and forget Him Who made them, in Whose hands is their eternity, Who will be their Judge. So the prophets remind them and us of His continual working, which men forget in the sight of His works; ³Thus saith the Lord; He that createth the heavens, and stretcheth them out; He that spreadeth forth the earth and its produce, Who giveth breath to the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein; and, ⁴I am the Lord Who maketh all things, Who stretcheth out the heavens alone, Who spreadeth abroad the earth by Myself; speaking at once of that, past in its beginning yet present to us in its continuance, but to Him ever-present present; and of things actually present to us, ⁵that frustrateth the counsel of the living; and of things to those of that day still future, ⁶that confirmeth the word of His servant, and performeth the counsel of His messengers; the beginning of which was not to be till the taking of Babylon. And the Psalmist unites past and present in one, ⁷Donning light as a garment, stretching out the heavens as a curtain; Who layeth the beams of His chambers on the waters, Who maketh the clouds His chariot; Who walketh on the wings of the wind; Who maketh His angels spirits, His ministers a flame of fire; He founded the earth upon its base. And Amos, ⁹He that formeth the mountains and createth the winds, and declareth unto man his thoughts;—adding whatever lieth nearest to each of us.

And formeth the spirit of man within him, both by the unceasing creation of souls, at every moment in some spot in our globe, or by the re-creation, for which David prays, ¹⁰Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. He Who formed the hearts of men can overrule them as He wills. ¹¹But the spirit of man is formed by God in him, not by being called to the beginnings of being, although it was made by Him, but, as it were, transformed from weakness to strength, from unmanliness to endurance, altogether being transelemented from things shameful to better things."

¹²It is the wont of the holy Prophets, when about to declare beforehand things of no slight moment, to endeavor to show beforehand the Almightyness of God, that their word may obtain credence, though they should declare what was beyond all hope, and (to speak of our conceptions) above all reason and credibility."

2. I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling¹¹. For encouragement, He promises the victory, and at first mentions the attack incidentally. Jerusalem is as a cup or basin, which its enemies take into their hands; a stone, which they put forth their strength to lift; but they themselves reel with the draught of God's judgments which they would give to others, they are torn by the stone which they would lift to fling. The image of the cup is mostly of God's displeasure, which is given to His own people, and then, His judgment of chastisement being exceeded, given in turn to those who had been the instruments of giving it¹². Thus Isaiah speaks of the cup of trembling. ¹³Thou, Jerusalem, hast drunk the dregs of the cup of trembling, hast wrung them out. Therefore hear thou this, thou afflicted and drunken but not with wine. Thus saith thy Lord, the Lord, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of His people, Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling, the dregs of the cup of My fury; thou shalt no more drink it again: but I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee. miah speaks of the cup of God's anger, as given by God first to Jerusalem, then to all whom Nebuchadnezzar should subdue, then to Babylon itself¹; and as passing through to Edom also²; Ezekiel, of Aholibah³ (Jerusalem) drinking the cup of Samaria. In Jeremiah alone, Babylon is herself the cup.⁴ Babylon is a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the nations drunken; the nations have drunken of the wine; therefore the nations are mad. Now Jerusalem is to be, not an ordinary cup, but a large basin⁵ or vessel, from which all nations may drink what will make them reel.

And also upon Judah will it be in the siege against Jerusalem, i. e. the burden of the word⁶ of the Lord which was on Israel should be upon Judah, i. e. upon all, great and small.

3. I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone to all nations. What is a stone to all nations? It is not a rock or anything in its own nature immovable, but a stone, a thing rolled up and down, moved, lifted, displaced, piled on others, in every way at the service and command of men, to do with it what they willed. So they thought of that stone cut out without hands; that tried stone and sure foundation, laid in Zion; that stone which, God said in Zechariah⁹, I have laid; of which our Lord says, the stone, which the builders rejected, is become the head of the corner; whoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder. The Church, built on the stone, seems a thing easily annihilated; ten persecutions in succession strove to efface it; Diocletian erected a monument, commemorating that the Christian name was blotted out¹². It survived; he perished. The image may have been suggested by the custom, so widely prevailing in Judaea, of trying the relative strength of young men, by lifting round stones selected for that end¹³. "The meaning then is, I will place Jerusalem to all nations like a very heavy stone¹⁴ to be lifted up. They will lift it up, and according to their varied strength, will waste it; but it must needs be, that, while it is lifted, in the very strain of lifting the weight, that most heavy stone should leave some scission or rasure on the bodies of those who lift it. Of the Church it may be interpreted thus; that all persecutors, who fought against the house of the Lord, are inebriated with that cup, which Jeremiah gives to all nations, to drink and be inebriated and fall and vomit and be mad. Whosoever would uplift the stone shall lift it, and in the anger of the Lord, whereby He chastens sinners, will hold it in his hands; but he himself will not go unpunished, the sword of the Lord fighting against him."

All that burden themselves with it will be cut to pieces¹⁵, more exactly, scarified, lacerated; shall bear the scars. Though (rather, and) all the people [peoples, nations] of the earth shall be gathered together against it. The prophet marshals them all against Jerusalem, only to ⁶ כֶּהֱנִי is the only natural subject, as in ix. 1, the burden of the Lord is on the land of Hadrach, but it is subjoined, Damascus is the resting place thereof, &c. The E. V. does not seem grammatical. The E. M. is too elliptical, as also that other, "it will be laid upon Jerusalem to be in the siege against Jerusalem." Had "the cup of trembling" been the subject, it had probably been לִהְיוֹת, as לִכְל, הָרָעִים. Nor can כֶּהֱנִי be the subject; for countries, as Judah, are not the objects of siege.

In the Acropolis at Athens, I saw a brass globe, of very great weight, which I, with my little weak body, could scarcely move. When I asked its object, I was told by the inhabitants, that the strength of wrestlers was proved by that mass, and that no one went to a match, until it was ascertained by the lifting of that weight, who ought to be set against whom." say how they should perish before it. So in Joel God says, 'I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down to the valley of Jehoshaphat, speaking of that last closing strife of Anti-Christ against God. Wars against Israel had either been petty, though Anti-theistic, wars of neighboring petty nations, pitting their false gods against the True, or one, though world-empire wielded by a single will. The more God made Himself known, the fiercer the opposition. The Gospel claiming obedience to the faith among all nations, provoked universal rebellion. Herod and Pontius Pilate became friends through rejection of Christ; the Roman Cæsar and the Persian Sapor, Goths and Vandals, at war with one another, were one in persecuting Christ and the Church. Yet in vain;

4. In that day, saith the Lord, I will smite every horse with astonishment, stupefying. Zechariah revives the words concentrated by Moses, to express the stupefaction at their ills, which God would accumulate upon His people, if they perseveringly rebelled against Him. Each expresses the intensity of the visitation³. The horse and his rider had, through Moses' song at the Red Sea, become the emblem of worldly power, overthrown. That song opens; 'I will sing unto the Lord; for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He cast into the sea. The scared cavalry throws into confusion the ranks, of which it was the boast and strength.

And on the house of Judah I will open My eyes, in pity and love and guidance, as the Psalmist says, 'I will counsel, with Mine eye

5. And the princes of Judah. He pictures the onemindedness of the Church. No one shall assume anything to himself; each shall exalt the strength which the other was to him; but all, in the Lord. The princes of Judah shall say in their heart, not outwardly or politically, but in inward conviction, strength to me⁶ (all speak as one) are the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the Lord of hosts their God. The highest in human estimation acknowledge that their strength is in those who are of no account in this world; as, in fact, the hearts of the poor are evermore the strength of the Church; but that, in the Lord of hosts; in Him, in Whose hands are the powers of heaven and earth, over against the petty turmoil on earth. God had chosen Jerusalem⁷; therefore she was invincible. "That most glorious prince of Judah, Paul, said, 'I can do all things in Christ Who strengtheneth me.'"

6. I will make the governors of Judah like a hearth or candron⁸ of fire, large, broad, deep, and full of fire, among the wood which is prepared for burning⁹, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf. The fire could not kindle the wood or the sheaf, of itself, unless applied to it. All is of the agency of God: I will make.

And Jerusalem shall again, rather, yet, be inhabited. "Yet" is a sort of burden in Zechariah's prophecies. "4 They at once burned up by the flame all the defilement of vices, and kindled the minds of men with the torch of Divine love; at once consumed the enemy and cast a heavenly fire into the human heart: yet; in despite of all appearances, of all which is against her. She shall yet dwell in her own place in Jerusalem; for, however the waves of this world chafe and lash themselves into foam against her, they break themselves, not her; as soon as they have reached their utmost height, they fall back; if they toss themselves, and, for a moment, hide her light, they fall down at all sides, and the ray shines out, steady as before; for she is founded on a rock, against which ⁵*the gates of hell should not prevail.*

7. The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first. Still it is, the Lord shall save. We have, on the one side, the siege, the gathering of all the peoples of the earth against Jerusalem, the horse and his rider. On the other, no human strength; not, as before, in the prophecy of the Maccabees, the bow, the arrow, and the sword, though in the hand of God ⁶. It is thrice, I will make ⁷; I will smite ⁸; and now, The Lord shall save. By the tents, he probably indicates their defencelessness. God would save them first; that the glory ⁹ of the house

For honors puff up, wealth and delights weaken the mind; wherefore they need greater grace of Christ to burst their bonds than the poor. Wherefore, for the greater grace shewn them, they are bound to give greater thanks unto Christ."

8. In that day the Lord shall defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and he that is feeble, rather, he that stumbleth among them, shall be as David. The result of the care and the defence of God is here wholly spiritual. fall, who becomes as David, the great instance of one who fell, yet was raised. Daniel says of a like trial-time, ¹*And some of those of understanding shall stumble, to try them and to purge and to make them white, to the time of the end.* ²*"Such care will God have of protecting the sons of the Church, when it shall be infested with persecutions, that he who shall have fallen through human infirmity, either deceived by heretics or overcome by fear of tortures, shall arise the more fervent and cautious, and with many tears shall make amends for his sins to God, as did David. He who stumbled shall be as David, because the sinner returneth to repentance. This is not said of all times, nor of all (for many have stumbled, who never rose) but chiefly of the first times of the Church and of men of great sanctity, such as were many then."*

And the house of David shall be as God. They who stumbled became really like David; but he, though mighty and a great saint of God, though he once fell, was man. How then could the house of David be really like God? Only fully in Him, Who, ³*being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; Who said, "He who hath seen Me, hath seen My Father also; "I and the Father are one.* And this the prophet brings out by adding, as the Angel of the Lord before them, i.e. that one Angel of the Lord, in whom His very Presence and His Name was; Who went before them, to guide them. Else, having said, like God, it had been to lessen what he had just said, to add, like the Angel of the Lord. Our Lord prayed for those who are truly His, ⁴*As Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they may be one in Us; that they may be one as We are one, I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be perfect in one;* and S. Paul saith, ⁵*Christ is formed in us; "Christ dwelleth*

in our hearts by faith; "Christ liveth in me; "Christ is in you; "Christ is our life; "Christ is all and in all; "we grow into Him which is the Head, even Christ; "we are in Christ; and S. Peter, we are "partakers of the Divine nature; and S. John, "As He is, so are we in this world. Then in a degree the glory of Christ passeth over to those who dwell in Him, and in whom He dwells by the Spirit, as S. Paul says; ⁶*Ye received me, as an angel of God, as Christ Jesus.*

9. In that day, I will seek to destroy. Woe indeed to those, whom Almighty God shall "seek to destroy!" Man may seek earnestly to do, what at last he cannot do. Still it is an earnest seeking. And whether it is used of human seeking which fails¹⁰, or which succeeds²⁰, inchoate²¹ or permitted²², it is always used of seeking to do, what it is a person's set purpose to do if he can¹⁹. Here it is spoken of Almighty God²³. ²⁴*"He saith not, 'I will destroy' but I will seek to destroy, i.e. it shall ever be My care to destroy all the enemies of the Church, that they may in no way prevail against it: this I will do alway to the end of the world."*

10. And I will pour, as He promised by Joel²⁵, *I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh, largely, abundantly, upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, all, highest and lowest, from first to last, the Spirit of grace and supplication, i.e. the Holy Spirit which conveyeth grace, as "the Spirit of wisdom and understanding is the Spirit infusing wisdom and understanding, and the Spirit of counsel and might is that same Spirit, imparting the gift of counsel to see what is to be done and of might to do it, and the Spirit of the knowledge and of the fear of the Lord is that same Spirit, infusing loving acquaintance with God, with awe at His infinite Majesty. ⁵ There is no critical doubt about the reading,

אלי, to Me. It is the reading of all the old Vers., Jewish or Christian; LXX. Aq. Sym. Theod. Chald. Syr. Vulg. In the 10th cent., the Jews had begun to make a marginal correction into אלי, but did not venture to change the text. "Where we, according to the faith of Holy Scripture, read, in the Person of God, 'and they shall look to Me Whom they pierced,' though, in the text itself of the book, they were deterred by God's Providence from making a change, yet without, in the margin, they have it noted, 'they shall look to him whom they pierced.' And so they hand down to their disciples, that they should transcribe, as it is contained in the text, and read, as they have noted, outside; so that they may hold, according to their phrensy, that the Jews look to him, whom Gog and Magog pierced." Rabanus Maurus c. Jnd. n. 12. In the 13th. cent. Martini says, that "all the old MSS. of the Jews have אלי;" and that the "perfidy of some modern Jews, unable to deprave so evident a testimony to the divinity of the Messiah, say, that it is not אלי but אלי," f. 666. In f. 328, he again says, "some Jews falsify the text;" and (f. 329) that "now (iam) in many MSS. they have corrupted their text, but that they are refuted by the Targum, the Talmud, and by many ancient MSS., in which this text is not yet corrupted, and by the exposition of Rashi." R. Isaac, at the end of the 10th. cent. A. D. 1593, quoted the reading אלי without doubt, though he was expressly controverting the Christian argument. "They say, that hereafter the sons of Israel shall mourn, because they pierced and slew the Messiah sent to them, Jesus who is compounded of Godhead and Manhood, and they say, that this is (the meaning of) 'they shall look to me whom they pierced.'" (Chizuk Emunah in Wagenseil Tela ign. Sat. pp. 303, 304.) He explains it of the wars of Gog and Magog. "If they shall see that they [their enemies] shall pierce through even one of them, they shall be amazed and shall look to me, et aher dactaro, i. e. on account of him, whom they pierced—So that the Nazarenes have no help from the words והביטו אלי את אשר דקרו (Ib. pp. 307, 308); and he subjoins, that if he who was wounded had been the same as he to whom they should look, it ought to have gone on in the first the Spirit of grace, rudely repulsing the Spirit, Who giveth grace. "When God Himself says, 'I will pour out,' He sets forth the greatness of His bountifulness whereby He bestoweth all things."

And they shall look, with trustful hope and longing, on Me⁵, Almighty God, Whom they person, והביטו עלי, and והזמר עלי, like והביטו עלי. Ib. 309. R. Lipmann (A. D. 1399) uses the same argument, "He should have said, and they shall mourn for me, as he began, they shall look to me." p. 144 ed. Hacks. Ibn Ezra agrees with this for he explains it in the first person, "Then shall all nations look to me (אלי) to see what I shall do to those who have slain Messiah b. Joseph." Alsheikh's commentary requires the same, "And I will yet do a third thing. And this that they shall look אלי, is that they shall hang their eyes on Me in perfect repentance when they see &c." and R. Obadiah Siporno, (Bibl. Rabb.) "and they shall look to Me in their prayer." Rashi also gives the Targ. "and they shall seek of Me" קדמו as the interpretation of אלי והביטו אלי "they shall look to me." R. Tanchum of Jerusalem, "a learned son of a learned father," in the latter part of the 13th cent. (Gritz vii. 144, 145) knew in the East of no other reading. He explains it: "They shall flee to Me, when they see the slaying of those whom the enemy had slain of them" (Poc. 344). His contemporary, Parchon, in his lexicon Mechabereth, cites the passage with אלי, and explains the word "piercing of a sword in the body," דקר. The

Heb. Arab. version, so often quoted by Pococke (Hunt. 206) renders, "And they turned to me, whom they rent (קערו) the word, used by Abulwalid, only Abulwalid further explains this by שק.) Abulwalid

With regard to MSS., even in later times Peter Niger [Schwarz] (a learned Benedictine of the 17th cent.) wrote, "some false and lying Jews say that it is not written, 'And they shall look on me whom they have pierced,' but 'they shall seek to him whom they have pierced'—I answer, that on my conscience and on the Christian truth I say, I have seen many Jewish Bibles (Spanish, doubtless, since he studied Hebrew in Spain) and I never, in any Bible, found it written other than vehibbitu elai, 'and they shall look to me,' and not vehibbitu elav, 'and they shall look to him,' as I will shew any one who desires to see." Stella Messias Tract. ii. c. 2. A. D. 1477 in Wolf Bibl. Hebr. iv. p. 543. Norzi, a Jewish critic, says that אלי is not found in the Scriptures, only in Rashi and the Gemara. The codex Babyl.

Petropol. (I am told, of the 10th cent.) has אלי. In the collated MSS. there is the variation, common where there is a real or virtual kri, 33 Kenn. MSS. and 6 de R. have אלי; 3 have אלי marked on the marg., one as a kri; 7 K. and 5 de R. had אלי corrected into אלי; 4 K., 5 de R. had אלי corrected into אלי; 11 K., 5 de R. had a kri in marg. אלי. "The most and best MSS have אלי." De R. . Ewald's ground for rejecting the reading אלי illustrates the Jewish. דקר is, from the context which speaks of mourning for the dead, and the have pierced¹; the Head with the thorns, the Hands and Feet with the nails, the Side with the soldier's lance. The prophecy began to be fulfilled as soon as the deed was completed, and Jesus had yielded up His Spirit: when ²all the people: that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts and returned. ³When they had nailed the Divine Shrine to the Wood, they who had crucified Him, stood around, impiously mocking.—But when He had laid down His life for us, ⁴the centurion and they that were with him, watching Jesus, seeing the earthquake and those things which were done, feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God." As it ever is with sin, compunction did not come till the sin was over: till then, it was overlaid; else the sin could not be done. At the first conversion, the three thousand were pricked⁵ in the heart, when told that He ⁶Whom they had taken and with wicked hands had crucified and slain, is Lord and Christ. This awoke the first penitence of him who became S. Paul. Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? This has been the centre of Christian devotion ever since, the security against passion, the impulse to self-denial, the parent of zeal for souls, the incentive to love; this has struck the rock, that it gushed forth in tears of penitence: this is the strength and vigor of hatred of sin, to look to Him Whom our sins pierced, Who S. Paul says, loved me and gave Himself for me. ⁷We all lifted Him up upon the Cross; we transfixed with the nails His Hands and Feet; we pierced His Side with the spear. For if man had not sinned, the Son of God would have endured no torment."

And they shall mourn for Him, as one mourneth for an only son, and shall be in bitterness for Him, as one that is in bitterness for a first-born. We feel most sensibly the sorrows of this life, language of the prophet (xiii. 3) clear; but for אֵלֵי, we must, with many MSS., read אֵלָיו. The first person were wholly unsuited here. It is at variance with the following וּסְפְרוּ עָלָיו, and introduces into the Old Testament the senselessness, that one is to weep over Jahve, (for Jahve [Almighty God] must be the subject,) as over one dead, (who should never come back again!). De Rossi suggests that the אֵלֵי came in accidentally, the scribe having in his mind Ps. xxxiv. 6, וּכְבִּיטוּ אֵלָיו.

¹There can equally be no question about the meaning of דָּקַר (as even Ew. and Hitz. admit) or about the construction. דָּקַר (which occurs 11 times, is everywhere "thrust through." In one place only, Lam. iv. 9, נִדְּקִים, "thrust through," occurs as a synonyme of רָעַב "those wounded by hunger" and that, in contrast with passing as they are; and of these, the loss of an only son is a proverbial sorrow. ⁸O daughter of My people, gird thee with sackcloth and wallow thyself in ashes, God says; make thee the mourning of an only son, most bitter lamentation. ⁹I will make it as the mourning of an only son. The dead man carried out, the only son of his mother and she was a widow, is recorded as having touched the heart of Jesus. ¹⁰And our Lord, to the letter, was the Only-Begotten of His Father and His mother." He was ¹¹the first-begotten of every creature, and ¹²we saw His glory, the glory as of the Only-Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. This mourning for Him Whom our sins pierced and nailed to the tree, is continued, week by week, by the pious, on the day of the week, when He suffered for us, or in the perpetual memorial of His Precious Death in the Holy Eucharist, and especially in Passion-Tide. God sends forth anew the Spirit of grace and supplication, and the faithful mourn, because of their share in His Death. The prophecy had a rich and copious fulfillment in that first conversion in the first Pentecost; a larger fulfillment awaits it in the end, when, after the destruction of Anti-Christ, ¹³all Israel shall be converted and be saved. There is yet a more awful fulfillment; when ¹⁴He cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see Him, and they which pierced Him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. But meanwhile it is fulfilled in every solid conversion of Jew Heathen or careless Christian, as well as in the devotion of the pious. Zechariah has concentrated in few words the tenderest devotion of the Gospel, They shall look on Me Whom they pierced. ¹⁵Zechariah teaches that among the various feelings which we can elicit from the meditation on the Passion of Christ, as admiration, love, gratitude,

Ps. xli. 18. In regard to the construction, מִן אֵלֵי occurs in 97 places in the Bible, and in every place in the meaning "he who," "that which," "this that." In one place only Dent. xxix. 13, 14, מִן having been previously used as a preposition, "and not with you only, (אִתְּכֶם) do I make this covenant," the מִן is again used as a preposition, carrying on the construction, "but with him who, אֵלֵי." Frischmuth (de Messia confuso) mentions 14 ways, by which "because" might without ambiguity have been expressed (see Pusey's Univ. Sermons p. 142). There is then no excuse for the renderings αὐτοῦ ὡς, LXX. or Αὐ. οὗν ὡς. Theod. has αὐτοῦ ὡς εἰς ὃν ἐκέντησαν.

compunction, fear, penitence, imitation, patience, joy, hope, the feeling of compassion stands eminent, and that it is this, which we peculiarly owe to Christ suffering for us. For who would not in his inmost self grieve with Christ, innocent and holy, yea the Only-Begotten Son of God, when he sees Him nailed to the Cross and enduring so lovingly for him sufferings so manifold and so great? Who would not groan out commiseration, and melt into tears? Truly says S. Bonaventure in his 'goad of Divine love': 'What can be more fruitful, what sweeter than, with the whole heart, to suffer with that most bitter suffering of our Lord Jesus Christ?'"

11. As the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. This was the greatest sorrow, which had fallen on Judah. Josiah was the last hope of its declining kingdom. His sons probably shewed already their unlikeness to their father, whereby they precipitated their country's fall. In Josiah's death the last gleam of the sunset of Judah faded into night. Of him it is recorded, that *his pious acts, according to what was written in the law of the Lord, were written in his country's history*¹; for him the prophet *Jeremiah wrote a dirge*²; *all the minstrels of his country spake of him in their dirges*³. The dirges were made an ordinance which survived the captivity; *to this day*⁴, it is said at the close of the Chronicles. Among the gathering sorrows of Israel, this lament over Josiah was written in the national collection of dirges⁵. Hadadrimmon, as being compounded of the name of two Syrian idols, is, in its name, a witness how Syrian idolatry penetrated into the kingdom, when it was detached from the worship of God. It was ^a a city near Jezreel, now called Maximinianopolis in the plain of Megiddon, in which the righteous king Josiah was wounded by Pharaoh Necho." This "was 17 miles from Cæsarea, 10 from Esdraelon." Its name still survives in a small village, south of Megiddon⁶, and so, on the way back to Jerusalem.

12-14. This sorrow should be universal but also individual, the whole land, and that, family by family; the royal family in the direct line of its kings, and in a branch from Nathan, a son of David and whole brother of Solomon⁷, which was continued on in private life, yet was still to be an ancestral line of Jesus⁸: in like way the main priestly family from Levi, and a subordinate line from a grandson of Levi, the family of Shimei⁹; and all the remaining families, each with their separate sorrow, each according to Joel's call, let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber and the bride out of her closet, each denying himself the tenderest solaces of life.

"¹⁰ The ungrateful and ungodly, daily, as far as in them lies, crucify Christ, as S. Paul says, crucifying to themselves the Son of God afresh and putting Him to an open shame. And on these Christ, out of His boundless pity, poureth forth a spirit of grace and supplication, so that, touched with compunction, with grieving and tearful feeling, they look on Christ, suffering with His suffering, and bewailing their own impurities."

"¹² The likeness is in the sorrow, not in its degree. Josiah had restored religion, removed a dire superstition, bound up relaxed morals by healthful discipline, recalled to its former condition the sinking state. In their extremest needs light shone on them, when there came his unlooked-for death. There with the whole state seemed lost. So in the Death of Christ, they who loved Him, saw His Divine works, placed their whole hope

But the grief in the death of Christ was the more bitter, as He awoke a greater longing for Himself, and had brought a firmer hope of salvation.¹

XIII. 1. In that day there shall be a fountain opened. Zechariah often repeats, *in that day*¹, resuming his subject again and again, as a time not proximate, but fixed and known of God, of which he declared somewhat. It is that day which ²Abraham desired to see, and saw it, whether by direct revelation, or in the typical sacrifice of Isaac, and was glad: it was ³that day which many prophets and kings and righteous men desired to see, and in patience waited for it: the one day of salvation of the Gospel. He had spoken of repentance, in contemplation of Christ crucified; he now speaks of forgiveness and cleansing, of sanctification and consequent obedience. The fountain shall be not simply opened, but shall remain open⁴. Isaiah had already prophesied of the refreshment of the Gospel.⁵ When the poor and needy seek water and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I, the Lord, will hear them, I, the God of Israel, will not forsake them. I will open rivers in high places and fountains in the midst of the valleys; here it is added, for sin and for uncleanness. There were divers⁶ symbolical washings under the law; the Levites were ⁷sprinkled with the water of purifying, lit. the water of taking away of sin: living waters⁸, put to the ashes of an heifer, were appointed as a ⁹water for (removing) defilements; a cleansing of sin¹⁰. Now, there should be one ever-open fountain for all the house of David. "11 Who that fountain is, the Lord Himself teacheth through Jeremiah, ¹²they have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters; and in the Gospel He says, ¹³If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink; and ¹⁴The water which I shall give him, is a fountain of living water, gushing up to everlasting life. This was open to the house of David; for of that kindred He took human nature. It was opened also for the dwellers of Jerusalem, for the sprinkling of holy Baptism, through which we have received remission of sins." ¹⁵That, receiving Divine and holy Baptism, we are sprinkled with the Blood of Christ to the remission of sins, who can doubt? ¹⁶Of this fountain much was foretold by Ezekiel¹⁷, that a fountain should issue forth from the temple of the Lord, and go down into the desert, and every soul, to whom it shall come, shall live; and Joel, ¹⁸A fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and water the valley of Shittim. Of this fountain Peter said to the Jews, when pricked in the heart and seeking forgiveness, ¹⁹Let every one of you be baptized in the Name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

public mention of terrible crimes (it has been observed) produces imitation of the specific form of crime. Hence it was commanded, ¹*make no mention of the name of other gods, neither let it be heard out of thy mouth.* And Joshua names it in his dying charge to Israel, ²*Be ye therefore very strong to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses—neither make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them.* Hence they changed the names of cities³, which bare idol names. David speaks of it, as part of fealty to God, ⁴*I will not take their names upon my lips.* Hosea prophesies of the times of the new covenant; ⁵*I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall be no more remembered by their name.* Isaiah, ⁶*The idols he shall utterly abolish.* Zechariah foretells their abolition with a turn of words, formed apparently on those of Hosea⁷; but slightly varied, because the worship of Baal, such a plague-spot in the time of Hosea, one, which continued until the year before the captivity⁸, was gone. He implies nothing as to his own times, whether idolatry still existed. He predicts its entire abolition in the whole compass of the enlarged Judah, i. e. of Christendom.

And also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land. False prophecy sets itself to meet a craving of human nature to know something of its future. False prophets there were, even in the time of Nehemiah⁹, and those in some number, hired to prophesy against the word of God. Our Lord warns against them. ¹⁰*Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.* ¹¹*Many false prophets shall arise and shall deceive many.* Many false prophets, S. John says, ¹²*are gone out into the world.* False prophets attended the decline of Judaism. Such was the author of the Jewish Sibylline book, prophesying the destruction of the Romans¹³, and fixing the mind of his people on temporal aggrandizement¹⁴: false prophets were suborned by the Jewish "tyrants" and encouraged the Jews in the resistance which ruined the devoted city¹⁵: false prophets have arisen in Christianity; but, like the Phrygian women who led Tertullian astray, they "went out," were cast out "from it, as not being of it." ¹⁶After that the Only-Begotten Word of God appeared to us, the dull and childish toys of idolatry perished and were utterly destroyed, and with it were taken away the strange and impious devices of the false prophets, who were full of the evil, unclean spirit, and could be readily detected as laboring under a kindred disease to the idolaters. For both had one president of impiety, Satan." Not 50 years after the Crucifixion, a heathen ¹⁷wrote his work, "on the failure of oracles." The outpouring of the Holy ¹⁸*Spirit of grace and supplication*, should sweep away ¹⁹*the unclean spirit*, (Zechariah alone anticipates the language of the New Testament²⁰) which became ²¹*a lying spirit in the mouth of the prophets* of those who sought to them.

3. His father and mother that begat him ²¹*shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live.* The prophet describes the zeal against false prophecy, with reference to the law against those who seduced to apostasy from God. ²²The nearest relations were themselves to denounce any who had secretly tried to seduce them, and themselves, as the accusers, to cast the first stone at them. ²³Such shall in those times be the reverence to God-wards, so careful shall they be of perfect probity and laudable life, that parents themselves shall be stimu-

and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. It was a wide garment, enveloping the whole frame⁶, and so, affixive to the whole body. "This was the habit of the prophets, that when they called the people to penitence, they were clothed with sackcloth."

5. And he shall say, repudiating his former claims, I am a husbandman⁸: for a man hath taught⁹ me from my youth. There was no room then for his having been a false prophet, since he had had from his youth one simple unlettered occupation, as Amos said truly of himself; ¹⁰ I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son: but I was an herdsman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit. The prophet does not approve the lie, any more than our Lord did the injustice of the unjust steward. Our Lord contrasted the wisdom in their generation of a bad man for his ends, with the unwisdom of the children of light, who took no pains to secure their God. Zechariah pictures vividly, how men would anyhow rid themselves of all suspicion of false-prophecy.

6. And one shall say unto him, What are those wounds in thy hands? The words are simple; the meaning different¹¹, according as they are united with what immediately precedes, or the main subject, Him Whom

Kim. "made me a shepherd and husbandman: Rashi, quoting Menahem, "set me to keep his flocks," ¹² לן Ezra. "made me to possess ground i.e. made me a husbandman." Tanchum "tilled his land, which his father put him in possession of by inheritance." Hunt. 206. translates הקנני by אשתרנא "bought me."

¹⁰ Am. vii. 14.

¹¹ A prevalent modern explanation has been of the self-inflicted wounds of the prophets of Baal. But 1) the idolatrous incisions have a technical name, תניור, "cut himself;" De. xiv. 1, 1 Kgs xviii. 28, Jer. xvi. 16, xlii. 5, xlvii. 6. נדרים Jer. xlviii. 37. כפה, כפות, כפים, are used of fresh unhealed wounds themselves, not of the scars. Pr. xx. 30, 1 Kgs xxii. 35, 2 Kgs viii. 29, ix. 15, Is. i. 6, xxx. 26, Mi. i. 9, Nah. iii. 10, Jer. vi. 7, x. 19, xv. 18, xxx. 12, 17. 3) Self-infliction was characteristic of the idolatrous cuttings. They were probably to appease the displeased god or goddess. The only support of it, that כאדורים is used of idolatrous, and so adulterous, objects of love, is neutralized by the fact that the metaphor of male and female is never dropped. Of 14 times in which it occurs, 11 times, in Hosea, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, it is united with the fem. pronoun, כאדור, כאדור, כאדור; 3 times in the first pers. of the city personified.

they pierced, for Whom they were to mourn, and, on their mourning, to be cleansed, and of Whom it is said in the next verse, Awake, O sword, against My Shepherd. S. Jerome and others¹ explain it of the punishment inflicted by parents. "These wounds and bruises I received, condemned by the judgment of my parents, and of those who did not hate but loved me. And so will truth prevail dissipating falsehood, that he too, who was punished for his own fault, will own that he suffered rightly." But wounds of chastisement are not inflicted on the hands, and the punishment of false prophecy was not such wounds², but death. Wounds in the hands were no punishment, which parents would inflict. They were the special punishment of the cross³, after sustaining which, One only lived. The most literal interpretation, then, of the wounds in the hands harmonizes with the piercing before, and the smiting of the Good Shepherd which follows, of Whom David too prophesied, 'They pierced My Hands and My Feet. "⁴What are those wounds o. Thy hands? How long, think you, and how and by whom will this be said to Him? For ever and ever, unceasingly, and with unspeakable admiration it will be said, both by God the Father, ⁵to Whom He was obedient unto death, the death of the Cross: it will be said also both by the holy 'angels who desire to look into Him, and by men whom He has redeemed. O great miracle, wonderful spectacle, especially in the Lord of all, to bear wounds in the midst of His Hands! And He shall say; With these I was wounded in the house of those who loved Me. O great sacrilege, sacrilegious homicide, that such wounds were inflicted in the house of those who loved. He will not say, 'with these I was wounded by those who loved Me,' but 'in the house of those who loved Me.' For they who inflicted them, loved Him not. But they were the house of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and David, and the rest like them, who loved Me, and expected Me,

Who was promised to them. Yet so to speak is not to answer the question, what are these wounds? For it is one thing to ask, what are these wounds, another to say, where they were inflicted. Having said, that they were inflicted in the house of those who loved Me, He says, what they are, the Cup which My Father hath given Me to drink. For what He subjoins, is the Voice of the Father giving the Cup. Sword, awake &c. is as though he said, Ask ye, What are these wounds? I say, 'the tokens of obedience, the signs of the Father's will and command. The Lord of hosts, God the Father hath not spared Me, His own Son, but hath given Me for you all. And He said, Awake, o sword, against My Shepherd, and against the Man cohering to Me, which is as much as, 'O Death, have thou power over My Son, My good Shepherd, the Man Who cohereth to Me, i. e. Who is joined in unity of Person with the Word Who is consubstantial with Me!' And then, as though the sword asked, how or how far shall I arise against this Thy Shepherd, he subjoins, Smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered. Hence the Shepherd Himself, when about to be smitten, spake, ⁶*All ye shall be offended because of Me this night. For it is written, I will smite the Shepherd and the sheep shall be scattered*. So then to those who say, what are those wounds in the midst of Thy hands? is appositely subjoined the Voice of the Father, saying, Awake, O sword, against My Shepherd &c. in the meaning, 'They are monuments of the Father's love, the tokens of My Obedience, because He spared not His own Son, and I became obedient to Him for you all, even unto death, and that, the death of the Cross.'

7. Awake, O sword. So Jeremiah apostrophises the sword, ⁷*O thou sword of the Lord, when wilt thou be quiet?* The prophets express what will be, by a command that it should be; ⁸*Make the heart of this people heavy*. But by this command he signifies that human malice, acting freely, could do no more than ¹ His Hand and His counsel determined before to be done. The envy and hatred of Satan, the blind fury of the Chief priests, the contempt of Herod, the guilty cowardice of Pilate, freely accomplished that Death, which God had before decreed for the salvation of the world. The meaning then is, "²the sword shall be aroused against My Shepherd, i. e. I will allow Him to be smitten by the Jews. But by the sword he designates death, persecution, wounding &c. as above, the ³sword upon his right arm, and, where the Passion of Christ is spoken of, ⁴Deliver my soul from the sword. So also, ⁵All the sinners of the people shall die by the sword," ⁶which cannot be taken literally; for many sinners perish by shipwreck, poison, drowning, fire." Amos then "⁷so spake, because many died by war, yet not all by the sword, but others by pestilence and famine, all which he includes under the sword. This smiting began, when the Lord was taken, and His sheep began to be scattered; but the prophecy which, before, was being gradually fulfilled, was fully fulfilled in His Death, and the Apostles were dispersed till the day of the Resurrection at eventide."

Against the Man, My Fellow⁷, i. e. One united by community of nature. A little before, God had spoken of Himself as priced at the thirty pieces of silver, yet as breaking the covenant which He had made with all nations for His people; as pierced through, yet as pouring the spirit of grace and supplication on those who pierced Him, that they should mourn their deed, and as, thereon, ever cleansing them from sin. As Man, God was sold, was pierced. "⁸God, in flesh, not working with aught intervening us in the prophets, but having taken to Him a Manhood connatural⁹ with Himself and made one, and through His flesh akin to us, drawing up to Him all humanity. What was the manner of the Godhead in flesh? As fire in iron, not transitively but by communication. For the fire does not dart into the iron, but remains there and communi-cates to it of its own virtue, not impaired by the communication, yet filling wholly its recipient." The bold language of the Fathers only expressed the actuality of the Incarnation. Since the Manhood was taken into God, and in Him dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and God and Man were one Christ, then was it all true language. His Body was "¹⁰the Body of God;" His flesh "¹¹the flesh of the Word;" and it was lawful to speak of "¹²the flesh of the Deity," of "¹³the Passion of the Word," "¹⁴the Passion of Christ, my God," "¹⁵the Passion of God," "¹⁶God dead and luried," "¹⁷God suffered," "¹⁸murderers of God," "¹⁹the Godhead dwelt in the flesh bodily, which is all one with saying that, being God, He had a proper body, and using this as an instrument, He became Man for our sakes, and, because of this, things proper to the flesh are said to be His, since He was in it, as hunger, thirst, suffering, fatigue and the like, of which the flesh is capable, while the works proper to the Word Himself, as raising the dead and restoring the blind, He did through His own Body," is but a continuance of the language of Zechariah, since He Who was sold, was priced, was Almighty God. Jesus being God and Man, the sufferings of His Humanity were the sufferings of God, although, as God, He could not suffer. Now, conversely, God speaks of the Shepherd Who was slain, as My Fellow, united in Nature with Himself, although not the Manhood of Jesus which suffered, but the Godhead, united with It in one Person, was Consubstantial with Himself. The name might perhaps be most nearly represented by "connatural." "²⁰When then the title is employed of the relation of an individual to God, it is clear that that individual can be no mere man, but must be one, united with God by unity of Being. The Akin of the Lord is no other than He Who said in the Gospel ²¹I and My Father are One, and Who is designated as ²²the Only-Begotten Son, Who is in the Bosom of the Father. The word,

it seems, was especially chosen, as being used in the Pentateuch, only in the laws against injuring a fellow-man. The prophet thereby gives prominence to the seeming contradiction between the command of the Lord, Awake, O sword, against My Shepherd, and those of His own law, whereby no one is to injure his fellow. He thus points out the greatness of that end, for the sake of which the Lord regards not that relation, Whose image among men He commanded to be kept holy. He speaks after the manner of men. He calls attention to the greatness of that sacrifice, whereby He ¹ spared not His own Son, but freely gave Him up for us all. The word Man, forms a sort of contrast with My Fellow. He Whom the sword is to reach must unite the Human Nature with the Divine. Jews too have seen that the words, My Fellow, imply an equality with God; only since they own not Him, Who was God and Man, they must interpret it of a false claim on the part of man², overlooking that it is given Him by God.

And I will turn My hand³ upon the little ones, doing to them as He had done to the Shepherd. So our Lord forewarned them: ⁴ If they have persecuted Me they will also persecute you; ⁵ If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me, before it hated you; ⁶ Ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake; ⁷ they will deliver you up to the councils and scourge you in the synagogues; and ye shall be brought before governors and kings for My name's sake; ⁸ they shall deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake; and to the Scribes and Pharisees, ⁹ I send unto you prophets and wise men and scribes, and some of them ye shall kill and crucify, and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues and persecute them from city to city, that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth.

The little ones¹⁰, as Jeremiah speaks of ¹¹ the least of the flock, and the Lord said, ¹² fear not, little flock, little and weak in itself, but mighty in Him and in His grace. Three centuries of persecution, alike in the Roman empire and beyond it in Persia, fulfilled the prophet's words and deepened the foundation of the Church and cemented its fabric.

8. In all the land, two parts therein shall be cut off and die. "In all the land of Israel," says a Jewish interpreter¹³,—the land, in which the Good Shepherd had been slain and the sheep scattered, that upon you, our Lord had said, may come all the righteous blood. As David punished Moab, ¹⁴ with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive; and Ezekiel prophesied, ¹⁵ A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, and with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee: and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; so now, the greater part should be destroyed, but a remnant should be saved. But the third part shall be left therein. Even so then at this present time also, S. Paul says¹⁶, there is a remnant according to the election of grace. ¹⁷ The third part only shall be saved from the common de-

² Ibn Ezra interprets it in this sense, "He prophesieth again many wars, which shall be in all the earth, at the death of Messiah ben Joseph, and the meaning of My Shepherd, is every king of the nations, whom God made to rule over the earth; and he estimates of himself that he is as God; therefore (he saith) and against the man my fellow." Kimchi adopting the interpretation, adds "i.e. who thinks himself my fellow." R. Isaac (Chizuk Emunah, Wazensel Tela Ignea Satanae p. 310) interprets the whole of the king of Ishmael, called also the king of Turkey, and ruling over Asia and Africa, under whose hand the majority of the people of Israel are in captivity. God calls him my shepherd, because He has given His people into his hand to feed them in their captivity. He calls him "the man my fellow and companion," because in the pride and greatness of his heart he accounteth himself like God, like that, Behold man is become like one of us (Gen. iii.). Abenabiel gives, as the one of three interpretations which he prefers, a modification of R. Isaac's, explaining the words "my shepherd" of Mohammed, and directing his interpretation of "the man, my fellow" against our Lord. "The words, 'the man my fellow' are spoken of Jesus the Nazarene, for according to the sentiment of the children of Edom and their faith, he was the Son of God, and of the same substance, and therefore he is called according to their words, 'The man, my fellow.' Rashi alone has "My shepherd, whom I set over the sheep of my captivity, and the man my fellow whom I associated with myself, to keep my sheep, even as I did;" but "I smite the shepherd," he explains "the wicked king of Moab," or "king of the border of wickedness" [i.e. Edom] or in one MS. "the wicked Roman king, who shepherdeth my flock." R. Tanchum has, "that they think in themselves on account of my setting them over the creation that they are my administrators in the kingdom and government." The Heb. Ar. [Hunt. 206] "against the man, my companion" (עַל אֲרֹנִי כְאֹחִי).

³ Such is the force of הַשִּׁב עַל Am. i. 9, turning the hand against Ekron, or against the other cities of Philistia; in Is. i. 25, upon Judah, and thoroughly cleansing her by affliction; Ezek. xxxviii. 12, of Gog against the restored Israel; Ps. lxxxvi. 16 of God's turning upon its adversaries, His Hand which was now upon her [all]. God, Whom Alone above all things, I long for, love, worship."

This promise is oftentimes renewed through the prophets, oftentimes fulfilled in Christ, whenever the Church is recalled from listlessness by fiery trials, and through them her children are restored to deeper devotedness and closer union with God.

XIV. "The Jews," S. Jerome says, "say that these things are to be fulfilled under Gog; others that they were accomplished in part, in the times of the Macedonians, Egyptians, and other nations. We, leaving the truth of the time to the judgment of the Lord, would explain what is written." Eusebius¹ points out that it cannot be said to have been fulfilled under Antiochus Epiphanes; "If any think that these things are, then let him consider again and again, whether he can refer the rest of the prophecy also to the times of Antiochus; as, that ² the feet of the Lord stood on the mount of Olives, that ³ the Lord in that day, became king over the whole earth; and so, as to the rest of the prophecy." And although more was fulfilled in the last siege by the Romans, still those who would explain it solely of this, are obliged to mingle explanations partly literal, as that Jerusalem should be the earthly Jerusalem, which was destroyed, partly metaphorical, as to the mount of Olives, its division into two parts &c. It seems then probable that, like the kindred prophecy of Joel⁴, it relates chiefly to the time of the end, and that as our Lord unites the destruction of Jerusalem with His Coming in the Day of Judgment, so here are united that first destruction with the last rebellion of man, in the times of Anti-Christ. Since then much or most may be yet future, it seems safer, as S. Jerome suggests, to explain the Prophet's symbolic language, leaving the times of the fulfillment to Him, in Whose hands they are.

shall be Judge, and no longer leave man to fulfill his own will, and despise God's; in which His glory and holiness and the righteousness of all His ways shall be revealed.

And thy spoil shall be in the midst of thee. "How great will the strait be, that the spoils should be divided in the midst of her. It often happens that what, by a sudden assault, is plundered in the city, is divided in the field or in solitude, lest the enemy should come upon them. But now there will be such a heavy weight of ills, such will be the security of conquest, that the spoils shall be divided in the midst of the city."

2. I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle. This is a feature which belongs to the end. It had been dwelt upon by Joel²; Ezekiel spoke of the ³many nations which should come under Gog. S. John foretells of an universal strife at the end, when ⁴The spirits of devils, working miracles, go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty; and ⁵Satan shall be loosed out of his prison and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints round about, and the beloved city. Since no creature can do aught but what God wills, and, in his phrensy against God's people, is but His instrument, ⁶to try them and to purge and to make white to the time of the end; and the strength of body or intellect, which is abused against His law, He continuously in the order of nature supplies, God may be said to do what Satan does against Him. Satan, in his blind fury, crowns martyrs, fills the thrones of heaven, works, against his will, the All-wise Will of God.

And the houses rifled, and the women &c. The horrors of heathen war repeat themselves through men's ever-recurring passions. What was foretold as to Babylon is repeated in the same words as to the Church of God. Seemingly all things come alike to all: ⁷there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked;

to the good and to the clean and to the unclean: to him that sacrificeth and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner. The outward event is the same, the hidden part is known to God Alone. And the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city, unlike the lot of the earthly Jerusalem, in the destruction both by Nebuchadnezzar (which was past) and the Romans⁸. At the first, ⁹Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, carried away the rest of the people left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, so that Jeremiah mourned over it, ¹⁰Because of the mountain of Zion which is desolate, foxes walk [habitually] upon it. The Romans ¹¹effaced the city." Now a remnant is not cut off, because ¹²for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened; for our Lord had said ¹³that the gates of hell should not prevail against His Church.

3. The Lord shall go forth and shall fight, ¹⁴is to be taken like that in Habakkuk, ¹⁵Thou wentest forth for the salvation of Thy people, for salvation with Thine Anointed, and in Micah, ¹⁶For behold, the Lord cometh forth out of His place, and will come down and will tread upon the high places of the earth, and the mountains shall be molten under Him, and the valleys shall be cleft; and Isaiah also, ¹⁷The Lord shall go forth as a mighty man; He shall stir up jealousy like a man of war; He shall cry; He shall prevail over His enemies. "God is said to go forth, when by some wondrous deed He declares His Presence—His Deity is, as it were, laid up, so long as He holds Himself in, and does not by any token shew His power. But He goes forth, and bursts forth, when He exercises some judgment, and worketh some new work, which striketh terror." God then will go forth out of His place, when He is constrained to break through His quietness and gentleness and clemency, for the amendment of sinners. battle, when He overwhelmed Pharaoh in the Red sea; and fought for Israel." The Lord shall fight for you, became the watchword of Moses¹ and the warrior Joshua in his old age², after his life's experience³, and Nehemiah⁴. Be not afraid by reason of this great multitude, said Jahaziel, son of Zachariah⁵, when the Spirit of the Lord came upon him; for the battle is not your's, but God's.

As He fought in the day of battle. "6 All wars are so disposed by the power of God, that every victory is to be referred to His counsel and will. But this is not seen so clearly, when men, elate and confident, try to transfer to themselves all or the greater part of the glory of war. Then may the war be eminently said to be the Lord's, when no one drew sword, as it is written, "The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace. Of all God's wars, in which human insolence could claim no part of the glory, none was more wondrous than that, in which Pharaoh and his army were sunk in the deep. The Lord, said Moses⁷, is a man of war: the Lord is His Name. That day of battle was the image of one much greater. In that, Pharaoh's army was sunk in the deep; in this, the power of evil, in Hell: in that, what could in some measure be conquered by human strength, was subdued; in this, a tyranny unconquerable; in that, a short-lived liberty was set up; the liberty brought by Christ through subdual of the enemy, is eternal. As then the image yields to the truth, earthly goods to heavenly, things perishable to eternal, so the glory of that ancient victory sinks to nothing under the greatness of the latter."

4 And His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, "over against Jerusalem to the East, wherein riseth the Sun of Righteousness." The Mount of Olives is the central eminence of a line of hills, of rather more than a mile in length, overhanging the city, from which it is separated only by the narrow bed of the valley of the brook Cedron. It rises 187 feet above Mount Zion, 295 feet above Mount Moriah, 443 feet above Gethsemane, and lies between the city and the wilderness toward the dead sea: around its Northern side, wound the road to Bethany and the Jordan⁸. There, probably, David worshiped¹⁰; his son, in his decay, profaned it¹¹; Josiah desecrated his desecrations¹²; there¹³ upon the mountain, which is on the East side of the city, the glory of the Lord stood, when it had gone up from the midst of the city; it united the greatest glory of the Lord on earth, His Ascension, with its deepest sorrow, in Gethsemane. Since the Angel said, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven," the old traditional opinion is not improbable, that our Lord shall come again to judge the earth, where He left the earth, near the place of His Agony and Crucifixion for us. So shall the Feet of God literally stand upon the Mount of Olives. Else it may be that "the Feet of the uncircumscribed and simple God are to be understood not materially, but that the loving and fixed assistance of His power is expressed by that name."

Which is true, or whether, according to an old opinion, the last act of Anti-Christ shall be an attempt to imitate the Ascension of Christ (as the first Anti-Christ Simon Magus was said to have met his death in some attempt to fly¹⁴) and be destroyed by His Coming there, the event must shew.

And the Mount of Olives shall cleave [be cleft] in [from] the midst thereof toward the East and toward the West, i. e. the cleft shall be East and West, so as to form a very great valley through it—from Jerusalem toward the Jordan Eastward; and this shall be, in that half of the mountain shall remove Northward, and half thereof Southward. If this be literal, it is to form an actual way of escape from Jerusalem; if figurative, it symbolizes how that which would be the greatest hindrance to escape, the mountain which was higher than the city, blocking, as it were, the way, should itself afford the way of escape; as Zechariah speaks, "O great mountain, before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain; and Isaiah, "Every valley shall be ex-

5. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains, rather, along ¹the valley of My mountains² viz. of those mountains, which God had just formed by dividing the mount of Olives. For the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal, i. e. Azel, the same word which enters into Beth-Azel of Micah, where the allusion probably is to its firm-rootedness. It is more probable that the name of a place should have been chosen with an allusive meaning, as in Micah, than that an unusual appellative should have been chosen to express a very common meaning. S. Cyril had heard of it as the name of a village at the extremity of the mountain³. Else it might very probably have been destroyed in the destructive Roman wars. The Roman camp in the last siege must have been very near it⁴. The destruction of villages, after the frantic revolt under Bar-Chocab, was enormous⁵.

Yea, ye shall flee like as ye fled from before the earthquake. An earthquake in the time of Uziah, whose memory survived the captivity to the time of Zechariah, nearly two centuries, must have been very terrible, but no historical account remains of it, Josephus having apparently described the past earthquake in the language which Zechariah uses of the future⁶. Such an earthquake is the more remarkable a visitation in Jerusalem, because it was out of the line of earthquakes. These were to the North and East of Palestine: within it, they were almost unknown⁷. Interpositions of God even in man's favor, are full of awe and terror. They are tokens of the presence of the All-Holy among the unholy. Fear was an accompaniment of special miracles in the Gospel, not only among the poor Gadarenes⁸, or the people⁹, but even the Apostles¹⁰; apart from the effect of the sight of Angels on us who are in the flesh¹¹. It is then quite compatible, that the valley so formed should be the means of deliverance, and yet an occasion of terror to those delivered through it. The escape of the Christians in Jerusalem to Pella, during the break of the siege, after the withdrawal of Cestius Gallus was a slight image of this deliverance.

And the Lord thy God shall come, and all the saints with Thee, O God. The prophet, having spoken of God as my God, turns suddenly to speak to Him, as present. ¹²This is manifestly said of the second Coming of the Saviour, of which John too in his Apocalypse says, ¹³Behold He shall come with the clouds, and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him. And the Lord Himself in the Gospel declareth, that ¹⁴the Son of Man shall come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. He shall come with the clouds, i. e. with the Angels, who are ministering spirits and are sent for different offices, and with the Prophets and Apostles. ¹⁵Whenever Scripture says that the saints and angels come with Christ, it is always speaking of His second Coming, as in that, ¹⁶When the Son of Man shall come in His glory and all His holy Angels with Him, and in the Epistle of Jude ¹⁷Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of His saints, to execute judgment."

This is evermore the description of the Day of Judgment, that, in the presence of God Who is Light, all earthly light shall grow pale. So Joel had said, ⁴ The sun and moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining. And Isaiah⁵ The moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before His ancients gloriously; and, ⁶ Behold the day of the Lord cometh,—The stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light: the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. All know well our Lord's words⁷. S. John, like Zechariah, unites the failure of the heavenly light⁸ with a great earthquake, and the sun became as sackcloth of hair: and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell upon the earth.

7. And it shall be one day: it shall be known unto the Lord: not day, and not night; and at the eventide it shall be light. One special day; one, unlike all beside; known unto God, and to Him Alone. For God Alone knows the day of the consummation of all things, as He saith, ⁹ Of that day and that hour knoweth no one, neither the angels in Heaven, nor the Son, (s^r us to reveal it) but the Father only. Neither wholly day, because overclouded with darkness; nor wholly night, for the streaks of light burst through the darkness chequered of both; but in eventide, when all seems ready to sink into the thickest night, there shall be light. Divine light always breaks in, when all seems darkness; but then the chequered condition of our mortality comes to an end, then comes the morning, which has no evening; the light which has no setting; "perpetual light, brightness infinite;" when¹⁰ the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold; and¹¹ the glory of God doth lighten the eternal city, and the Lamb is the light thereof; and¹² in Thy light we shall see light. ¹³ Christ shall be to us eternal light, a long perpetual day."

And it shall be, that living waters. ¹⁴ This is what is said in the prophecy of Joel, ¹⁵ A fountain shall come forth from the house of the Lord; and in that of Ezekiel, ¹⁶ And behold there ran out waters." Zechariah leaves to the mind to supply what the former prophets had said of the fertilizing life-giving character of those waters. He adds that they should pervade the whole land, West as well as East; to the former, rather the Eastern sea¹⁷, into which they would by nature flow, and toward the hinder, i. e. the Western sea, the Mediterranean, which natural waters could not reach. This their flow, he adds, should be perpetual. ¹⁸ These streams shall not

³ קרית 'קרית' as Job xxxi. 26. "the moon, walking in beauty." קפאון "shall contract themselves," as it is said in Ex. xv. 8. קפאון תהמות, "the depths (lit.) conglobated in the heart of the sea." According to the Kri, קפאון, the meaning of יקרית is mere conjecture. Kimchi (Lex.) Ibn Ezra Rashi suppose it to be used of "clear light," as contrasted with cloudy, expressed by קפאון, so that the meaning of the whole should be the same as that of v. 7. Our version follows this. Abulwalid and Parehon explain it of heavy thick clouds, and make the words synonymous. Tanchum mentions, The LXX seem further to have read וקרית, και, but it is not supported by any MS. or any other version: for the "but" in Symm.

Chald. Syr. may only express the contrast of the sentences; "there shall not be light;—and—" as Asyndeton. The LXX, however, "There shall not be light and cold and ice," could only mean to deny the presence of any of them, not (as Ewald) "there shall be no alternation of light with cold and ice." Proph. ii. 62. Light too and cold are not alternatives. The Kri וקרית, as always, occurs in some MSS., Spanish of De Rossi, 2 at first, 15 old editions. The Jewish authorities (as far as I know) including Abulwalid Tanchum Parehon &c., take no notice of the Kethibh.

dry up and their waters shall not fail ¹; "therefore drought shall not lessen them, nor winter-cold bind them. "1 From Jerusalem as from a fountain shall stream forth living waters of wisdom and grace to all nations."

"2 Again he tells us, under a figure, that exceeding great and large shall be that outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the saints, especially when they shall be removed to that holy eternal life in the world to come. For now through faith in Christ we are enriched, as with an earnest, with the first-fruits of the Holy Spirit. But after the Resurrection, sin being wholly taken away, the Holy Spirit will be in us, not as an earnest or in a measure; but richly bounteously and perfectly shall we enjoy the grace through Christ. He calleth, then, living water, the Spirit which, he says, will come forth from the Jerusalem which is from above.—But that the holy Scripture is wont to liken the Divine Spirit to water, the Giver thereof, the Son, accredits, saying ³, he that believeth on Me, as the Scripture hath said, Out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This the Evangelist explains, ⁴ This spake He of the Spirit, which they who believe in Him should receive. Since then the Spirit is life-giving, rightly does he liken it to that, which is life-giving to the frame."

9. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth. Such should be the influence of the living water, i. e. of the Spirit of God. God Who has ever reigned and will reign, ⁵ a great King over all the earth, shall be owned by His creatures, as what He is.

There shall be one Lord, more exactly, The Lord shall be One, and His Name One. He had before prophesied, ⁶ I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land. The Church being thus cleansed, no other lord or object of wor-

"7 Since in this life we contemplate God in His effects, in which His whole perfection shineth not forth, now we know Him obscurely and imperfectly, His perfections being in divers diversely represented. In our home we shall see Him as He is, face to Face, through His Essence. Therefore then He will be represented by one name, as He shall be beheld by one gaze."

10. All the land shall be turned as a plain from Rimmon to Gebah. "8 All the land, which is round about Jerusalem, which is now mountains, as is said, ⁹ The mountains are round about Jerusalem, shall be level as a plain, but Jerusalem itself shall be exalted ¹⁰, and high above all the earth." The dignity of the Church, as ¹¹ a city set upon a hill, which cannot be hid, is symbolized here by the sinking of all around and its own uprising; as in Micah and Isaiah, ¹² The mountain of the Lord's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills. Gebah, lit. hill, now, Jeva, was a frontier-garrison, held once by the Philistines ¹³, and fortified by Asa ¹⁴, in the northern boundary of Benjamin ¹⁵, together with Michmash ¹⁶ (now Mikhmas), commanding an important pass, by which Jerusalem was approached ¹⁷. Rimmon, south of Jerusalem is mentioned in Joshua among the southern towns of Judah ¹⁸, given to Simeon ¹⁹. Both survived the Captivity ²⁰. They mark then the N. and S. of the kingdom of Judah, a long mountain chain, which is pictured as sinking down into a plain, that Jerusalem alone might be exalted.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, that ^a a great tumult from the LORD shall be among

From Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate. Benjamin's gate¹ must obviously be a gate to the North, and doubtless the same as the gate of Ephraim², the way to Ephraim lying through Benjamin. This too has probably reference to the prophecy of Jeremiah, that³ the city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner. ⁴ Jehoash, king of Israel, brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim to the corner-gate, four hundred cubits, after the war with Amaziah. Zechariah seems to speak of Jerusalem, as it existed in his time. For the tower of Hananeel⁵ still existed ; the first gate was probably destroyed, since he speaks not of it, but of its place ; the gate of Benjamin and the corner-gate probably still existed, since Nehemiah⁶ mentions the building of the sheep-gate, the fish-gate, the old gate, or gate of the old city, the valley-gate, the dung-gate, the gate of the fountain ; but not these.

11. And they shall dwell in it, in peace, going forth from it, neither into captivity, nor in flight⁷ ; for God should exempt from curse the city which He had chosen, against which the gates of hell shall not prevail, and He says of the heavenly Jerusalem, ⁸ there shall be no more curse.

12. Again, upon the restoration of His people follows the destruction of His enemies. It shall, first and chiefly, be God's doing, not man's. This shall be the plague. The word is used of direct infliction by pestilence, wherewith the Lord shall smite⁹ all the people [peoples] that fought against Jerusalem. The awful description is of living corpses. ¹⁰ The enemies of Jerusalem shall waste, not with fever or disease, but by a plague from God, so that, being sound, standing, living, in well-being, they should waste and consume away," as Isaiah speaks of the ¹¹ carcases of the men, that have transgressed against Me ; for their worm shall not die—and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

Their flesh shall consume away, rather, wasting away the flesh of each one. It is the act of God, in His individual justice to each one of all those multitudes gathered against Him. One by one, their eyes, of which they said, ¹² let our eye look on Zion, i. e. with joy at its desolation, shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue, wherewith they blasphemed God¹³, shall consume away in their mouths. Appalling, horrible, picture! standing on their feet, yet their flesh mouldering away as in a grave-yard, their sightless balls decaying in their holes, the tongue putrefying in their mouth, a disgust to themselves and to others! Yet what, compared to the horrible inward decay of sin, whereby men ¹⁴ have a name that they live and are dead? ¹⁵ Let us read Ecclesiastical histories, what Valerian, Decius, Diocletian, Maximian, what the savages of all, Maximin, and lately Julian suffered, and then we shall prove by deeds, that the truth of prophecy was fulfilled in the letter also."

God said He would send upon the Canaanites before Israel¹, or on Israel itself, if disobedient²; or which fell on the Philistines after Jonathan's capture of the garrison at Michmash, when every man's sword was against his fellow. There is no real unity, except in God; elsewhere, since each seeks his own, all must be impregnated with mutual suspicion, ready at any moment to be fanned into a flame; as when, at the blowing of Gideon's trumpets, the Lord set every man's sword against his fellow; or when, at Jehoshaphat's prayer³, the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of Mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy; and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy another.

And they shall lay hold, every one on the hand of his neighbor. Every one shall be every one's foe. Each shall, in this tumultuous throng, grasp the other's hand, mastering him powerfully⁴. And his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor, as was prophesied of Ishmael, his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him.

14. And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem. This seems more probable than the alternative rendering of the E. M., "against." For Judah is united with Jerusalem as one, in the same context⁵; and, if it had shared with the heathen, it must also have shared their lot. It is Judah itself, not "a remnant of Judah," as it is every one that is left of all the nations, which is thus united to Jerusalem:

it is that same Judah, as a whole, of which it is said, it shall fight. Nor is anything spoken of "conversion," which is said of those left from the heathen nations, who had fought against her. Yet for Judah to have joined an exterminating Heathen war against Jerusalem, even though constrained, had, like the constrained sacrifices to Heathen gods, been apostasy. But there is not even a hint that, as Jonathan apologetically paraphrases¹¹, they were "constrained." The war is to be Judah's free act: Judah also shall fight. Again, those gathered against Jerusalem, and their warfare against it, had been described at the outset, as all nations: here the subject is not the gathering or fighting, but the overthrow. Nor is there any decisive contrary idiom; for, although when used of people, it always means "fight against," yet, of place, it as often, means "fight in"¹². Probably then the Prophet means, that not only should God fight for His people, but that Judah also should do its part, as S. Paul says, 14 We, then, as workers together with Him; and, 15 we are laborers together with God; and, 16 I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me; or, 17 work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure. God so doth all things in the Church, for the conversion of the heathen, and for single souls, as to wait for the coöperation of His creature. 18 God made thee without thee; He doth not justify thee without thee."

And the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered. Whatever the world had taken in their war against the Church shall be abundantly repaid. All the heathen had combined to plunder Jerusalem¹; the wealth of all the heathen shall be gathered to requite them. "2 As Isaiah says, The nations, converted to Christ, brought all their wealth to the Church, whence he congratulates the Church, saying, "3 Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breasts of kings—For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver; under which he typically understands, "4 wisdom, philosophy, eloquence, learning, and all the other arts and sciences, liberal and mechanical, wherewith the heathen shall be adorned, who are converted to the faith. So shall the gifts of nature be perfected by the gifts of grace, and they shall defend the Church who erstwhile attacked it."

15. And so shall be the plague of the Lord &c. "4 So, when God sendeth the plague, all the irrational animals of Anti-Christ and his satellites shall perish, as the aforesaid men, who used them, perished. For, for the sins of men, God, to their greater confusion, sometimes slays their beasts, sometimes also for their loving correction. "5 The imagery is from the Mosaic law of the ban. If a whole city became guilty of idolatry, not the inhabitants only, but the beasts were to be destroyed⁶, so that here, in miniature, should be repeated the relation of the irrational to the rational part of the creation, according to which, for the sins of men, the creature is, against its will, made subject to rarity. Analogous is it also, that on the offence of Achan⁷, beside him and his children, his oxen, asses and sheep were [stoned and] burned with him."

Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled. And S. Paul, ⁹ Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles shall be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved. Hitherto prophets had spoken of a ¹⁰ remnant of Jacob, who should return to the mighty God, and should be saved; now, upon this universal rebellion of the heathen. He foretells the conversion of a remnant of the heathen also.

Shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts. There is a harmony between the rebellion and the repentance. The converted shall go to worship God there, where they had striven to exterminate His worshippers. The prophet could only speak of the Gospel under the image of the law. The Feast of Tabernacles has its counterpart, not, like the Pascha or the Pentecost, in any single feast, but in the whole life of the Gospel. It was a thanksgiving for past deliverance; it was a picture of their pilgrim-life from the passage of the Red sea, until the parting of the Jordan opened to them the entrance to their temporary rest in Canaan¹¹. "12 In that vast, wide, terrible wilderness, where was no village, house, town, cave, it made itself tents, wherein to sojourn with wives and children, avoiding by day the burning sun, by night damp and cold and hurt from dew; and it was ¹³ a statute forever in their generations; ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all, that are Israelites born, shall dwell in booths, that your generations may know, that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt. "14 Much more truly do Christians keep the feast of tabernacles, not once in the year only, but continually, unceasingly. This is, what S. Peter admonisheth, ¹⁵ Dear beloved, I beseech you, as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts. And S. Paul often teacheth that we, like Abraham, are strangers on earth, but ¹⁶ citizens of heaven with the saints, and of the household of God. Faith, he says, ¹⁷ is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." "1 As long as we are in progress, in the course and militant, we dwell in tabernacles, striving with all our mind to pass from the tabernacles to the firm and lasting dwelling-place of the house of God. Whence also holy David said, "I am a stranger with Thee and a sojourner, as all my fathers were. So speaketh he, who is still in Egypt and yet placed in the world. But he who goeth forth out of Egypt, and entereth a desert from vices, holdeth his way and says in the Psalm, "I will pass through to the place of the tabernacle of the Wonderful unto the house of God. Whence also he says elsewhere, "How amiable are Thy dwellings. Thou Lord of hosts; my soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; and a little after, "Blessed are they who dwell in thy house, they shall be always praising Thee. "6 The voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous. "1 One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord and to enquire in His temple. Whoso dwelleth in such tabernacles, and hastes to go from the tabernacles to the court, and from the court to the house, and from the house to the temple of the Lord, ought to celebrate the feast of Tabernacles &c." It symbolizes how, "in the New Testament, Christians, being delivered through Christ from the slavery to sin and satan, and sojourning in this vale of misery, by making progress in virtues go up to the home of the heavenly paradise, the door of glory being open by the merit of the Lord's Passion, and so the faithful of Christ celebrate the feast of tabernacles; and, after the destruction of Anti-Christ, they will celebrate it the more devoutly, as there will then be among them a fuller fervor of faith."

Upon them there shall be no rain. Rain was the most essential of God's temporal gifts for the temporal well-being of His people. Moses marked out this, as his people were entering on the promised land, with recent memory of Egypt's independence of rain in Egypt itself, and that this gift depended on obedience. "11 The land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs: but a land of hills and valleys,—it drinketh water of the rain of heaven; a land which the Lord thy God cureth for; the eyes of the Lord are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year. And it shall be, if ye shall hearken diligently unto My commandments—I will give you the rain of your land in its season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn and thy wine and thine oil. And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full. But the threat on disobedience corresponded therewith. "12 Take heed to yourselves, Moses continues, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside and serve other gods—and the Lord's wrath be kindled against you, and He shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit, and ye perish quickly from off the good land, which the Lord giveth you; and, "13 Thy heaven, that is over thee, shall be brass, and the earth, that is under thee, shall be iron; the Lord shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust. Amos speaks of the withdrawal of rain as one of God's chastisements "14: the distress in the time of Ahab is pictured in the history of the woman of Sarepta "15, and Ahab's directions to Obadiah "16. But it is also the symbol of spiritual blessings; both are united by Hosea "17 and Joel "18 as Joel and Amos also speak of spiritual blessings exclusively under the figure of temporal abundance "19. In Isaiah it is simply a symbol, "20 Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness; let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together.

and come not, that have no rain; rather, and there shall not be¹. It may be that the prophet chose this elliptical form, as well knowing that the symbol did not hold as to Egypt, which, however it ultimately depended on the equatorial rains which over-filled the lakes which supply the Nile, did not need that fine arrangement of the rains of Autumn and Spring which were essential to the fruitfulness of Palestine. The omission leaves room for the somewhat prosaic supply of Jonathan, "The Nile shall not ascend to them." More probably the words are left undefined with a purposed abruptness, there shall not be upon them, viz. whatever they need: the omission of the symbol in these two verses might the more suggest, that it is a symbol only. Egypt, the ancient oppressor of Israel, is united with Judah as one, in the same worship of God, as Isaiah had said, ²*In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria*; and since it is united in the duty, so also in the punishment for despising it.

³"Let not Egypt be proud, that it is watered by the Nile, as if it needed no rain: i. e. let no one be secure in this life. For though we stand by faith, yet may we fall. For although bedewed by the efflux of Divine grace, and filled with its richness, yet if we give not thanks continually for such great gifts, God will count us as the rest, to whom such copious goodness never came. The safety of all then lies in this, that while we are in these tabernacles, we cherish the Divine benefits, and unceasingly praise the Lord, Who hath heaped such benefits upon us."

⁴"Under the one nation of the Egyptians, he understands those who are greatly deceived, and whose idolatry most unreasonably, to whom it will be a grave inevitable judgment, the pledge of destruction, that they despise the acceptable grace of salvation through Christ. For they are murderers of their own souls, if, when they could lay hold of eternal life and the Divine gentleness, open to all who will choose it and put off the burden of sin, they die in their errors; the stain and pollution from transgression and error uncleansed, although the Divine light illumined all around and called those in darkness to receive sight. Of each of these I would say, ⁵*Better is an untimely birth than he; for he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.* ⁶*Good had it been for them, if they had never been born, is the Saviour's word.* That this is not said of the Egyptians only, but shall come true of all nations, who shall altogether be punished, if they are reckless of the salvation through Christ and honor not His festival, he will establish in these words;

19. This shall be the sin of Egypt and the sin of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. For before the coming of the Saviour, good perhaps had been in part the excuse of the heathen, that they had been called by none. For no one had preached unto them. Wherefore the Saviour also, pointing out this in the Gospel parables, said, ⁷*the laborers, called at the eleventh hour, said, No man hath hired us.* But when Christ cast His light upon us, ⁸*bound the strong man, removed from his perverseness those subject to him, justified by faith those who came to Him, laid down His life for the life of all, they will find no sufficient excuse who admit not so reverend a grace.* It will be true of the heathen too, if Christ said of them, ⁹*If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloke for their sin.*"

The prophet says sin, not punishment¹⁰, for sin includes the punishment, which is its

¹ The E. V., following Kim., takes עֲלֵיהֶם as a subordinate clause, "and there is not upon them," viz. rain at any time; but it is unnatural that, in two consecutive verses, the words should be taken in such divergent senses. The omission of אֵלָּא by the LXX., followed so far (as so often) by the Pesh., is supported only by 4 Kenn. MSS., against those in S. Jerome's time, and Symm. Theod. Jon., and is evidently a makeshift, followed by Ewald.

¹⁰ The E. V. follows Kim. in rendering "punishment." Ges. combines the two in his rendering of עָוֹן, n. 2 "culpam sustinuit," not in his "culpam pœnas dedit." The rendering "shall be guilty" unites sin and punishment in his instances, Ps. xxxiv. 22, 23, Is. xxiv. 6, Jer. ii. 3, Hos. x. 2, [E. V., in the same sense, "shall be found faulty"], xiv. 1 [xiii. 16 Eng.] Pr. xxx. 10, ["be found guilty," E. V.] So also in נִשְׁפָּטָא Lam. iii. 39, נִשְׁפָּטָא Ib. iv. 6. When the Lord said, It shall be more tolerable in the day of judgment for Sodom and Gomorrah than for that city, He meant, that both guilt and punishment would be greater. In Is. v. 18, נִשְׁפָּטָא, and, Ib. xi. 2, נִשְׁפָּטָא is "sin." So also עָוֹן Is. v. 18, Ps. xxxi. 11.

due, and which it entails: it does not express the punishment, apart from the sin. It was the sin which comprised and involved all other sin, the refusal to worship God as He had revealed Himself, and to turn to Him. It was to say, ¹ We will not have Him to reign over us.

20. In that day there shall be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord. He does not say only, that they should be consecrated to God, as Isaiah says of Tyre, ² Her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord; he says that, the bells of the horses, things simply secular, should bear the same inscription as the plate on the high priest's forehead. Perhaps the comparison was suggested by the bells on the high priest's dress³; not the lamina only on his forehead, but bells (not as his, which were part of his sacred dress), bells, altogether secular, should be inscribed with the self-same title, whereby he himself was dedicated to God.

Holiness to the Lord. He does not bring down what is sacred to a level with common things, but he uplifts ordinary things, that they too should be sacred, as S. Paul says, ⁴ whether ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

And the pots of the Lord's house shall be like bowls before the altar. The pots are mentioned, together with other vessels of the Lord's house⁵, but not in regard to any sacred use. They were used, with other vessels, for dressing the victims⁶ for the partakers of the sacrifices. These were to be sacred, like those made for the most sacred use of all, *the bowls for sprinkling*⁷, whence that sacrificial blood was taken, which was to make the typical atonement.

21. And every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness to the Lord. Everything is to be advanced in holiness. All the common utensils everywhere in the people of God shall not only be holy, but holiness, and capa-

And there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of hosts. The actual Canaanite had long since ceased to be; the Gibeonites, the last remnant of them, had been absorbed among the people of God. But all Israel were not of Israel. Isaiah had called its princes and people, ⁸ rulers of Sodom, people of Gomorrah. Ezekiel had said, ⁹ Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem; Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother a Hittite. Hosea used at least the term of two-fold meaning, ¹⁰ Canaan, in whose hands are the balances of deceit; and Zephaniah, ¹¹ All the people of Canaan are destroyed. After the time of the Canon, Daniel is introduced saying, ¹² O thou seed of Canaan and not of Judah. Ezekiel had spoken of ungodly priests, not only as uncircumcised in heart (according to the language of Deuteronomy¹³), but uncircumcised in flesh also, altogether alien from the people of God¹⁴. The prophet then speaks, as Isaiah, ¹⁵ It shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it, and Joel, ¹⁶ then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more. This shall have its full fulfillment in the time of the end. ¹⁷ There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or a lie; and, without are dogs and sorcerers and whoremongers and murderers and idolaters, and whatsoever loveth and maketh a lie.

¹⁸ Although born of the blood of Israel, those of old eagerly imitated the alien Canaanites. But after that the Only-Begotten Word of God came among us, and, having justified by faith, sealed with the Holy Spirit, those who came to His grace, our mind hath been steadfast, unshaken, fixed in piety. Nor will any one persuade those who are sanctified, to honor any other god
